I believe it is always right to take our needs for healing to God in prayer. However, I also believe that there are at least two things we need to recognize when we do that.

The first is that we need to really desire healing. We may think that the very fact that we pray about it means that we want to be healed, but that is not always true.

If there has been a need in our life for quite a while, we may be "used to it" and our true feelings may question what it would be like to be without it (that is, to be healed). If you look at the story in John 5 of the pool of Bethesda and the man who had been crippled for 38 years, you will see that Jesus says to him, "What do you want me to do for you?" In both of these accounts it was not that Jesus did not know the need but that he wanted the person to offer up that need in true obedience, humility and faith.

The second thing we need to recognize is that it may hurt to be healed and we must be willing to endure the short term pain for the benefit of the long term healing.

Let me share with you an illustration of that principle. When our daughter, Lori, was celebrating her fifth birthday we took her to a park with a hemispherical jungle gym.

As sometimes happens when two parents are out with two children, we were both watching our son and neither one of us was watching Lori. She decided she was big enough to climb the jungle gym.

She got near the top (which was about six feet off the sand) but couldn't figure out how to climb down so she let go. She landed on her face and drove her top teeth through her bottom lip. She was bleeding profusely but we were right across the street from a hospital so we took her there.

The staff went to rinse out all the sand that had gotten into the cut but Lori was putting up a mighty struggle because it hurt. They finally got the wound cleansed and stitched, but there was a lot of weeping and gnashing of teeth, so to speak. However, if they had left that dirt in the cut, then it might have gotten infected or it might not have healed as well as it could because of the presence of the grains of sand. It hurt Lori to have that sand washed out, but it worked to her good and her healing.

God wants to do those things for us that are best in the long run but it is right and good for us to cooperate with the process. God is not a master magician that waves a wand over us and zaps us against our will. He is a loving Father who works things to our good in the context of our relationship with Him — a relationship that is entered into by submitting our life to Jesus as Savior and Lord and a relationship that is maintained by openness and obedience to the indwelling Holy Spirit.

ulcerative colitis, heart disease and asthma. Moms have a reduced incidence of anemia, osteoporosis, breast and ovarian cancers and fewer days missed at work because of sick children — reduced 27 percent. The environmental benefits include a decrease in health care costs and breast-milk is free without bottles or waste from packaging. The truth is formula feeding has risks and should be considered in extreme cases only.

What can we do as a community? Support your breast-feeding sisters, friends, daughters and employees. Give words of encouragement and support when you see someone breast-feeding in public. Offer employees appropriate and adequate places to pump breast-milk. Create policies in the workplace that support a mom's breast-feeding for 12 months or longer. Encourage your pediatrician, nurse midwife, obstetrician or family health care provider to get educated or certified as a lactation consultant and stay current or refer lactation issues to lactation specialized providers. Choose providers that support your choices.

Northern Michigan Hospital had a display and breast-feeding information available all week in the cafeteria. There are also a handful of lactation consultants in the area.

To utilize their services to help troubleshoot breast-feeding problems, answer questions and get an early start and maintain long-term breast-feeding call NMH childbirth, Charlevoix Area Hospital OB department or WomenCare Northern Michigan Midwifery. You can also utilize your local La Leche League for information and support.

Editor:

This letter is intended to salute the Charlevoix area golfers and Charlevoix County Junior Golf Association Board and Director, Dean Davenport, the teaching staff and volunteer mentors. This summer we were awarded scholarships to attend a week of golf camp at the renowned Ferris State University Golf Academy. We all agreed it was a terrific experience and we learned a lot about golf and about ourselves while away from home for nearly a week.

We all have been enrolled in the summer Junior Golf program for several years and have benefited from the excellent instruction and experiences that are part of the program. Because of our interest and potential, we were lucky enough to be selected to receive the camp scholarship.

All of this was made possible through the generosity of the local golfers that support the "Supe Classic" which is the primary fund-raiser for our area Junior Golf program. We wish to thank all the many people that organize and administer the golf outing, particularly Tom Bickert, Sam Supernaw and Nancy LeCroix from our board. We also want to thank the teaching staff of PGA professionals Joan Waha, Steve Braun, Marty Joy, Steve Good, Jina Kiel, Todd Montgomery and Scott Blechel.

On behalf of all the Junior Golfers, we want to express our gratitude. We hope that experiences like ours can continue for youngsters in Charlevoix County.

GALLAGHER

For the last six years Gallagher has concentrated his efforts only on cultivating his musical pursuits further. Aside from performing gigs he also freelance writes for television, writes and composes his own work, practices a menage of instruments including the trumpet, the sousaphone, bass guitar and the keyboard and takes part in musical competitions.

"While in Europe I took part in a Star Search type of competition. Out of 22,000 bands we were awarded first prize for best international orchestra for a composition I had written. 'A Question of Love.' Bon Jovi was a judge, who said to me after the performance, 'nice tune Kev.' We won an all expense paid trip to Tokyo," he said.

"I have gone all over the world and played music. I've been in countries where I didn't know the language but could pull out my horn and connect with the audience. Music has the power to supersede linguistic boundaries."

But, Gallagher loves to come home to Charlevoix and plans to return to the states in the near future.

"This vacation is a time of reflection for me. I get a feeling of family whenever I am in this town. It keeps me coming back," said Gallagher.

Sheriff to open new jail for fund-raiser

Now you can spend a night in the Charlevoix jail, for charity.

Sheriff George T. Lasater announced recently that he will be having a fund-raiser Friday to show local citizens the new jail.

The concept would be, for a $35 per person donation to the K-9

Program and the Sheriff's Volunteer Auxiliary, the participants would receive a tour of the new facility, have a meal in one of the cells and also be afforded the opportunity to spend the night in the cell. In addition, you would receive a mug shot (photo) to take home, along with a t-shirt signifying that you spent time in the Charlevoix County Jail.

Both the K-9 program and the volunteer auxiliary are not funded by tax dollars. They are operated exclusively from donations, and this would be a great opportunity to support both of these programs.

If you decide to spend the night in the cell, the door will not be locked and you may leave any time. There will be separate cells for males and females. The meal served will be basically what the inmates will be eating for their meal.

In order to plan ahead, the sheriff would like to have a list of citizens who are interested in the fund-raiser. If interested, please contact Sheriff George T. Lasater, Undersheriff Don Schneider or Debra Storm at 547-4461.

Grandvue in need of volunteers, donations

New location means more unique art for your home

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

After two years of business in Charlevoix, Interior Motives discovered it was outgrowing its space and needed to move.

It found a new spot last spring on Bridge Street, across from the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce, perfect for its expanding selection of home furnishings and three times as large as the old store that was further north on Bridge Street.

With all this new space, owner Linda Hoffman has more room to display the many unusual pieces of art and unique furniture she has. Plus, the store continues to offer interior design ideas with its staff decorator.

"It is very eclectic here. There is no one style," said Hoffman. There are so many different objects at Interior Motives, that Hoffman says there is definitely something for everyone in the store.

"We do very unusual items, so if you want a special piece this is where you come," she said. "I just look for unusual things to put in here. Pieces you don't find everywhere."

Some of the items in Interior

Motives include: various pieces of hand-painted furniture, specialty lamps and handmade art bought directly from the artist.

Interior Motives is open from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday through Saturday and 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. Sunday. Hoffman said the store is open seven days a week throughout most of the year, but is only open five days a week in January, February and March. "It is always open on the week-ends," she added.

Youth foundation gives out grants

From pre-school programs and playgrounds, to prenatal classes and substance abuse prevention efforts, area projects that serve kids are receiving some financial help from the Charlevoix County Community Foundation Youth Advisory Committee.

Members of the youth group recently announced grants totaling $30,500 to assist a variety of non-profit organizations that focus on children and families.

Money for the grants comes from the Community Foundation Youth Fund, an endowment of more than $1.5 million designated exclusively for the benefit of area young people. Twice each year, the foundation's Youth Advisory Committee — made up of teen representatives from high schools in Charlevoix County — invites area organizations to submit grant requests.

Using information gleaned from a local youth survey and other criteria they develop, the group evaluates each proposal before deciding how to distribute grants.

"We have some tough choices," said Jessica Halverson, a graduate of Charlevoix High School and member of the Youth Advisory Committee. "There are lots of worthy programs and we have to weigh the merits of each — making sure we stick to our budget while helping children of all ages and from all our communities."

This summer's selected programs and their grant amounts are:

ment and supplies for training programs.

•Boys City Nursery Center — $500 to purchase materials for a multicultural diversity program.

•Boys City public schools — $2,000 toward construction of a community playground and learning center and $1,000 to fund the Adventure Club, an after-school activity program for at-risk kids.

•Boys Pop Warner — $3,000 to expand the popular youth football program.

•Charlevoix Area Hospital — $2,000 to increase the number of prenatal classes offered to expectant parents in the community.

•Charlevoix Pop Warner — $3,000 to provide start-up costs for one Pop Warner football team.

•Charlevoix public schools — $2,750 to expand the Instead Club, a summer program for middle school students.

•Child and Family Services of Northwestern Michigan — $2,000 to purchase new educational and training materials.

•CHIP Counseling Center — $1,450 for materials used in a middle school substance abuse prevention program.

Art to decorate the city's waterfront on Saturday

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

East Park will be the center of many art lovers' attentions this weekend as Charlevoix hosts over 120 different artists from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday for the forty-second Waterfront Art Fair.

The art show is hosted by the Charlevoix Arts Council and will take place rain or shine.

"This show is the second oldest in the state, next to the Ann Arbor art show," said Art Council Member Marina LaBlance.

She said the show started with a group of locals that wanted to bring art to the area.

"I think Charlevoix supports the arts. There is tremendous support for our programs," said LaBlance. "There is a lot of local artists and there is a lot of talent in this community."

The show is also a hit with many artists. While the show has 150 spaces available for artists this year, as of last week, 120 artists from throughout the United States and Canada have signed up.

"You will see some of the top artists in the country. This is a very established show," LaBlance said. "Some artists that do not do a lot of shows anymore, still come back and do this show for its quality."

LaBlance added the show will have something for everyone. Spectators will see fine arts and fine crafts, glass blowers, jewelry makers, medal smiths, pottery, sculptures, oil paintings, water colors and fine art photographs.

Also throughout the event, the string ensemble Trio-corde will perform. One of its members is Charlevoix County Prosecutor Mary Beth Kur.

Art Council President Beth McGraw said, "We try and make it a community event. It involves everyone."

In order to benefit the community more, McGraw said all of the money raised goes back into the community in the form of artistic events sponsored by the arts council. Some of these events include bringing in a symphony to the school for students to hear, having an artist in residence at the schools to help students with art and art scholarships for graduating students.

"A lot of children would never have seen a symphony or go to (a museum). The purpose is to bring it here to them," LaBlance added.

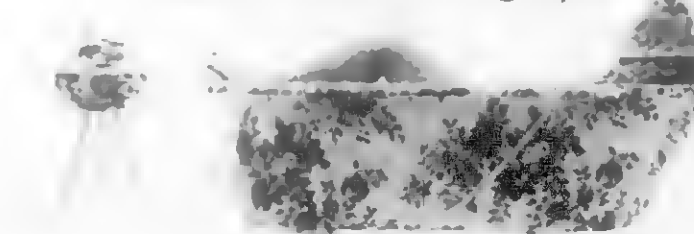

In addition to the community benefiting from the show, the merchants in Charlevoix also get a little from the weekend.

"Typically, it is usually the merchants best day of the year. This brings in thousands of people. The hotels are usually booked up," McGraw said.

Charlevoix may be a port city for cruise ship

According to one of the bridge operators, the Pine River Channel is approximately 90 feet wide leaving 18.25 feet of space on either side of the vessel as it makes its way through the channel.

"It will be a tight fit in the channel, but we think we can get it through," said Rasmussen.

The bridge operator was unable to estimate the length of time it will take for the Arcadia to squeeze through the channel.

"It depends on the pilot. They have to take their time, there are many curves in the channel. It all depends on the boat and the captain, not the bridge," said the bridge operator, who would not give his name.

According to Great Lakes Cruises president, Ralph Diehl, two criteria must be met for a city to be considered as a viable port location.

"The first of the criteria is a technical requirement — the ship must be able to dock or anchor in a safe manner for passengers to both embark and disembark," said Diehl.

The second requirement involves the availability of tourist attractions in the prospective port city.

"Is the port able to keep over 200 people amused from four to eight to 10 hours. This includes both manufactured attractions, like festivals and geological features, like area recreation. Will our demographic be attracted to this port," continued Diehl.

The cruise is scheduled to arrive in Charlevoix at 10 a.m. June 21 and Oct. 11 of 2001 and to depart at 4 a.m. June 22 and Oct. 12. These arrivals and departures are scheduled to occur as part of a seven night "Michigan Maritime" tour of Lake Michigan.

The Michigan Maritime sets the Arcadia's course, leaving from Windsor cruising through Bay City, Mackinac Island, Green Bay, Milwaukee, Charlevoix and on to Detroit. This 7-day vacation will cost each traveler $995 for standard accommodations and pricing rises to $1,795 for superior lodging.

According to Rasmussen, "For the downtown stores this will mean a couple hundred extra shoppers. The itinerary puts them on shore overnight. This will hopefully help business downtown. The cruise should also get good media coverage so out of curiosity people will come over to Charlevoix bringing their business downtown."

Great Lakes Cruises representatives are scheduled to meet with the chamber and the city in the next couple of months to discuss the project further.

AAA urges boaters to be cautious this summer

Using caution and common-sense boating procedures will ensure that powerboaters and operators of smaller sailboats should encounter no major low-water difficulties entering and existing in most of their favorite harbors, a survey recently by AAA Michigan found.

The Auto Club also found boaters will pay an average 27.5 cents per gallon more for gas this year than last in Michigan and 36.5 cents per gallon more in the Detroit area when they filled up dockside.

The Auto Club's weekly "Fuel

Gauge" survey of marina fuel prices found no-lead averaging $1.849 per gallon outside metropolitan Detroit. Prices range from $1.509 to $2.599. Diesel fuel prices average $1.596 per gallon, up 29.1 cents from last. Costs range from $1.389 to $1.999.

A statewide check of 77 public and private marinas on the Great Lakes and popular inland waters shows that boats with a draft of more than seven feet will have difficulty entering at least 20 harbors checked. Water depths at those vary between four and seven feet.

"Boaters should always call in advance for information regarding conditions before entering any harbor," said Jerry Basch, AAA Michigan Community Safety Services manager.

"Low water means boaters should take all extra precautions necessary to ensure a safe, fun time," Basch said. "Because of the increased boat traffic over the holiday, it's imperative that boaters show concern and courtesy to fellow captains and help those who may need directions or other assistance."

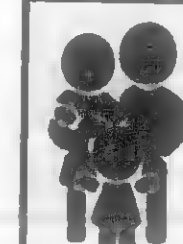

Before entering any marina or harbor, call the harbor master to determine the best course of action. Phone numbers and call channels are listed in the state's new free harbors and marinas guides. Guides are available at the State Department of Natural Resources (DNR) offices or find a similar list on the Internet at www.dnr.state.mi.us. Look under "boating."

"Boaters can also check with other local skippers for advice on entering and leaving harbors, and locations of possible hazards," Basch added. "Watch for possible obstructions uncovered by the low water, including old pilings, sandbars, rocks and reefs."

"And since some state harbors cannot take larger sailboats with deepest drafts, sailors should be doubly alert for any changing weather patterns," Basch said.

One private marina on Lake Charlevoix near Boyne City closed until late summer due to insufficient depths. The remaining marinas report water depths adequate for most boats.

Another lawsuit may result from new high school site

SCHOOL

Contained in the letter was a list of conditional clauses, that if accepted by the school board before 3 p.m. that same afternoon, would act as a settlement and the firm would not file suit on behalf of the group.

"We received a letter saying if we do a couple 'simple' things they would not sue. We went through the settlement and talked with the BETA Design group as to what would be involved if we were to meet these requests, we then decided we didn't want to do that," said Telgenhof.

According to the letter, written by Olson in conjunction with the interests of the environmental group, five conditions were listed to achieve settlement status. One proposed the relocation of the athletic fields with the exception of a game-ready baseball field.

"All along they have claimed their concern was for environmental impact, now they are saying they will go away if we move a couple ball fields," questioned Sturrock.

Also included in the settlement letter was a term stipulating site plan and special use permit terms and conditions are to remain in effect. The group would release concerns over the special use permit and the site plan, unless the school does not comply with the requirements of each permit.

In the letter, the group reserved the right to sue the township or the city with regards to the sewer extension.

Finally, if the settlement was ac-

"To stop working and change the plan would cost a lot of money in change orders with the contractors. It's just too late and we are too far along in the process."

Allen Telgenhof,
School board president

cepted the parties were to release a joint press release regarding the details of the settlement.

According to school board officials, they reached their consensus based on three factors, the first of which was a lack of input heard during public meetings held in January where these changes were welcomed additions to the design process.

"In January we held a special board meeting where we presented our conceptual design and site plan. We then asked for public input and got none, now they are coming back with a settlement," said Sturrock.

The second contributing factor to the board's decision not to settle with the preservation group, based on commentary heard from board members, is the cost of accepting the settlement outweighs the overall benefit.

"It would be quite costly to accept the settlement. BETA would have to redesign the plans; the soil erosion plan, the master plan process and other decisions would have to be reevaluated. If they would have brought this to the table months ago during public meetings of the site plan, these changes could have been easily integrated into the plan. Now they want us to stop work until these changes are accommodated. To stop working and change the plan would cost a lot of money in change orders with the contractors. It's just too late and we are too far along in the process," said Telgenhof.

The board also feels as though the proposed settlement did not fit with their long-range land use plan.

"The plan (site plan) we adopted was laid out in such a way as to keep property open for later use. This was a long-range solution so the board in the future isn't faced with the same space constraints. If we accepted the changes it would take away an option for the future board," said Sturrock.

Telgenhof added, "So it could be back to court. Work will continue but I am sure they will ask for a restraining order to stop the progress."

According to school board officials, they have no intention of slowing their progress on this project and have scheduled ground breaking ceremonies for Aug. 21 at 6 p.m.

Calls to Olson were not returned by deadline and the preservation group did not want to comment at this time.

Lions to have 'White Cane Safety Days' this week

The Charlevoix Lions Club has designated Friday and Saturday as White Cane Safety Days.

Members of the group will be seen around town with yellow aprons on, seeking donations from the public. The money collected will go to help fund Lions sponsored agencies including: The Michigan Eye Bank and Transplant Center, the Michigan Leader Dog Training Center and Puppy Search and Development Program in Rochester and the Welcome Home for the Blind in Grand Rapids.

Locally, the Lions Club provides glasses for needy individuals with special eye problems. Also, all Lions Club members will take used eyeglasses, which are then distributed in third-world countries.

To give a realistic touch to the safety aspects of the two day activity, the Lions will be carrying white canes. These canes, originally provided by the Peoria Lions nearly 80 years ago, have become world-wide reminders to the public that people out there using the red-tipped white canes have little or no vision and require extra alertness and courtesy to assume their safety.

Donations may also be mailed to the Charlevoix Lions Club, P.O. Box 212, Charlevoix, MI 49720.

Used glasses can be dropped off at Lion Steve Voci's office at 103 Clinton Street in Charlevoix or at Lion Reed Freindinger's office at 14730 Park Avenue in Charlevoix.

Beaver Island teacher to use lessons from Japan in class

BY JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Connie Boyle, an elementary, junior high and high school Beaver Island teacher took off for Japan, June 8, after being selected to participate in a two-week cultural awareness program.

"The Toyota International Teacher Program is their (Toyota's) way of giving back to the community through education. They took us to Japan hoping that if Michigan teachers learn about Japanese culture, values, education, environmental issues, technology and industry we could then convey these aspects of Japanese culture to our students," said Boyle. "Their goal is to help the students and teachers gain a multi-cultural perspective through the study of Japan. I found we have a lot to learn."

Boyle explained, teachers underwent an extensive application process in which they were required to establish a set of goals, called "an impact plan." This plan outlines how they will implement their findings into their classroom lessons and teaching style upon return.

"In my opinion, we as teachers have the responsibility to teach our students that we live in a global society. Northern Michigan is a remote area and our kids don't have much exposure to other cultures, so this is a great way to integrate facets of another culture. I looked for how the two countries (Japan and the U.S.) approach some of the same issues, like, environmental issues. I found Michigan was facing some of the same problems as those present in Japanese culture," said Boyle.

Boyle also noted facets of Japanese culture that would be welcomed additions to the traditional American demeanor.

"There is a genuine respect displayed in daily interactions by all individuals in Japanese culture. I also felt a sense of safety while in Tokyo, it would never occur to a Japanese resident to physically accost someone," she said.

"I found one of the underlying themes of Japanese culture in their work related demeanor. Those who are hired in Japan perform their job to the best of their ability all the time and every job has an important purpose. I feel the importance placed on all jobs is lacking in our society," she added.

As Boyle pointed out, creating cultural awareness is reciprocally beneficial. She encountered some culturally specific aspects of Japanese daily life that were not relevant to American society but in their dissimilarity provided an excellent window into the inner workings of Japanese culture.

Boyle clarified the origin of a common association made between the Japanese rigorous approach to education as opposed to the American approach.

"Their country can learn things from us too. They could be less intense. Japanese schools have always ranked higher than those of the U.S. in terms of Math scores. However, in Japan you are only required to go to school through the eighth grade. If Japanese students do not pass a set of strenuous exams they call "hell week" they are not permitted to move on to the high school level. So, all the high school level kids do extremely well, otherwise they would not be there," said Boyle.

Teachers who participated in this program visited either a public or private Japanese school, constituting their basis for scholastic comparison. According to Boyle, the Japanese school system takes an interesting approach, providing teachers incentives.

"If the school is considered to be a good school, the students enrolled will all pass their exams. This builds a reputation and teachers receive an extra third of their salary as a bonus. This encourages teachers to continue to do what they can to ensure their students will pass the examinations. If they do not pass the exams they must find a different route, but there is no bad stigma attached to them," said Boyle of her observations of Japanese schooling.

Boyle also pointed to the Japanese school system's lack of early computer integration into their students curricula. She compared the technological integration of the Beaver Island school system, where computers are used at the preschool level on up. Whereas, in Japan home computing and the use of computing centers are the students' sole sources of virtual interaction until they reach the university level.

Boyle believes her time in Japan will bring a lot to her classroom come fall.

"Through observations and specific experiences the trip afforded me personal knowledge from which I can draw and convey to my students," said Boyle.

Boyle saw first hand what the Japanese call "zero defect," where if errors are detected they are to be fixed. Students are expected to continue working until they come to a correct conclusion.

"My students do accept error, my goal is to integrate the zero defect concept, to help the students push themselves and solve the problems," she said.

For some time Boyle has been formulating lessons around happenings of distant cultures and claims her students view her as "a life-long learner."

Boyle will return to Beaver Island classrooms in the fall where her experiences in Japan will add a diverse perspective to her Spanish, math, computing and business classes.

FAX: (231) 943-9178

Dear Readers & Fellow Businesses:

We at Grand Bay Marine, Northern Michigan's largest Four Winns dealer, are very proud to have our new location at 06798 US 31 S., Charlevoix, MI 49720. As would any other business in the area, we feel it is important to inform customers of where we are located and what services we have to offer.

We chose to place our advertisements and information columns with the Charlevoix Courier and Petoskey News-Review. To our pleasant surprise, the sales staff for both papers were more than willing to help us out with all our needs. We were also impressed to see the effect the two papers had on increasing customer volume visiting our store.

We are and will continue to do business with the Courier and News-Review to increase our business and keep our customers, existing and new, informed on the latest happenings concerning Grand Bay Marine.

We encourage any business not already advertising in these great mediums to do so and see the positive impact that doing so will have on your business venture. We would also like to extend a special thank you to Denise and Kim!

Should you be interested in a new Four Winns, Pontoon, Hoist, Dock, Outboard or Paddleboat, please give us a call and you will see firsthand how wonderful being in the Grand Bay Marine circle of friends really is!

Thanks again,
Bill Kern

Yacht club to host 'slave race' on Sunday

A. Nony Mouse

'Yachting notes'

Think you'd like to try crewing (or just riding along) in a sailboat race? Your chance is Sunday in the CYC Slave Race!

All you need to do is to show up (member or non-member) at the Club (209 Ferry) at 2 p.m. in clothes reasonably suitable for the weather.

While the Skippers meet, you'll fill out a card with your preference as to position (tactician, fore-deck ape, main/jib sheet handler, ballast or tourist) and your experience (0-5 where 0 indicates you've never set foot on a sailboat while 5 says you'll probably be drafted for the America's Cup.)

I'll then have the pleasure of auctioning you off as a slave to the highest bidder from the ranks of the skippers in attendance.

Last time I did this, I sold a Bo Derek look alike, who had just returned from a solo Atlantic crossing, for an even $200,000! It's play-money, but the skipper's pay dearly for the bogus bucks and the proceeds will be added to the fund for the new Race Committee Boat. Call Lori Glass, 547-9967 for details.

And skippers — We need all of you to participate!

A very nice breeze greeted the 37 yachts that started the fourth race of the Summer Series. While HUSSY was the first to finish with an elapsed time of only 1:38:13, thirteen J-22s crossed the line in the next seven minutes. SWINE FLEW, TOO RECKLESS, FIRST DATE, HS MOISTURE MISSILE, ROCK STEADY and SUPERFLUOUS all crossed within three minute of HUSSY. Then it was CRAZY HORSE, GECKO, HABANERO, HIGH MAINTENANCE, PALEFACE LITE, THUNDERSTRUCK, SCURRY and HOG-TIDE. WHAT'S HER NAME retired.

In the big boats of Division 1, MINT JULEP corrected out at 1:44:26, 43 seconds ahead of GOTCHA! who, in turn, led SLAPSHOT by only 31 seconds! KAMIKAZE, FLASH and BLASEN IV were next, in that order.

The fastest P-26, TIRELESS, at 1:44:34 had more breathing room over LOST

VERMONT with JESSE back a good bit further. ORIGINAL SIN, SANDPIPER and CYGNUS followed.

Division 2 saw BABE correcting out at 1:45:48. MI-JOY and M3 had a tight race for second and third with BALD EAGLE, J HAWK and SAFFRON well back.

In the Jib and Main Fleet: APOTHECARY by 10 minutes over HIGH SEAS.

At the halfway point in the Series, assuming every boat uses one of its permitted two drops: Division 1: GOTCHA! 5, KAMIKAZE 6, SLAPSHOT 8, FLASH and MINT JULEP each has 10 and BLASEN IV has 16. Division 2: MI JOY 3, M 3 9, BALD EAGLE and BABE with 11, J HAWK 12 and SAFFRON 15. P-26: TIRELESS 5, LOST VERMONT 6, ORIGINAL SIN and JESSE at 9, CYGNUS 10, SAND-PIPER 14. JAM: CHEEMAUN and APOTHECARY tied at 4 and HIGH SEAS 8. J-22: HUSSY a perfect 3, SWINE FLEW and RECKLESS tied at 6, FIRST DATE 13, MOISTURE MISSILE 14, SUPERFLUOUS and ROCK STEADY 18, GECKO 19, PALEFACE LITE 24, HABANERO 27, CRAZY HORSE 32, WHAT'S HER NAME and THUNDERSTRUCK 34, JUBBLIES and HIGH MAINTENANCE 37, SCURRY 38 and HOG-TIDE 46.

Hope to see you this Sunday! Get more details at the Club Friday evening

Yachting Notes is submitted each week during the "warm" months by the Charlevoix Yacht Club. To contact the club, see its website at www.charlevoixyachtclub.org or call 547-9170.

People who sign up for the Charlevoix Yacht Club "Slave Race" at 2 p.m. Sunday may get a chance to crew a sailboat such as this. Volunteers for the race do not need to be accomplished sailors. Proceeds from the race will be used by the yacht club to buy a new Race Committee Boat. (Courtesy photo)

Braun to play 100 holes for charity, in one day

Last summer when Belvedere Golf Club Professional Steve Braun played 100 holes of golf in one day, he raised over $2,000 for the Charlevoix County Junior Golf Program.

It was part of the PGA of America's annual fund-raiser for junior golf.

Braun is about to tee it up and go again!

The event is scheduled for Aug. 21 at the Belvedere Club Course with his first shot slated to begin at 6:30 a.m. Braun, who has spent the last nine years in Charlevoix, four at Dunmaglas and the last five at the Belvedere course, has been pleased with the generous pledges from the Belvedere members and those from local residents.

He hopes others interested in area youngsters will contact him at 547-2611.

"A pledge for so much a hole is all we're asking and the cause is a great one," he said.

Dean Davenport, who organized and directs the local Junior Golf Program, expressed gratitude for Braun's efforts.

"Our only public fund-raiser has been the Supe Classic coming up in late August. With the money Steve raised last year, we were able to send eight youngsters to the Ferris State week-long golf camp and when coupled with the Supe Classic revenue, we are able to solvent and balance our operating budget. Steve's been a key instructor on our staff and his dedication and interest in area juniors is inspiring to everyone connected to our program," Davenport said.

Plans are being organized to provide Braun with a caddy/driver for each nine holes he plays in order to conserve his energy.

Adults from the Junior Golf Mentoring program have volunteered to help, but there is still a need for more. Those interested may call Davenport at 547-6433 or contact Braun at the Belvedere.

Golf fans may view the golf marathon by stopping by the course as Braun's scores are posted as he finishes each round.

The turmoil in the 1972 Republican party

Marilyn Boss

'Days gone by'

In the fall of 1972, a most unusual event took place, which was unprecedented in Charlevoix County.

At the time, Bob Wise was chairman of the Charlevoix County Republican Party. Other officers were Mrs. Arthur Rouse of Boyne City, vice chairman; I was the secretary, and Sherry Browe, Charlevoix, was treasurer. The Republican County Convention was at the County Courthouse. All of a sudden, a group of "new Republicans" seized control of the meeting.

They elected their own chairman and vice chairman. Everyone was shocked, although the "Old Guard" had heard a rumor of a takeover.

The new group were elected delegates on the GOP ballot in the May 16 primary and were well prepared on how to take control of the convention. They had all their documents prepared. They reportedly had met at the home of Richard Friske to lay out their groundwork for the coup. Malcolm Dale of Eastport, northern Michigan organizer for the John Birch Society, was reported to be their tutor.

The Old Guard decided beforehand to nominate County GOP Chairman Robert W. Wise as chairman. They had been told about the upcoming coup. The right-wing group put Gary Graye of Boyne Valley Township as their candidate.

At the first roll call, Graye was elected by a vote of 28-23, and took over the chairmanship from Bob Wise. Mary Browe of Charlevoix, was elected vice-chairman over Mrs. Arthur Rouse. When it came time to put me out, William Cooper noticed that Donna Van Dorn, seated in the visitors' gallery, had been voting. When he challenged her, she explained that she was voting for her mother, Bessie Van Dorn, Dubin's motion died in the confusion, but a similar motion was made by Dubin later in the meeting, and passed. A caucus was then held, and during this time, the Old Guard phoned Linda Toten of Boyne City and Francis Themm of Norwood Township. They were absent elected delegates. Some of the new Republicans must have changed their minds in the mean time, as the Old Guard had a safe majority of votes when the convention convened.

Graye suggested that I be kept as secretary and it was approved. The only reason I could come up with for this change of heart, was that, out of curiosity, I had attended one meeting of the John Birch Society a few months before.

Chairman Graye then said there were vacancies of delegates in various precincts and wards, and wanted them to be elected from the floor. Delegate Harvey Varnum of Boyne City made a motion that only duly elected delegates be allowed to vote. The motion was passed.

The convention then proceeded to the election of delegates to the state convention, to be held in Cobo Hall.

The new Republicans nominated Mr. and Mrs. Graye and Harley R. Barber of East Jordan. The Old Guard nominated Arthur Rouse of Boyne City, and Robert Wise, Del Terrill, Ken Wojan and Bill Cooper of Charlevoix. The Old Guard won all five delegate seats: Cooper, 34; Terrill, 32; Rouse, 30; Wise, 29; and Wojan, 28. Runners up were Graye with 27 and Barber and Mrs. Graye with 26 each. The Old Guard also won all the five alternate delegate seats.

At the conclusion of the convention, County Chairman Wise charged the new Republicans had attempted to "overthrow" the County GOP.

The new group objected, saying they were only interested in good government.

Wise then asked for party unity, and former GOP Chairman Oscar Stroud asked the newcomers to pay party dues and become bonafide members of the party. Needless to say, it wasn't a popular suggestion.

At the time, I was 39 years old, and this was quite an eye opener, and made for a most exciting meeting. It certainly made everyone think about the importance of participating in local politics, and what could be done, even at the last minute.

Venetian Festival A Fantastic Success

Excellent! Outstanding! Fantastic! Great! Phenomenal! All of these, and many more superlative adjectives just seem inadequate to describe this year's Venetian Festival. An entire week of athletic events and concerts in the park, topped off with a carnival, a great street parade, a fantastic boat parade, and two nights of spectacular fireworks all in Charlevoix - what more could we have asked for! Perhaps most important of all, we spent a week celebrating Charlevoix. A special thank you to the Venetian Festival Board of Directors: Dan Barron, President, Steve Andree, Dean Davenport, Francis "Brownie" Flanders, Anne Golski, Laurie Lounsbery, Dave Novotny, John Taylor, John Winn, and the numerous volunteers who made this event outstanding. Also a special thanks to the city, county, state, and Coast Guard professionals for helping to make this event a reality. Thanks to all of you for making Charlevoix the great place it is.

Congratulations Charlevoix Area Garden Club!

The Charlevoix Area Garden Club was recently awarded the National Exon Grand Prize for Civic Beautification. This prize, given annually through the National Council of State Garden Clubs, was given to the Charlevoix Club for its efforts in city beautification through the gardens it plants and maintains throughout Charlevoix. These gardens include the Bergman Center Therapy Garden, the Charlevoix High School Courtyard Garden, the Memorial Garden located on Dixon and Chicago, the new meditation garden at the Charlevoix Area Hospital, the Pere Charlevoix Garden at the west end of Dixon, the "triangle" garden at the intersection of US-31 and Michigan Avenue, and the Post Office garden. The $1,000 prize, given annually to only one garden club in the United States, will be used for further community beautification projects.

Still want to sign up for the golf outing? HURRY! Time is running out!

Business Briefs

If you've been through the Charlevoix Industrial Park lately, you've probably noticed the increasing amount of activity due, largely, to DCL, Inc.'s new 24,000 square foot expansion. The project, handled by Colwell Wageman Construction of Petoskey, is scheduled for completion by the end of August. In the meantime, DCL has been busy securing a $999,000 tax-exempt bond from the Michigan Economic Development Corporation, in addition to introducing two new product lines. DCL is also planning on hiring several new employees to handle the influx of new business. "Growth is always an exciting prospect," says Vice President Werner Egger. "Anytime a business grows, it benefits the economic outlook."

Congratulations to GFS Marketplace. GFS Marketplace is now in the process of putting the final touches on their newly constructed store in Petoskey. The store opens on Thursday, August 24th. Charlevoix Area Hospital is offering a program for drivers called AARP's 55 Alive Mature Driving Program. The classroom refresher is especially designed to meet the needs of older drivers, and covers age-related physical changes, declining perceptual skills, rules of the road, local driving problems, and license renewal requirements. The program will be offered from 9:00 a.m. - 1:00 p.m. Monday and Wednesday, Aug. 21 and 23 in the Charlevoix Area Hospital large classroom. For more information and registration, call 547-8651. Registration is required.

An Equifax Polk City Directory, containing a wealth of information on residents and businesses in Charlevoix and Emmet counties will be published and available this October. Steve Bujaki, Field Sales Manager and his associates are currently in the area working on this project. Polk is new to the community and new to the Chamber membership.

Belvedere Golf Course will host the Women's Mid Amateur Golf Championship on August 24 and 25, 2000. There will be approximately 100 golfers participating in this championship. Spectators are welcome. In the future, the Belvedere Club will host the Men's Michigan Amateur Championship. The Golf Association of Michigan hasn't brought the "Michigan Amateur" to Charlevoix since 1988, which at that time marked 38 continuous years of the Amateur being held at Belvedere. "Charlevoix will have the good fortune to see the Championship return in 2003," said Jacqueline Merta, President of the Chamber, who has been working with the Belvedere Club to offer the Chamber's assistance with this event.

Attention Bargain Hunters: Don't forget our annual downtown Sidewalk Sales, August 17, 18, and 19. Remember, it's a great way to do your Christmas Shopping early!

Sheriff cleared by attorney general

Charges of wrongdoing by Lasater can't be proven

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

The State Attorney General's office decided last week against issuing any criminal charges on Charlevoix County Sheriff George Lasater over an alleged incidence of obstruction of justice and perjury.

The charges spurred from a court case against Bellaire resident Kent McNeil, that was later dismissed. McNeil's attorney, Doug Donaldson, of Traverse City, alleged to Charlevoix County Prosecuting Attorney Mary Beth Kur that Lasater did not turn over vital material in a timely manner that he felt would exonerate McNeil and that the sheriff committed perjury.

Kur turned the matter over to the State Attorney General's office, to get a third party review of the matter.

In a written statement, Lasater said, "I am pleased that an independent agency reviewed the case and determined that there was no criminal wrongdoing. I've worked for the criminal justice system for 30 years and I'm pleased to see that it works for defendants in all walks of life, even those of us in the law enforcement community."

However, Lasater did not get away from this investigation without some tongue-lashing by the Attorney General's office.

In a letter to Kur, Assistant Attorney General Amy Ronayne Krause stated, "While it is clear that information was not turned over to you in a timely manner by the sheriff and there are several questions as to Sheriff Lasater's conduct, it would be impossible to prove criminal charges beyond a reasonable doubt."

Krause further addressed the allegation that Lasater did not turn over vital information in the McNeil case to Kur in a timely manner. This information included a receipt that would directly impact one of the charges against McNeil at the time.

Lawsuit served over new high school location

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

A press release sent by the law offices of Olson, Noonan and Bzdok of Traverse City Aug. 10 made evident that the Charlevoix Area Natural Resources Preservation Association, plans to proceed with the law suit filed against Charlevoix Public Schools and Marion Township.

The association's attorney, Jim Olson, has not returned calls by presstime made by the Charlevoix Courier regarding this matter.

According to the press release sent by the law firm, "The suit seeks to reverse the township approvals because the township ordinance lacked proper standards to address the impact and growth issues, and because the township and schools systematically refused to consider the wider impacts beyond just the school itself."

Marion Township's Attorney Jim Young speculated as to the possible lack of proper standards in the township ordinance stating, "The zoning ordinance contained two standards the project must meet; first the project had to be harmonious with adjoining properties, second the general public benefit of the project. It could be argued that the terminology of the second standard was too vague to constitute a legally adequate standard for a zoning decision. However, there were a number of factors, at least 15-20, I presented to the township board to consider in deciding the general public benefit all of which were unquestionably legally sound."

The document's contents include the impetus for the suit, including the environmental group's concern over the possible ramifications of the proposed sewer extension.

Republican pride Resident pushes Charlevoix at political convention

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

"Charlevoix is well known throughout the country and I promote it at the convention."

John Haggard,
Charlevoix resident and Republican

Charlevoix resident John Haggard is passionate about the ideas expressed by an elephant.

He talks of government, politics and his love of the Republican Party like some men talk of their favorite sports team. Which is why this lifelong Republican, who is the Charlevoix County Chair for the Republican party, member of the first congressional district executive committee and member of the republican state committee was sent to the Republican convention early this month in Philadelphia, Penn. as a voting party delegate.

"When you go to these conventions you meet people who make decisions throughout the country....You get to meet the leadership of the country," Haggard said. "My goal, as far as being a delegate or an alternate has always been, to meet people who share the same ideas and philosophy and also to promote northern Michigan and Charlevoix."

According to Haggard, Charlevoix was familiar to many people at this year's convention. While sitting in his seat, a woman from a Kentucky delegation behind him remarked how she has a home on Lake Charlevoix. Another Kentucky delegate said he was a graduate of Gaylord High School and Michigan State University.

"Charlevoix is well-known throughout the country and I promote it at the convention," Haggard said.

After the convention, Haggard said everyone was very excited that Bush was the nominee and he was endorsed by McCain.

"We feel dignity will be brought back to the white house," he said. While taking in some political fun, Haggard also had a chance to enjoy Philadelphia.

"Philly is a great town with great food and good restaurants. The hospitality of the people is unbelievable in that city. The law enforcement was very friendly," he said. Haggard added, "I would recommend to anybody to get involved and try to go to one of these (political conventions)."

Haggard stresses political involvement to everyone he meets, even if it is for the Democrats.

"I think it is important for people to get involved and I emphasize that with my children," he said. He added, happily, so far none of his children have endorsed the Democratic Party.

"I have a lot of the people I talk to that think politicians are nothing but a bunch of crooks. But, anybody that runs for political office is there to serve the people they represent," Haggard said. "I think each major party has people that really represent just about everybody alive...."

Now that the convention is over, Haggard said the Republican Party in Michigan will work on getting more Republicans in local and state elections and the State Supreme Court — which is technically a non-partisan race, but the candidates are chosen by the political parties.

"I have always said, 'There is no such thing as non-partisan,'" Haggard joked.

In the property tax notices, they have sent out newsletters in an attempt to keep all residents informed on township issues. However, property owners whose tax notices go to their lending institutions don't receive the newsletters or the e-mail information.

Child killed in tragic accident last week

A 4-year-old Charlotte child was killed around 3 p.m., Aug. 10 after he was struck by a vehicle near the boat launching ramp at the Horton Bay Club in Horton Bay.

The child, Gabriel Howe, was playing near the private marina's boat ramp on Lake Charlevoix when a vehicle backed over him. The vehicle was driven by the child's father, Richard Howe, also of Charlotte.

Gabriel was transported from the scene by Boyne City EMS to Northern Michigan Hospital, where he was pronounced deceased.

According to Charlevoix County Sheriff George T. Lasater, the preliminary report by the sheriff's office reveals that this was a tragic accident with no other factors involved.

Big Rock celebrates no injuries

Consumers Energy employees at the Big Rock Point Restoration Project recently completed 23 years of work without missing a single day of work due to injury.

The last time a Consumers Energy employee at Big Rock Point missed work due to injury was Aug. 3, 1977 when an auxiliary operator slipped on stairs and sprained an ankle.

"While the accomplishment is noteworthy, what is most gratifying is that employees have continued to keep safety as the most important part of their jobs as we transitioned from an operating nuclear power plant into a site deconstruction and restoration team," said Kurt Haas, Big Rock Point general manager.

Plant employees celebrated the accomplishment with a small ceremony at the plant's flagpole. A special flag commemorating the safety milestone will be dedicated and raised Aug. 29, the third anniversary of restoration activities.

OPINIONS

Association is just too lawsuit-happy

EDITORIAL

Just when you thought it was safe to build a new school, they returned!

Yes, the Charlevoix Area Natural Resources Preservation Association jumped back into its struggle to keep Charlevoix from building a new school on Marion Center Road. And once again, it is using the court and an unjustifiable lawsuit to try and achieve this goal.

Yes, plans for the new high school did already go through the rigorous inspection of the Marion Township Planning Commission and Board and yes, these two units of government did approve them.

But, this group just won't give up. And to do so, it is willing to subject this community to a potentially lengthy and costly trial that will continue to fan the flames of division that have already destroyed too many friendships and partnerships throughout Charlevoix.

Added to this is the failed rationale the members of this group are using to justify this new lawsuit.

In a press release issued by the group's lawyer, it asserts a new sewer being built for the new high school, will be used to "serve a private 80-home development." While, an 80-home development was mentioned in the deed the school signed for the Marion Center property, it is by no means a given development. This project hasn't even been proposed to Marion Township.

Even if it is in the future, this possible 80-home development must be subject to the same sort of rigorous inspection by the township as was given to the school.

The preservation group maintains a school will be the driving force behind growth and development in Marion Township. This is not entirely true; it must be understood that all commercial and residential growth in any municipality is subject to that municipality's zoning laws.

This means the community, through its elected boards and commissions, can control the amount of growth and the type of growth in the area. Growth is further controlled through the use of tough zoning laws and careful planning for the future.

If this preservation group is really concerned about growth as it states it is, then why doesn't it concentrate its energy on making sure Marion Township has tough zoning laws and is ready for any proposed developments in the future? Instead it only concentrates on a school issue that has already been decided upon by the citizen-elected local government and is supported by a majority of voting public, as was seen in the passage of a school bond and the failure of a school board recall.

It is time for this so-called preservation association to quit forcing the citizens of Charlevoix into this school issue. The citizens have already made up their minds on this issue and this group should learn to respect that.

Do airplanes really make your trip faster?

Edith Gilbert
'Behind the news'

Charlevoix does not need a "Visitor's Go Away Convention Bureau" — we've got the airlines!

All people are talking about these days is who got stranded, where and for how long. Let me give you four examples that happened this week to people in my neighborhood.

My neighbors, the Heises, waited for their 11-year-old niece, Lauren Hunter, who was traveling alone from Omaha, Neb. a few days ago.

She was stuck in Chicago for 12 hours, but fortunately she was under the care of Traveler's Aid and the child was well taken care of. Don Heise said that putting her under the care of this helpful service was the best $60 they ever spent.

The Millers, my neighbors down the block, expected two families of 12, including small children and baby-sitters to arrive last weekend from Chicago. The plane was overbooked and after several hours of delays, the entire group had to cancel their trip.

Jayne Nussbaum, age 17, is visiting the MacArthurs across the street. She spent 9 hours in Chicago on her way here from New Jersey. Her plane took off for Traverse City, but turned around just ten minutes before they were due to land. It seems the radar equipment was not working.

Finally my sister, Margot Smith, used her frequent flier miles to visit me. Her San Francisco plane left 20 minutes late at 11 a.m. and her plane from Houston left 8 hours late and when they arrived in Chicago the plane sat on the runway for 40 minutes.

Consequently she missed her Traverse City connection. Yes, she was offered vouchers to take a taxi and spend the night in a hotel, but all the hotels near the airport were filled. She was offered a hotel 25 minutes from the airport and there were no shuttle buses. Her voucher was good for a $25 cab fare, but the price of the cab to this far-away hotel was $49 each way.

To top it off, there were two long lines of travelers waiting for cabs.

One long line was for people with vouchers and the other long line was for people who were paying cash. Of course, the cab drivers chose to pick up the people who were paying cash and passed up the passengers in line with vouchers.

It is now 12 p.m. At this point my sister decided to select a hotel that is only 10 minutes from the airport that has a shuttle bus and to pay the $97 out of her own pocket, since she had to get up at 5:30 a.m. to catch the 6 a.m. shuttle to leave on her flight at 7:30 a.m.

So much for the voucher system! Although my sister says that all the flight attendants were pleasant, her advice is to be sure to carry your nightgown, toothbrush and medicine with you at all times. I haven't heard yet today what her flight home was like.

These four examples of people who all live within a stone's throw of me ought to be fair warning to everyone — stay home!

Letters to the editor

Why writer switched parties

Editor: With the completion of the August primary elections, the 2000 campaign season is in full swing. Remarkably, very few local office holders will be facing opposition in the fall. When I decided to run for re-election as the Charlevoix Township Treasurer on the democratic ticket, I became one of a minority of local office holders called upon to defend my record.

I have spent time discussing my decision to run as a Democrat with many voters of Charlevoix Township and I know I was entering uncharted territory. I realize that many voters will probably still have questions and I will try to answer them.

I have been working for the taxpayers of Charlevoix Township since 1987. At that time, I was chosen from an array of candidates by the same township board with whom I still work today. I believe that the board's decision to appoint me was due to the fact that my predecessor, Rose Bergmann, had asked me to be her deputy treasurer some time before that, I had been learning about the job with her guidance.

From that point, I faced the voters of Charlevoix Township for re-election three times. Each time, I ran on the Republican ticket without opposition. But, this year, I decided to run as a Democrat, not because I endorse every idea to come out of Washington and certainly not because I hold any contempt for the Republican Party. Simply put, my personal ideology lines up best with the Democratic Party, and, in spite of the fact that partisan politics seldom come into play at the township level, I believed that my constituents had a right to know. But, more importantly, I wanted to be able, in clear conscience, to support other independent-minded Democrats like Congressman Bart Stupak and State Representative Andy Neumann.

I have lived in this community for 17 years and thoroughly enjoy working for the citizens of Charlevoix Township. I know that the people of our community work hard to pay for things like rising health care costs and college tuition — I do too. That is why I have always made it my priority to be a good steward of township tax dollars, thereby helping to keep the tax burden low.

I think it is those qualities that the township board saw 13 years ago when it appointed me and that the voters have seen three times when I was re-elected.

Thank you for your support in November.

Questions on Big Rock cleanup

Editor: Some questions posed by Mike Winnell's letter, page A5 in the Petoskey News-Review July 28 letter to the editor need answers from not only the Nuclear Regulation Commission and Big Rock but also the Environmental Protection Agency, who protects the waters of the Great Lakes for us.

1) Are lake sediments in the discharge and adjacent areas scheduled for cleanup?

2) What is the radioactivity levels in those recently exposed areas of the lake and the deeper sandy sediments immediately in front of and adjacent to the plant?

3) Did the NRC take the mobile lab to any of these possible sites and test for radioactivity?

4) Finally, are these areas scheduled for cleanup, if not, why not?

When citizens are told that 95 percent of the area has been cleaned up they don't worry.

I had to learn of the so-called public meeting at Big Rock from down state persons as the paper was not notified here in Petoskey or Charlevoix.

More investigative reporting regarding these questions would be helpful.

Thanks

Editor: An open letter to my friends in northern Michigan:

On Aug. 5 Go! Multimedia had our first annual fund-raiser by putting on a film screening and concert at the Charlevoix Middle School. We had a wonderful time and most importantly we were able to successfully promote our work with area schools and arts organizations. We are already planning Go! Fest 2001 for late June.

It would have been impossible to pull off this kind of event without the assistance of the local businesses and individuals that donated their talents and services. The only part of the production that came with me from Chicago was the recording and video systems. Every other aspect of the show was covered by local talent.

Special thanks to Gary Grundman and everyone else at the Charlevoix Public Schools who went out of their way to make sure we had a venue, to Sound Resources in Traverse City for the sound and lighting equipment, to Northwest Academy in Charlevoix and Concord Academy of Petoskey for letting us move their studios and show them off, to Hawkeye Studios for showing their independent movie "Die Soft," and to the Crooked Tree Arts Center for their participation. Thanks to all of the performers: Norm Brecheisen, Jerrid Grubb, the members of Mural Project, the Incredible Edibles and Muniak, Parkish and Tache and to the individuals who provided invaluable contributions.

Finally a big thank you to all of the people who came out to help us raise money and have some fun. Your support is greatly appreciated.

City and board discuss this year's festival at meeting

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

This year's Venetian Festival got high marks from city officials.

This was the reported consensus after the Venetian Board convened with selected city officials August 3 to candidly discuss happenings of the 70th Annual Venetian Festival.

"We talked about everything from event one, day one to day eight, event 30," said Venetian Board President Dan Barron.

According to Barron the meeting had little to do with policy change, but rather functioned as a way to "get a feel" for how things went off in the opinion of city and festival administration heads.

"We have a joint meeting with the city staff prior to the festival to make sure we have a clear line of communication. Then we have a joint meeting after to critique how things went," said Barron.

According to Barron one issue discussed at the meeting surrounded parking related issues that proved relatively problematic during the course of the festival.

"In any eight day festival things are bound to go wrong, but overall the problems were minor and things went very well. This was an administrative meeting where we worked out some logistics so we can see how we will have to tweak things in the future to run even more smoothly," said Barron.

According to both Barron and City Manager Michael Wiesner, who also attended, everyone was thrilled with the festival and especially enjoyed this year's musical entertainment, fireworks display, Kid's Day and the Craft Court-yard.

Classic cars to rev their engines at Shanahan

BY JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

The Charlevoix Street Legends Classic Car Club will be hosting its eighth Annual Car Show Aug. 20, at Shanahan Field off of Old Orchard Road, a fundraising event to benefit numerous community organizations.

"The car show is the culmination of year-round planning, the proceeds are given to community organizations in the form of charitable donations. Last year we hosted some 140 vehicles. Owners bring the cars down filled with their families. The club provides a trolley system that takes them back and forth into town if they would like to go. Cars are secured and monitored by the Sheriff's Auxiliary," said club member Roger Nesburg.

The car show is part of an extended project organized and run by Classic Car Club members. Currently there are 45 members — mostly local residents.

According to Nesburg, not only do club members attend this show, but so do non-members who believe in the cause and enjoy showing the community the hard work they put into their automobile. The public is also permitted to attend free of charge.

"People come from all over, typically we have a group out of Grand Rapids, several others from down state and even out-of-state, but it all depends on the weather and travel conditions," said club member Roger Nesburg.

The event officially begins at 8 a.m., Aug. 20 when registration starts, but according to Nesburg, some people get there as early as 7 a.m. to secure their spot and start polishing up their cars.

BEACONS

By REV. DUANE NELSON
Charlevoix Church of the Nazarene

We have now reached our third and final aspect of God and the Bible.

The aspect is reliable. If God is real and His Word, the Bible, is relevant as discovered in a relationship with Him, then certainly He and His Word are reliable and something you can put your trust. We all need to trust in something; why not something which will not fail or break down - like God.

"Trust God from the bottom of your heart; don't try to figure everything on your own. Listen for God's voice in everything you do, everywhere you go; he's the one who will keep you on track." (Proverbs 3:5-6, TM).

Our world searches for reliable things and relationships. We tire of things breaking down and wonder how come people can't build a more stable product. Our hearts have been broken one too many times, because the relationships we've built have gone sour. Just give us reliability — PLEASE!

"Survivor" is a new show on CBS this summer which has developed a large viewing audience. Sixteen people initially were selected to participate in the competition to be the last one to survive and win one million dollars. They compete against each other in some sort of survival technique, like eating grubs, racing underwater or running through the jungle with a maze of ropes.

If you win, sometimes you get the privilege of avoiding the "tribunal council's" vote. So what do they vote to do? They vote to kick someone off the island.

The strange thing of it all is that you could be the strongest, kindest, most helpful to the group and still get voted off the island.

It could be said of the whole process that it is the "survival of the shrewdest." If you even hint at being a threat to someone else's chance to win the million, you are turned on, rejected and thrown aside without a second thought.

People you thought were your friends were only looking out for their own pocket books.

Yes, I know it is only a show and the whole idea is to do whatever to win the million. But, it seems much too close to life.

We deal with the same types of attitudes with our neighbors, co-workers and family. And it is often over circumstances far less than winning a million dollars.

We need the reliability of God and His Word. Whom are we fooling trying to achieve reliability without God? It can only be done with certainty in a relationship with God via His Son Jesus Christ.

May I offer you a challenge greater than anything offered on "Survivor." The next time people or this world fails you, try God.

Ask Jesus to forgive you of the sins you've committed, trust in Him from the bottom of your heart and find a church which will offer you instruction from the Bible. God and His Word's reliability will never fail throughout eternity.

OF BLESSINGS

Go directly to jail

Donors to the Charlevoix K-9 program and the Sheriff's Auxilliary got the chance to test out the new Charlevoix County Jail Aug. 11. For $35, donors were given a commemorative t-shirt, mug shot and got the chance to spend the night in the new jail. Left, Dennis Hall of Petoskey (on right) waits for his turn to get a mug shot, while Rev. Carl Litchfield of Boyne City looks on. Below, participants also got a chance to meet the deputies of the K-9 unit. (Photos by Jeremy McBain)

Registration is required for anyone who wishes to partake in the event. Those who wish to pre-register can pick up a form at the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce. The charge is $10, but on the day of the event, the registration fee rises to $12 per entrant.

"We invite all cars and trucks regardless of originality. We have had originals, street cars and modified/custom cars. When you register, your car is classified by designated judges into one of 32 categories. Trophies are then awarded based on classes," said Nesburg.

Festivities will kick off before Sunday, including the "Camp Quality Cruise," a club tradition taking place Aug. 18. This cruise is the first of two excursions club members will take with the cars.

According to Nesburg, this trip is a way for the club members to show the children afflicted by cancer a good time in a cool car. In exchange for the car trip, the kids use their vivid imaginations building custom cars or just their favorite cars out of cardboard for the club.

The second outing, Cruise Night 2000, starts at 4:30 p.m. on Saturday. Anyone downtown can check out these amazing machines as they make their way from Shanahan Field, around the lake and back into downtown Charlevoix, where the cars will line both sides of Bridge Street. The club has also booked "Smooth Move" for Saturday evening. Smooth Move will play 1950s, 1960s and 1970s rock and roll from 6 p.m. - 10 p.m. in East Park.

Sunday, during the car show, an auction will be given at which time the highest bidder could get a variety of automotive memorabilia, including everything from collector's model cars to actual car engines.

"Thursday night, the club members will pick a few of the kids' car designs and display them during the auction as stage props. We are auctioning off anything from parts and accessories to custom wheels for cars. There will be quite a few collector's pieces," said Nesburg.

On Sunday, refreshments will be available on-site and to add background tunes, 106-WKLT will be broadcasting live from the show.

Last year the event raised $1,000 for Camp Quality, $500 for the Charlevoix Area Hospital, $500 for Charlevoix County Hospice, $500 for the Charlevoix Senior Center, $500 for the Charlevoix High School, $250 for the Sheriff's Auxiliary and $250 for the Humane Society.

Club member Tom Eggers reflected on the importance of the event.

"The car show wouldn't go on if people in the community didn't donate their time, money and energy. All the money goes right back into the community. We are a family based club with great values, that's why we have hung in there so long. The community sees the benefit of the club and it's something positive to do with your hot rod," he said.

YOUR HEALTH

Spreading the facts about that rash

Edward Newcomb
'To Your Health'

You have just had a wonderful weekend in Charlevoix, visiting the beach, walking the dunes and taking the dog for a walk through North-point woods, when you wake Monday in the morning you notice a little itchy area on your ankle.

Later in the day the other ankle starts to itch and when you take off your shoes after work, you notice a blistering rash on the back of both ankles. By the next morning, you have similar looking areas on your wrists and some behind your knees and you conclude that whatever it is, it seems to be spreading like wildfire and it's time to see your family doctor. You have poison ivy!

In our family practice office, as well as in the emergency room, one of the more frequent problems of the summer is poison ivy. I have become aware of how much misinformation people have regarding this itchy condition which hopefully this article will correct.

Poison ivy is an "Allergic Contact Dermatitis," that shares common characteristics to Poison Oak and Poison Sumac, only poison ivy being common in our area.

Urticaria is the chief allergen that is found in the resinous sap located in the leaves, stems and roots of this plant. When this compound comes in contact with your skin, a "chemical reaction" begins and within 24-48 hours the rash starts to appear. You may also be exposed to the chemical indirectly through clothing, pets or tools that have the resin on them or by exposure to smoke from burning brush of logs that have the resin on them. Once the rash begins you may continue to notice new spots for 3-4 days then the rash resolves over 10-20 days.

One misconception is that poison ivy "spreads." Poison ivy gives the illusion of spreading because you will break out with new spots for several days. Depending on how sensitive you are to the resin and how much resin you are exposed to determines how quickly and how extensively you break out. The rash is not spreading up your leg, it just took the rash a little longer to show up in one area over another. Once you have washed your skin with soap and water, the resin is gone and no further contact of your skin with the chemical is possible and therefore no "spreading" can occur.

This is the same explanation I use to convince people that this rash is not contagious. Soap and water remove the chemical, therefore the chemical reaction can never start on mere exposure to the rash. It's OK to hug someone with poison ivy.

We advise patients not to scratch poison ivy, not because it causes it to spread, but because scratching can lead to secondary bacterial infections. For the same reason I recommend that patients don't swim until the lesions are healed to lessen the chance of infection.

There are a few things you can do to prevent poison ivy. Foremost is to know what the plant looks like so you can avoid it. If you come in contact with the plant or it's resin, washing with soap and water immediately will either prevent the rash or certainly lessen its severity making ing sure to wash under the fingernails as well. Wash pets, clothing or tools that have come in contact with the plant too.

Once the rash starts there are a few helpful treatments.

Using a drying agent, such as calamine lotion to the blisters may help dry them, but once the blisters are gone, avoid these drying agents.

Topical cortisone creams available over the counter may be used on areas where the skin is not broken or blistered. Oral diphenhydramine (Benadryl) can help the itching, but may cause sedation. For more severe outbreaks, where the face is involved or a large portion of the trunk or extremities are covered, more aggressive treatments can be used such as cortisone-like medicines available by prescription.

You should see your doctor if you have a severe case or if you are concerned about complications such as infection.

Dr. Edward E. Newcomb, MD, can be contacted at the Pine River Medical Center located at 14734 Park Avenue in Charlevoix. His phone number is (231) 547-6558.

Emergency tube can help in case of fire

Firefighters and other response teams can quickly access critical information about your farm if you take advantage of this new "Emergency Tube" idea developed by a Soil and Crop Improvement Association.

The 2-inch diameter, 12-inch long weather-tight plastic tube is designed to mount on the main electric meter pole of the farm. The tube has a reflective label that makes it highly visible to emergency crews. The idea is to enclose a map of the farmstead that lists the location of tanks, pesticides, compressed gas and other hazards, electrical breakers, available sources of water, location of livestock and machinery, etc.

It was started as a pilot project and has sold several thousand of the units. The response from firefighters and farm safety groups across the United States and Canada has been supportive.

Big Rock continues its work toward a clean site

By JEREMY MCBAIN
 Editor

According to Consumer's Energy officials, the Big Rock nuclear power plant's decommission is going smoothly.

The plant, built in the early 1960s, was shut-down in 1997 and is currently being slowly disassembled as Consumer's Energy attempts to return the site along Lake Michigan back to its natural state, or as close as possible.

"Our top priority here is safety. We have gone 23 years without an employee missing work from an injury," said Big Rock Public Affairs officer Tim Petroskey.

In order to keep things safe and do the job correctly, Petroskey said the process to decommission the plant is long and tedious.

But, the shut-down has generated quite a few questions from environmentalists, the latest surrounding radioactivity on the site and the storage of radioactive dry fuel from the plant.

"If you are out wandering the property, you have no idea what you are walking on," Mike Winnell, of the Northern Chapter of Don't Waste Michigan said. "I personally would not wade in the water in front of that plant. I personally don't know the load there."

However, Winnell added, "I think they (Consumer's Energy) are doing the best they can."

To address these concerns, the entire area surrounding the nuclear power plant must be studied and surveyed. A team was designated to research this and determine how much radioactivity is on the site.

This team must get an initial radiological evaluation of the site and a radiological historical site assessment. At this time, 70 percent of the site has been surveyed for the initial evaluation and the historical site evaluation is complete.

According to Kenneth E. Pallagi, deputy manager of the plant, this survey has not found radiation over the federal regulations in any area they did not expect to find radiation. Federal regulations require that an individual visiting the site, after the cleanup, will not receive more than 25 millirems of radiation a year.

To put this in context, Pallagi said the average person receives

100 millirems a year just living in their home.

Pallagi added the equipment used in this survey is so sensitive it can pick up faint traces of radiation that fell into the ground in Charlevoix from the Chernobyl nuclear accident in the 1980s.

This survey also included the shoreline, out into the water of Lake Michigan and a discharge canal coming from the plant.

According to Petroskey, testing on all of these sites also showed radioactivity at 25 millirems or less.

"We have 1.5 miles of shoreline (to study) and we have been going up and down it. All of it looks good. It will all meet release criteria," he said.

The next big question on the minds of environmentalists is the storage of the dry fuel casks.

According to law, the federal government must store the dry fuel. However a site to store the fuel has not been finalized, so the fuel will be stored on the Big Rock site for the time being.

Big Rock answers questions about cleanup

BIG ROCK

This highly radioactive dry fuel will be stored in what is called a "dry fuel cask," said Haas. The cask is made of 29 inch thick concrete covering an inner cask, which in turn covers a sealed basket containing the fuel.

Seven casks will be used to store 441 fuel bundles from the facility.

The casks are leak-proof and the hot fuel is cooled by airvents in the bottom and top of the outer cask. Haas said there are no moving parts, there is not electricity going to them and the fuel is well-sealed and protected from the outside world.

For added safety, the casks will be monitored and all security measures will be taken, Haas said.

Petroskey added, "These (casks) are proven technology. This actually increases safety because they are passive."

Winnell responded, "Those dry casks are going to be out there for a long time. Once the federal government moves it off the property, it is the responsibility of the government. Until that issue is resolved, those dry casks are going to sit out there. Who knows how long they (the casks) will last?"

The fuel is expected to be moved into these casks sometime in late 2001 or early 2002.

The other issue on the minds of environmentalists is the removal of the reactor in Big Rock.

According to Gerald B. Slade, project manager for BNFL Inc. — a company Consumer's Energy has hired to move out the large pieces of the plant — the reactor is 30 feet long, 11 feet in diameter, weighs 300 tons and is very radioactive.

The reactor will be placed in a specially made steel container that is 3 to 6 inches thick. The container will then be placed on a special flatbed trailer to be transported to a waiting railcar near Petoskey and then transported to a storage facility in Barnwell, S.C.

This will all be done very slowly,

"All of it looks good. It will all meet the release criteria."

Tim Petroskey,
Big Rock Point Public Affairs

ly, stressed Slade. The truck and trailer carrying the reactor will travel at a maximum speed of 5 miles per hour. This means the trip from Big Rock to Petoskey will take about 12 hours.

For safety, the plan will involve local police and government agencies, Slade said. The transportation of the reactor is slated to take place in late 2002 or early 2003.

In response to this plan, Winnell said, "That's crazy. They are going to deny any possible accident scenario, but if it were going to happen it would be a disaster."

Since the State of Michigan licensed Reus in 1983, we have remained a pleasant, affordable community caring for ambulatory seniors. By providing more than an assisted living facility and by avoiding the expense and environment that usually is associated with nursing homes and hospitals, Reus with its wealth of experience is still the choice of discriminating families.

For more information on our private rooms and other amenities please call weekdays, 9:00 a.m. to 3:00 p.m. or visit Reus anytime.

Charlevoix boy continues his grandfather's hobby

BY JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

At the age of 13, Charlevoix native Tyler Bier looks to be another talented artist of the Bier lineage carrying on his late grandfather's clay piggy-bank design.

"His grandfather, Ray Bier, passed away and wondered who would carry on the tradition. He was very special to the kids and was known for his piggy banks," said Tammy Bier, Tyler's mother and co-owner of the Ray Bier Art Gallery.

Tyler learned he had a knack for working with clay as early as preschool.

"He's played in clay a lot. He started at 3 or 4," said Tammy.

Tyler has since received artistic instruction from both his parents and in school, where his teachers instructed the aspiring artist.

This entrepreneur has developed a system of his own that follows in his grandfather's design.

First Tyler rolls out the clay on a slab roller. Next, the clay is draped over a round form. A couple of clay circles are joined to form the body of the pig. After the body has been fused Tyler adds special features of the animal — the ears, eyes, nose and feet, the tail goes on last. The animals are dipped in a high fire glaze and loaded into the kiln.

According to Tyler, he adds to each his own special touches like, different colored spots and eyes giving every piece a unique character.

"We've gotten calls at 10 a.m. Saturday when the kiln loads come out from people waiting to buy a piggy bank. They usually sell out by Sunday," said Tammy.

Tyler held a demonstration of his unique piggy bank creation process on Aug. 12 at the family gallery off of US-31 and will be hosting a second demonstration session the weekend of Apple Fest. For $16 you can own a Tyler Bier original piggy bank.

Tyler will be an eighth grade student at Charlevoix Middle School in the Fall.

For more information on Tyler's piggy banks call the Ray Bier Art Gallery at (231) 547-2288.

Weisner: This summer's festival 'well received'

"They've got a good formula. It worked and it was well received," said Weisner.

Barron said, "We are ecstatic about all the chair people who did such a sensational job and pulled off the festival beautifully. This is very gratifying and is cause for optimism in terms of future (Venetian) festival success."

Barron noted that the Venetian Board meets every two weeks throughout the year, not counting committee meetings. Then starting in June they are planning to meet once a week until the festival commences. It is during these meetings that policy, refining and expansion issues are addressed.

Voters narrowed candidate field for November and decided on proposals

BY JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

In the primary election Aug. 8 Charlevoix County voters showed their support for a number of state and county officials — winners will now move on to the November election ballot.

Running for state senator is incumbent Republican candidate Spencer Abraham who received 1,859 votes in Charlevoix County. Spencer will be challenged by Democrat Debbie Stabenow who received 664 votes cast in the county-wide primary.

Looking to be elected to the position of Representative in Congress for District 1 is Republican candidate Chuck Yob who received the greatest number of votes for this position, 1,599. Yob will be challenging incumbent Democratic candidate Bart Stupak, who was awarded 725 votes and the Democratic nomination for the position. Stupak beat fellow Democrat Sven Johnson who took 56 votes.

Running for the 106 State House seat, which covers Charlevoix County, is incumbent Democratic candidate Andy Neumann of Alpena who received 701 votes. Neumann will be opposed in the November election by Charlevoix resident and Republican candidate Francis "Brownie" Flanders who received 1,677 votes in the primary.

Charlevoix's unopposed incumbent commissioners, all Republican, to appear on the ballot include: Carl R. Price representing District 1; James C. Behling, District 2; Phillip R. Johnson, District 3; Victor R. Patrick, District 4; Donald R. Smith, District 5 and Shirley J. Roloff, District 6.

Republican incumbent Sheriff George T. Lasater, who received 1,903 votes, will be challenged in November by Democratic candidate Edward R. Johnson, who received 417 votes in the primary.

Charlevoix County officials currently running unopposed, who will appear on the November ballot include: County Clerk Jane Brannon, treasurer Joan Balch, register of deeds Charlene Novotny, prosecuting attorney Mary Beth Kur and surveyor Mary Feindt — all Republican.

In Charlevoix Township, Democratic nominee for treasurer, Theda Williams, received 36 votes in the primary. Williams will be challenged by Republican write-in Margo Johnson who took in 38 votes.

Also in Charlevoix Township, longtime Republican supervisor Oscar Stroud again saw local approval of his post receiving 181 votes to the 51 cast in favor of Republican James G. Feidler and 35 in favor of republican candidate Richard W. Stangis.

Voters in both Peaine and St. James townships voted on proposals beyond those to be applied county-wide.

In Peaine township the vote was 31 to 30 in favor of Proposal B permitting the township to increase the general operation tax levy by 1.2916 mills.

A second Proposal B accepted by voters of Peaine township, 30 to 29, allows the township to increase property taxes by .9025 mill to provide funds for the operation and maintenance of the Waste Management transfer station.

In St. James township votes were tallied at 42 in favor of restoring .1115 mill for general operations rolled back by the Headlee Amendment a small margin of victory, 38 voted against the restoration.

Voters in St. James township denied the implementation of Proposal B, a millage increase for airport operations and maintenance, 38 for the increase and 42 against the increase.

Proposal C passed in St. James township, renewing the existing .6115 mill allocated to landfill operation and maintenance and restoring the .1997 mill rolled back by the Headlee Amendment by a vote of 45 for the increase and 35 against it.

Recycling and senior mills passed by voters on Aug. 8

BY JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Passage of a .4 mill county tax levy for seniors and a .15 mill county tax levy for the implementation of recycling programs has left the Commission on Aging and the Charlevoix Recycling Committee breathing a sigh of relief after the Aug. 8 primary election.

The senior citizen millage was accepted by 2,100 voters, a landslide victory over the 870 who voted not to accept the proposal. Revenue will not be generated from the senior tax levy until 2001.

"I was very relieved and pleased to see all the support. We will be able to grow and get more support staff. The tax money generated will help fund: A chore service for seniors — which includes lawn care and snow removal, home-makers and respite expansion, improved training for nurses' aids, in-home foot care and medication management," said Sue Bergmann, director for the Commission on Aging.

Locally, there has been concern voiced by the Charlevoix Senior Center as to how the millage is going to benefit their organization.

According to Bergmann the Commission on Aging already provides operational support for East Jordan's and Boyne City's Senior Centers. In order for Charlevoix to receive this same operational funding, the center must comply with state regulations including filling out the proper paperwork.

"They (the Charlevoix Senior Center) could get operational support if they agree to comply with the Commission on Aging. I believe many seniors in Charlevoix want to see united support," said Bergmann.

The Commission on Aging will be moving its office Aug. 21 from its present location in Boyne City to 201 Antrim Street in Charlevoix.

The environment will also be receiving increased attention as voters county-wide agreed to accept a second tax increase to help temper the county's solid waste output through recycling. The proposal was accepted by a narrow margin as 1,758 voters said yes to recycling, while 1,173 voters said no.

The forms can also include information about your household, such as where the bedrooms are, where the kids are supposed to be and can also pinpoint where your most valuable items are, so if the rescue team has time to save only one item they know what to go after.

It is important to keep the information updated every year. It is suggested to mount the tube on the meter pole because that is where firemen have to go to shut off the main power.

Community groups and farm organizations are encouraged to take the Emergency Tube on as a project in cooperation with local firefighters and other sponsors.

Sale of a single tube is discouraged to inquiring individuals. The idea will not work unless all local rescue teams are aware of it, according to the Soil and Crop Improvement Association.

Charlevoix seniors and recyclers to benefit

"This is a project that will grow. Maybe we will start out only recycling 20 percent of our waste. Ideally that percentage will increase to 50. That is 50 percent that will not go to a landfill. We never claimed that recycling is free, but the Earth is worth it," said Charlevoix Recycling Committee member Nancy Ferguson.

According to Recycling Committee member and County Commissioner, Shirley Roloff, a site has already been chosen in Boyne City however, a site for Charlevoix has yet to be decided on.

"Two possible locations in Charlevoix are over by Ole-son's (market) or over by the new jail. We will meet Aug. 16 to look at all the contracts and finalize details. We hope to be started by Sept. 1," said Roloff.

Sheriff cleared, but not without being chastised

SHERIFF

"Clearly, Sheriff Lasater should have turned this and other information over to the prosecutor, but based on the incredibly poor record keeping by Sheriff Lasater, it is impossible to prove this charge beyond a reasonable doubt. While it is highly suspicious to me that Sheriff Lasater had exculpatory information that was not turned over to the prosecutor, again the burden of proof of beyond a reasonable doubt would be very difficult to meet in court," Krause stated in her letter.

Lasater responded in his written statement, "My efforts in this case were honorable and making every attempt to protect innocent senior citizens of Charlevoix County to the best of my ability. This was a very complicated case and yes, a few technical mistakes were made, but with no attempt to violate the system."

He further addressed this case, stating, "...if confronted with this type of case again, I would stand up and make every effort within the system to protect citizens. Law enforcement officers, stand up to the challenge, take the heat, do our best, yes we make mistakes, we learn from these mistakes and move forward, this is our sworn duty, this is our job."

In summary, if anyone thinks I

"...if anyone thinks I would intentionally violate my badge, oath of office or the trust the citizens of Charlevoix County have bestowed upon me for the last 24 years as sheriff, they do not know me very well."

George T. Lasater,
Charlevoix County Sheriff

would intentionally violate my badge, oath of office or the trust the citizens of Charlevoix County have bestowed upon me for the last 24 years as sheriff, they do not know me very well."

In response to the Attorney General's action, McNeil said he is planning on suing Lasater.

"That man committed every civil right violation in mankind," McNeil said. "He is a perfect example of why the citizens of this country don't want to give up their guns. There is more coming to this show; this is just the opening curtain."

McNeil added he is trying to get as many people as he can to run against Lasater in the November election as write-ins. He said a recall campaign has also been started by the "Committee to Kick George Lasater Out of Office."

"We don't need that rogue sheriff in office. It is time for it to end," McNeil added.

This case started when McNeil was accused of cheating an elderly couple out of their property in Charlevoix County last year. He was charged with false pretenses — $20,000 or more and habitual offender — second offense and he was arrested by Lasater in October of 1999.

McNeil pled not guilty. The charges against him were later dropped by the prosecutor before the case went to trial.

McNeil's attorney, Donaldson, said, "(Lasater) was manufacturing evidence and turning what was favorable (to the charges against McNeil) over to the prosecutor and keeping what was unfavorable from the prosecutor."

Donaldson said he took his accusations against Lasater to Kur, who in turn, took them to the Attorney General's office for it to investigate.

"I believe the attorney general's office realized that there were problems and the sheriff's conduct was highly suspicious," he added. "I do believe they gave the matter their full and careful consideration and investigated all the facts."

Charlevoix Junior Golf program wraps up classes

New track

Workers put the finishing touches on renovations to the high school track last week. Work took about a month to complete and was paid for by donations. (Photo by Jeremy McBain)

The Charlevoix County Junior Golf program finished its season with a pitch, putt and drive contest recently, testing the skills of its participants.

Juniors were divided into three age groups: 10-11, 12-13 and 14-17 year olds.

Marty Joy, teaching professional at the Belvedere Golf Course, and who designed the competition, said he was pleased with the results.

"There were many outstanding performances, but the two that stand out were long drives by our advanced players. Chad DeKorte had two drives of 265 yards and Jennifer Rowe topped the girls by hitting one that measured 246 yards," he said.

Winners were:
•10-11 year olds — Trent Pallagi, putting; Kyle Smith, driving and chipping and overall winner.

•12-13 year olds — Lor Powers, putting; Cody Harp, drive; Adam Wager, chipping and overall winner.

•14-17 year olds — Kraig Wager, putting; Chad DeKorte, drive and overall winner; Arris Kinkbeiner, chipping.

After the competition, the juniors played the Belvedere course.

High School soccer team practice starts

The Charlevoix High School soccer team kicked off its new season at 6 p.m. Monday at Shanahan Field with its first practice. There are still spots available on the team and students are encouraged to join, regardless of experience. Physicals are required. For more information contact interim coach Tom Conlan at 547-2510.

Sunday race cancelled over rain threat that never came

A. Nony

'Yachting
Notes'

After all that talk, old man weather elected to exert his influence last Sunday morning. At the time the Slave Race was abandoned, it was raining. Who would have thought that, despite the cloud cover, all afternoon would be moisture free?

Still, the Fantastic Charlevoix Yacht Club (CYC) Treasure Hunt is just over a week away. Register by phone at 547-2000, by e-mail at josh@northlink.net, or at the CYC Friday evening. It's $15 for the boat and skipper plus $10 per person on board.

Pickup sailing orders between 1 and 1:30, Sunday, Aug. 27 and be at your assigned starting point on Lake Charlevoix by 2:30. If you're interested in the sail-only class, be sure to register early to insure at least four entries.

Gee, Summer Series is already past the halfway point! Lots of wind is the note on the score sheet and the fast elapsed times prove that point! HUSSY (yet again!) crossed first (7:06) and rates a First Overall with a time of only 1:04:53.

A minute later SUPERFLUOUS, then TOO RECKLESS — 2 seconds before SWINE FLEW! FIRST DATE, HIGH MAINTENANCE, ROCK STEADY, THUNDERSTRUCK, CRAZY HORSE, GECKO, H S MOISTURE MISSILE, JUBBLIES, PALEFACE LITE and HABANERO all crossed in rapid order. SCURRY and HOG-TIDE trailed them by 3 minutes.

In Division 1, SLAPSHOT screamed over at 7:18 and corrected at 1:06:55, a full five minutes better than KAMIKAZE, FLASH and GOTCHA! lagged by a minute or so with BLASEN IV back a good bit.

JESSE was the fastest P-26, crossing at 7:23 for an elapsed time of 1:08:33 — JUST ONE SECOND ahead of TIRELESS. LOST VERMONTER, ORIGINAL SIN, CYGNUS & SANDPIPER each came in spaced a minute apart.

MI-JOY is back up to her old form at 1:09:10, 3 minutes better than BALD EAGLE. M 3 was just a few seconds behind but had a nice lead over J HAWK and SAFFRON.

APOTHECARY won the Jib and Main Fleet; by 13 minutes over HIGH SEAS.

After the fifth race of the Series, assuming every boat uses one of its permitted two drops:

Division 1: GOTCHA! and KAMIKAZE 8, SLAPSHOT 9, FLASH 13, MINT JULEP 17 and BLASEN IV with 21.

Division 2: MI JOY a perfect 4, M 3, BALD EAGLE and BABE all at 11, J HAWK 16, and SAFFRON 20.

P-26: TIRELESS 7, LOST VERMONTER 9, JESSE 10, ORIGINAL SIN 13, CYGNUS 15, SANDPIPER 20.

JAM: APOTHECARY 5, CHEEMAUN, 8 and HIGH SEAS, 10.

J-22: HUSSY a perfect 3, RECKLESS and SWINE FLEW tied at 9, FIRST DATE, 18, SUPERFLUOUS, 20, MOISTURE MISSILE, 24, ROCK STEADY, 25, GECKO, 29, PALEFACE LITE, 36, HABANERO and CRAZY HORSE at 32, THUNDERSTRUCK, 42, HIGH MAINTENANCE, 43, JUBBLIES, 49, SCURRY'S HER NAME, 51, SCURRY 53 and HOG-TIDE, 62.

Preservation group sues over school site

LAWSUIT

"The township approval of the proposed new high school depends on a sewer extension from the City of Charlevoix, yet the impacts of sewer extension on land use and prime farmland were ignored," stated the release.

School Board President Allen Telgenhof responded to this allegation saying, "The land has been farmed for the last couple of years but it was not farmed for 20 years prior to that. The township found it wasn't prime farmland. In the lease with Mr. Martincheck he paid a nominal amount to rent the land. It's really not economically viable as a piece of farmland. I think the township considered this when coming to its decision."

"In regards to people's concerns as to the possibility of a strip mall being built out there: The land is still zoned agricultural, nothing we have done has changed the zoning. The township controls who can tap into the sewer and who can't. The extension itself doesn't cause anything that can't be controlled by the township."

According to the release, the environmental group seeks to mediate a potential sprawl issue that may result from a sewer extension like that proposed to provide waste disposal at the site.

"There is a proposal to run sewer out there and it would be able to serve additional properties. Beyond that to take a guess as to future growth that could take place...I really don't know," said Charlevoix City Manager Mike Weisner.

The release also references the school's role in creating sprawl.

In the opinion of the environmental group the document indicates that the sewer extension facilitates "hook-ups" from other retail outlets looking to capitalize on the market.

The release points to one such potential hook-up stating, "The schools will pay, with public-approved bond money, to bring sewer out to serve the school site and by a deed, promise, to serve a private 80-home development."

Telgenhof said, "The school will pay for a portion (of the sewer) and the city is involved as well. That was made public prior to approval of the bond proposal itself and it may be reimbursed through tap-in fees. Specialists made the public aware of sewer costs and I think the public is aware that a school will need utilities and that in the $20 million, some money will go towards that."

City Attorney Jim Young commented on the 80-home development issue stating, "The previous owner reserved an easement but there still has to be compliance with zoning. At its best this (80-home development) is speculation."

Telgenhof added, "All we've done is given them an easement which says the sewer will be sufficient to handle this development. Beyond that this sort of development is not in the school's hands."

The environmental group also speculates as to the school's plans for future development at the 74-acre site of the new high school.

"The district plans to eventually build more schools for the Charlevoix area on this site," stated the release.

Telgenhof responded, "We have the capability with 74 acres should a school board 25-50 years down the road so choose then they could carry out a project like this. We don't have a plan because we don't have a need. The township can control growth and the zoning is adequate to do so."

Beyond the 80-home development and potential future land use at the 74-acre parcel, the release also cites a potential industrial threat.

"The city recently announced that it hopes to locate an industrial park or lots near the school and to hook into this sewer extension paid for by the schools and constructed by the city. The school will be the driving force behind growth and development," the release stated.

City Manager, Weisner addressed the issue of an industrial location saying, "We've looked at industrial property in that area but we have no active discussions at this time."

With a second lawsuit beginning, many have questioned whether community tax dollars are funding attorney fees.

In response to questions surrounding funding for lawsuits against a public body like that of Charlevoix Public Schools, Young responded, "The normal rule is that insurance is only invoked if there is a claim for monetary damages."

According to Telgenhof this "normal rule" does apply in this case. "We do have insurance coverage. There may be other costs attributed though. When we acquire coverage down the road and see added premiums that will affect our rate. There is also a time cost for the board members involved. I don't know how you put a dollar value on the hours we've spent and will spend fighting this."

Young added, "The judge will decide whether the old wording in the township ordinance coupled with the extensive findings of the township are legally sufficient."

EVENTS IN BRIEF

About those coming events...

As a courtesy to readers, announcements of local coming events of broad general interest that arrive by the 10 a.m. Monday deadline are published in this section of the newspaper on a one-time, first-come, first-served basis. Because there is no guarantee of placement, readers should not rely on this free service as their only means of reaching the public.

Mid-week service

Christ Episcopal Church in Charlevoix (at the corner of State Street and Clinton Street) has started a mid-week service of Holy Communion at 12:15 p.m. on Wednesdays. The service was planned to last approximately 30 minutes so that it could fit into the lunch time schedules of business people in town. In the quiet beauty of Christ Church, this time of worship can provide spiritual refreshment in the midst of an otherwise busy week. Anyone who has received Christian baptism and is eligible to receive Communion in their own congregation is welcome to partake of the bread and wine at this service.

Boating safety and seamanship

Dates have been set for the fall boating Safety and Seamanship Classes of the United States Coast Guard Auxiliary. The classes will be from 7 p.m. until 9 p.m. on Tuesday evening at the Acacia Mooring Building, next to the Beaver Island Boat Company. Classes will start on Sept. 12, and end on Oct. 24. Instruction is free, but a nominal fee will be charged for study and work books. Interested parties should contact John Ilasenko at (231) 626-7312 or Chuck Goebel at (231) 547-5430.

Grief recovery program

Beginning Sept. 7, there will be a weekly program on Grief Recovery with the Rev. Buzz Walls, Hospice Spiritual Advisor, at the Boyne City Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, 777 Vogel St., in Boyne City.

Each Thursday from Sept. 7 through Oct. 5, the group will meet from 4:30 to 6 p.m. at the church. The program is sponsored by the Charlevoix County Hospice, Inc., Charlevoix Area Hospital, Northwest Michigan Community Health Agency and the Northern Michigan Community Mental Health.

Anyone interested in attending the program is asked to call the Hospice office at 536-2842 to register. Class size is limited to 10. There will be no admittance after the first night. There is no charge to attend.

Northern Lights Celebration

St. Marys of Charlevoix announced the fifth annual Northern Lights Celebration Dinner/Dance Auction on Saturday, November 4th. The theme for this year's event will be "Mardi Gras." disorders. She will follow up the program with a question and answer period. Anyone with a sleep disorder is welcome and that includes family members and friends. Refreshments will be served. Please bring your CPAP/BIPAP machine for a pressure check. Questions? Call Sharon Smorch (231) 487-5337.

Brain injury support group

The new Tip of the Mitt Brain Injury Support Group, affiliated with the Brain Injury Association of Michigan, is meeting at Charlevoix Area Hospital. Child car seat program in part is sponsoring the Child Car Seat Bounty Program. They offer $10.00 toward the purchase of a new infant/child's car seat through August 31. This effort is to encourage you to replace or get rid of your old child/infant car seat that is older than six years old, has been involved in an accident, or has an unknown history (such as being bought at a garage sale), plus additional incentives for each infant/child car seat turned in by Emmet or Charlevoix county residents that meet the above criteria. Work halted on school site Group gets temporary restraining order granted

The Charlevoix Area Hospital

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Ground-breaking ceremonies scheduled for Aug. 21 at the site of the new high school were canceled due to a temporary restraining order granted by 33rd Circuit Court Judge Richard Pajtas Monday morning.

The order was requested by Traverse City Attorney Jim Olson, representing the interests of the Charlevoix Area Natural Resources Preservation.

"We were issued with a temporary restraining order so we had to cease construction activities until next week. We don't want to do anything in violation of the law so we called it off," said John Sturock, Superintendent of Charlevoix Public Schools.

A hearing is scheduled for Aug. 29 when each side will present its case and the judge will make his ruling.

Judge Richard Pajtas granted the environmental groups request for a temporary restraining order based on two factors, one of which could have been avoided if proper procedure had been followed by the school district.

"There was a motion for a (temporary restraining order) and no response was issued by the other parties, although a copy was issued to them last week. I set aside some time next week to hear the hearing and to see if the case will be converted into a preliminary injunction," Pajtas said.

Sturock responded on behalf of the schools saying, "Our attorneys didn't file some information so that is why (Pajtas) set a date for the hearing in such an expedient manner."

According to Judge Pajtas a second factor influencing his grant of the temporary restraining order was maintaining "the status quo" of the land, so as not to alter any pertinent information applicable to the case.

Where is the Democratic Party in Charlevoix?

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

In the primary that took place Aug. 8 the majority of the candidates for local office ran unopposed on the Republican ticket — according to local Democrats this political reality may reflect community partisanship, but may also carry negative social ramifications.

"There is a perception that the Democratic party is dead (in Charlevoix) because of closet Democrats. (Carl) Levin, (Bart) Stupak and (Bill) Clinton were all carried in our county, that speaks to the number of closet Democrats. It's one thing to vote Democratic, but to be known as a Democrat would mean being a social outcast," said Charlevoix Democrat Kay Chase.

Comments heard from Theda Williams, Democratic candidate for township treasurer, conceptually coincide with those of Chase.

"I would like to see the county be more of a two-party county. I would like to see those like myself, who are Democrats at heart come out and say so," said Williams.

A single-party local election seems to be the trend Charlevoix is moving toward. However, Democratic ideals are based upon the ability of the electorate to choose from a multitude of candidates representing various ideologies.

As Democratic voters find their party to be underrepresented it has been argued that a single-party election has resulted.

"It is really sad because we truly have a single-party system in our county. We (the Democratic Party) have had to fight at every level," said Chase.

However, John Haggard, Chair of the Charlevoix County Republican Party, looks to the Democratic party's lack of campaigning as the source of their under-representation.

Crooked Tree to show 'Die Soft' movie on Saturday

Die Soft, a production of Hawk-eye Studios of Charlevoix, is set for its Emmet County premiere at 7:30 p.m. Saturday at the Crooked Tree Arts Center in downtown Petoskey. Tickets are $5.

Charlevoix residents CJ Winnell, Ben Macks, Keith Patrick and Nathan Dean established Hawk-eye Studios in December 1998. The four men say that the studio is "your dependable source for independent video productions."

The film Die Soft was originally an assignment at Charlevoix High School. It was begun as a spoof of the Bruce Willis Die Hard movies, but grew to poke fun at several other movies the producers had seen, including A Few Good Men with Jack Nicholson and Tom Cruise.

The storyline follows a Coast Guard Eel assigned to protect and deliver a rock — a kind of jewel — but a corrupt agent with the Eels is trying to steal the rock for his own. They don't like to go into many details, but say the movie is almost entirely comedy with a hint of drama and action.

It's rated PG because of a "little foul language and a little violence."

The world premiere of Die Soft took place during Charlevoix's Venetian Festival in late July to a sold out crowd.

City wants to sell vacant 9-acre property off Ferry Road

BY JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

The possibility of selling a city-owned, vacant, 9-acre parcel of land located off of M-66 by Stover Creek off of Ferry Road was discussed at the City Council meeting that took place Aug. 7.

According to Larry Sullivan of the County Planning Department the property selected as a possible candidate for sale was also looked at by the Knights of Columbus when they were looking to build a facility.

City Manager Mike Weisner commented saying, "We have had no specific offers but are getting the land appraised. One interested party would use the land as boat storage area."

At the meeting, the council discussed that if the city opted to sell the property an easement would be needed. Weisner addressed the purpose of the easement.

"There was a railroad spur owned by Medusa that splits the two pieces involved. There is also a deep ravine between the two pieces. If we can use the grade the property value is greater," said Weisner.

According to Weisner, this sale of city property is just another project in the many the city has in operation.

Supie Classic causing a stir over its male-only policy

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

A 22-year-old fund-raiser for the Charlevoix Junior Golf program has been causing some controversy recently.

Some area women are taking exception to the fact that the private Supie Classic golf tournament Aug. 28 at the Belvedere golf course is a male-only event, yet hole-sponsorships are being encouraged by both male and female-owned businesses. Plus, the program that benefits from the event, Junior Golf, is for both boys and girls.

Laurie VanLoo, a Charlevoix businesswoman who has expressed concern over the event, said, "I just feel it has traditionally been a male-only event, but probably for a lot of reasons that are no longer valid."

She said, unlike 22 years ago when the event started, Charlevoix has a lot more women golfers and women in business.

"Times do change over any given number of years and this has not," VanLoo said.

VanLoo added her criticism is not personally directed at any one person, but the event itself.

"To give them their due, these people work very hard to pull it off. I certainly don't mean to belittle that," she said.

Tom Bickersteth, one of the events organizers, defended the male-only aspect of the event saying, the intent of the event was a golf day for the men, followed by an elegant dinner with their wives and girlfriends at night.

"That is the way it has been for "Times do change over any given number of years and this has not."

Laurie VanLoo,
Charlevoix businesswoman

22 years," he said.

Bickersteth added, the size of the event and that it takes place on one golf course also limits the number of players that can be involved, thus excluding women. With too many people in the tournament, the four person teams have to start earlier and earlier in order to be finished in time for dinner at night.

"We just don't have the room," he said. Bickersteth said he expects around 80 men to participate in this year's event, making about 20 to 22 teams on the course already.

Bill Supernaw, another organizer of the event said, "There is no organized effort to keep (women) out." He added, if women really want to take part in this tournament, then they could start their own on another course at the same time in connection with the Supie Classic.

"Women need to get a little ambitious and do their own event," Supernaw said.

According to Supernaw, the Supie Classic started 22 years ago as a golf outing and backyard cook-out with a group of local men. The event raised some money, which was given to various organizations around town, he said. As the golf outing grew over the years, it began to focus its attention on the Charlevoix Junior Golf program and became the main fund-raiser for it.

To be in the event, golfers pay $130 apiece and start signing up in early August. Closer to the event, participants for the event are chosen by the organizers and invitations are sent out.

The $130 fee covers golf, breakfast, lunch and a very elegant dinner for two. For further support of the event, local businesses sponsor holes on the course. There is also an auction in connection with the event that helps raise money.

According to Bickersteth, last year the Supie Classic raised between $6,000 and $9,000 for junior golf.

"This program was named the sixteenth best program in the United States for the Junior Golf program. (The Junior Golf) program has helped about 1,000 kids in this community," Bickersteth said.

OPINIONS

Political intolerance must be stopped

What started out as a simple feature piece on the actions of a political party in Charlevoix has turned into a disturbing portrait of intolerant hostility in this community.

This week, the Charlevoix Courier is running a story about the Democratic Party in the county.

We came up with the idea after noticing a lack of people running on the Democratic ticket in the primary. We wanted to know, "Is the Democratic Party dead in Charlevoix?"

The story started out as a basic puff-piece about the party — or lack of it — in Charlevoix. But, as soon as we started talking to people, we realized the story changed.

The story turned into one about people who are actually afraid to publicly state their political beliefs and the insulting remarks they get when they do go public.

A democracy in America is based on the idea that people have different political beliefs and are welcome to express them in public, without the expectation that they will be condemned or punished for doing so.

But, in Charlevoix, some people calling themselves Republicans have forgotten about this right.

In Charlevoix, these people have even stopped their fellow community members on the street — who happen to be known Democrats — to yell at them and outright insult them.

Charlevoix Democrats we have spoken with — those who were brave enough to speak on the record — have said they have been called, "immoral," "anti-Christian" and even "un-American."

To call people these names just because of their political beliefs is not only rude but is a sign of intolerance of other beliefs. Just because you are a Democrat does not mean you are any of these names.

First of all, there are just as many Christians in the Democratic Party as in the Republican — and religion really shouldn't come into play in the political process. No one party can be called immoral. And lastly, it is very American to be a member of any political party.

Currently, this country has a problem with getting its citizens to vote or run for political office. People are too apathetic these days and don't want to take the time to get involved.

However, in Charlevoix we have many people willing to get involved in the political process, in all areas of the political spectrum. But, now we have some people insulting others because of the stance they take.

This is simply wrong. If you meet someone with a different political view than yours, congratulate them on becoming active and welcome them to the game of politics.

By insulting these people and acting intolerant, you make your own political party look bad.

Those spots on your leaves are natural and harmless

Roger Knutson

'Ear to the ground'

We are at the time of the year when nearly all the productive activity of deciduous tree leaves is finished.

They may look healthy and green, but they have done their thing and are no longer making a contribution to the life of the tree. If you look closely they are already preparing to fall off; with this summer's drought, some already have.

If they could think, they would be thinking of retirement and possibly looking forward to interment, preparatory to becoming part of another tree in a couple of years.

If you have maple trees growing near you it is time to look carefully at the leaves. There are six species of maples native to Michigan and two others from Europe that are frequently planted, but for now we will only look at the two kinds most likely to be in your Charlevoix yard or streetside.

Sugar maples have been planted by the hundreds in Charlevoix and many more have become established from the bushels of seeds that they shed each year. If you refrained from mowing your yard for a few years, it would likely become a thicket of young sugar maple seedlings and would eventually return to the forest that covered much of Michigan before Europeans arrived. By this time of year, sugar maple leaves have just begun to show the color we expect in September. The red has been there all year, but it doesn't show up until the green color disappears.

If the leaves of your tree have dime-sized black spots on them by now, then you have a Norway maple. The spots are caused by a fungus that only attaches itself to Norway maples. You could think of it as a disease, but one that doesn't cause much of a problem.

Remember, by now the leaves have done all they will do for the tree and are senescent. Some years, like this one, the spots are sufficiently obvious and abundant to cause tree owners concern. Be assured that no Norway maple ever died or was even seriously harmed by this fungus. If you can consider the black spots as an additional ornament, rather than a blemish, you will probably be happier.

Please don't spray the tree with anything. By the time the spots appear, it is already too late to do anything about them and spraying your shade trees all year-round, as is done with orchard trees is not only uneconomical, it is unwise. You would be treating a problem where no problem exists.

The leaves on a deciduous tree are more like the ends of your fingernails or your hair than they are like your fingers or arms. The leaves function for a few months and then are discarded, as your hair and fingernails are. The fungus on your Norway maple is just using some of the leaf's resources that are no longer of use to the whole tree.

The whole tree is a richer place because there are many kinds of organisms; the more, the merrier. The fungus on the leaves of Norway maples reminds us of that richness. The world benefits not just from more kinds of trees, but from more kinds of things living on the trees. If only the creatures each one of us liked were allowed to thrive, the world would be poor indeed.

Include women in Supie Classic

Editor:

I fully support junior-golf in Charlevoix and across the nation. I feel Charlevoix County has an excellent junior golf program under the direction and organization of Dean Davenport. We have an intelligent and able group of people who organize a fund-raising golf outing called the Supie Classic. We have kind and patient instructors from the area golf courses and clubs. Without these people, junior golf would not exist in Charlevoix.

What I don't support is the fact that female golfers are not allowed to participate in the Supie Classic. Both men and women from Charlevoix area businesses are asked to donate money and time for the benefit of junior golf, but the women are excluded from playing in the golf outing. Recently, I was asked to sponsor a hole for $50. I gladly did it last year. This year when asked, I reconsidered my donation and have decided not to sponsor a hole.

Why is my donation of $50 encouraged and accepted, but as a woman I am not welcome on the golf course that day? How does my $120 golf entry fee spend any differently than a man's? In a letter to the editor of the Charlevoix Courier on Aug. 9, eight youngsters involved in the program wrote to thank the instructors and organizers for having a junior golf program in Charlevoix County and for raising money for scholarships to send each of them to Ferris State University's golf academy. Do you think these kids care if the money that helped them learn or improve playing golf over the summer came from a man or a woman? No. They are simply grateful for an opportunity to learn and play a great sport.

This is a poor example for our young golfers, both boys and girls. It's a shame that the girls involved in the junior golf program as young women, will never get to play in the Supie when they get older. It is equally disturbing, in my opinion, to teach boys that its OK for men to participate in the outing, but that women should only volunteer their time and money and drive the beverage cart.

I realize that this is a privately organized outing and the committee has the right to invite or exclude anyone they choose to. However, the beneficiaries of this outing are young men and women in our community. For this very reason, I believe both men and women should be able to play in the Supie.

If you support and wish to promote this attitude toward women, then you should donate money to sponsor a hole and if you're lucky enough to be a man, play in the outing. If you believe that it's wrong to exclude women who simply wish to help benefit an excellent program in Charlevoix, then figure out a way to donate time, money or equipment directly to the program and bypass the Supie Classic, as I am forced to do.

Women should be included

Editor:

I write to express my disappointment with the current organizers of the Supie Classic golf tournament which, this year, will be on Aug. 28.

For many years, the Supie Classic has been a fun and enjoyable fund-raiser marking the end of summer. For the past several years the tournament has generated significant funds to support the junior golf program in our community.

This year, I understand the organizers refused a request for women to participate. It is true that through the years the Supie Classic has traditionally been a male-only event; with women participating only as beverage cart drivers ("beer dollies," if you will).

The organizers of the tournament, past and present, have never hesitated to solicit donations for this event from men and women alike, nor have they ever refused to accept money from a woman wishing to attend the dinner with her participating (male) mate. Additionally, I know local businesswomen who have in the past been happy to help underwrite the tournament with donations, but are declining to do so this year as a result of the continued refusal to allow female entrants; a policy they understandably find offensive in this day and age.

The funds derived from this tournament are not intended to benefit only junior male golfers; they are intended to benefit male and female golfers alike. If the Supie Classic is to remain a viable event in the long term and continue to provide substantial funds for our junior golf program, the organizers should consider pulling it into the Twenty-first century and truly making it a community event.

I feel certain they wouldn't dream of barring an entrant because of the golfer's race, skin color, occupation or political agenda.

This is not a competitive event sponsored by the men's PGA, it is a fund-raiser supported by community members of both genders.

Why, then, should it be acceptable for an entrant to be barred because she is a female?

I urge the organizers of the Supie Classic to reconsider this impossible obsolete stance.

Memories of McSawby

Editor:

One of our Native American elders, Mr. Louis McSawby, ended his earthly life. Mr. McSawby was a descendent of the McSawby family of the Charlevoix area. He lived 74 years and I was fortunate to know him for a few of these years. He was a quiet soft spoken family man who loved to read books, was an accomplished script writer and would rather walk or ride a bike instead of driving his car. He was a good man and seemed to give more to his world than he took from it.

He was a man who easily attained an Eagle feather for being a peaceful warrior as he left this life.

Whether you knew Louis or not or you want to learn more about what an Indian is, travel the trails in Mt. McSawby of Charlevoix. You will find Louis is the butterfly that flutters by, the gentle wind that stirs your soul, the gentle autumn rain, the gentle rush of birds in flight, the diamond glints on the snow or when the stars shine at night, in the healing sound of the waves of Lake Michigan, in the healing rays of the sun or when a solo eagle flies overhead.

Louis was a good man who left footprints on the hearts of all who passed his way. Good journey to a man who now flies with the eagles!

"Nature's Creatures, Large and Small" is the theme for the Auto Club's twenty-second annual "First A Friend, Then A Host" contest to promote less consumption of alcohol at holiday parties. This year, entrants must name their recipes after some creature from the animal world.

After initial review of all the entries, 15 finalists will be selected to mix their drinks at one of three regional mix-offs: Oct. 10 in Traverse City at the Clinch Park Zoo; Oct. 11 in Grand Rapids at the John Ball Zoo; Oct. 12 in Royal Oak at the Detroit Zoo. Judges in each city will evaluate the drinks on the basis of taste, appearance and creativity of the name.

Cash prizes are $500 for first-place; $250 for runner-up; $50 for honorable mention. Mileage expense to the contest site is reimbursed.

Pictures of all finalists with their recipes are published in a colorful booklet. The Great Pretenders Party Guide.

To enter, create a recipe for a flavorful party drink that does not include alcohol as an ingredient. Name the drink after some kind of animal, bird, fish, amphibian or insect. Type or print the name of the drink and your name, address and daytime and evening phone numbers at the top of an 8 1/2" X 11" sheet of paper. On the sheet, list the recipe ingredients and the correct measure of each to make four individual servings if it's to be served in a glass or one bowl if it's a punch. Use standard abbreviations for measures: oz=ounce; pt=pint; qt=quart; gal=gallon; t=teaspoon; T=tablespoon. Spell out any other measures and include specific mixing instructions.

You may enter as many recipes as you wish, but each must be on a separate sheet of paper. Mail your entry to Public Relations Department, AAA Michigan, 1 Auto Club Drive, Dearborn MI 48126. You also can fax entries to Drink Contest at (313)336-0986, or e-mail to LKeller@aamichigan.com.

The deadline for receipt of entries at AAA Michigan is Monday, Oct. 2, 2000.

Entrants must be Michigan resident, at least 16 years old. AAA Michigan employees and members of their immediate family are not eligible.

BEACONS

By REV. DUANE NELSON
Charlevoix Church of the Nazarene

(Editor's note: This article is the second of a three part series. Due to a mix up on the Charlevoix Courier editor's part, we ran the third part of this series last week, thus putting this one out of order. We apologize for the mix up.)

A few years ago while flying to a meeting, I met a young lady who was an editor/writer for one of the popular "For Dummies" books.

You've seen these books in the stores. They are the yellow ones trimmed in black. Since I have a interest in computers and have seen these books, we struck up a wonderful conversation. She informed me that they were just opening up this series to include more than just computers. She talked about "Cats for Dummies," "Investing for Dummies," and even "Fishing for Dummies."

This series of books doesn't prove the mental capabilities of Americans. It proves, more so, our need to find something relevant to our happiness and lifestyles.

In our trilogy of articles concerning God and the Bible, we now look at the second aspect - the Bible is relevant to our lives. (Aug. 2) we found that God was very real as we established a personal relationship with God through His Son Jesus Christ. The relevancy of the Bible in our lives reaches the same conclusion. Its relevancy will only be realized in a personal relationship with Jesus.

So how can this be? How can a book so old have anything to say about what we are going through in the dawning of a new millennium? What makes the Bible different than any of the other books of philosophy or self-help?

The above questions have been mentioned to me or voiced by me in my heart. What makes the Bible relevant?

Let's start with the basic. The Bible is a collection of 66 books and letters to groups of people. The authors of these books have various backgrounds. Several were royalty. Blue-collar and white-collar people have written. Some were fishermen by trade, tax collectors, doctors and even a murderer. The books range from historical to poetic, from first person to third in style. The Bible is the bestseller of all times. It has been translated in more languages than any other book. Yet what makes it so relevant?

The Bible is abundant with answers to daily living. In our society today, racism is a problem. The Bible tells us to love our neighbor as ourselves.

Poverty and those in need are prevalent today. We are told to feed the hungry, clothe the naked, and care for the dying.

Modern-day families struggle through fractured relationships. The Bible encourages parents to discipline their children but never to the point of exasperation; children to obey their parents and respect their elders; and husbands and wives to love each other as they commit themselves to serving each other while keeping the marriage bed pure.

It sounds practical and maybe not as old, but if it were relevant, the world and our lives wouldn't be such a mess at times, right?

To be perfectly honest, the Bible is a very intriguing piece of literature understanding the culture of the time and the different authors and is extremely practical for our community and families. But its relevancy will only take place when a person experiences a personal relationship with God through His Son Jesus Christ.

It's not magic or sitting through a series of brainwashing techniques. Each one of us has a genuine need for God which can be met when we sincerely seek Him with all of our hearts. When the need is met, the Bible will become relevant and will change the way we live and treat others.

So let me give you this challenge: Find a Bible, start with the book of John (look in the table of contents to find it), and listen with your heart.

If you don't have a Bible or the one you have you can't understand, call the church office at 547-5711 or e-mail me at pastor@charnaz.org. We'll mail one out to you, because we know how relevant the Bible really is.

Fisherman's Island gives visitors a scenic getaway

Julie Musilek
'Stepping out'

(Editor's Note: This is the first of a series of monthly columns by Staff Writer Julie Musilek about some of the sights around Charlevoix. Throughout the year, Musilek will try different activities in Charlevoix and visit new areas around town.)

Just five miles south of Charlevoix off of US-31 and Bell's Bay Road lies Fisherman's Island State Park, one of the largest state parks in northern Michigan, packed with scenic views and recreational opportunities to fit the needs of any nature nut.

Fisherman's Island State Park, situated just off Lake Michigan's shore, encompasses 2,678 acres of park spanning across both Norwood and Charlevoix Townships. This park is quiet and unmanicured, not for the pampered camper but has long been enjoyed by local hikers, swimmers, hunters, and fishermen.

Not only does Fisherman's Island State Park shoulder the vast sparkling blue water of Lake Michigan but it's also home to three crystal clear creeks: Whiskey Creek, Wood Creek and McGeach Creek. For fishermen and campers looking to catch dinner, this is a perfect opportunity to cast your line in search of scrumptious

The park is North Country at its best and is not an afternoon or an overnight destination for those not into "roughing it." The campsites have been dubbed rustic; they have no electricity or running water and hiking trails within the park are not groomed. You'll even notice when entering the park that the rangers office is lightless. This lack of modern day amenities is the perfect indication of the untamed sites that lie ahead.

Those looking to spend the night at the park are required to get a pass from the main office; you can also grab a useful trail map here. Camper passes cost $6 per night—a huge price break when comparing the park with other local lodging options in "civilization." Others just looking to poke around for the afternoon, can park at the end of Bell's Bay Road and cruise around on foot or by bike for free. If you've got a car load of kids and gear for the afternoon, you may want to consider paying the $4 fee for a day pass, then you can check out the land expanse without any transportation inconvenience.

A cool $20 will get you a yearly pass good for any state park in Michigan. In any case, if you choose to bring your vehicle into the park you will need to pay the piper.

Park is popular for camping in summer

PARK

Currently, the park is home to 84 rustic campsites each isolated from another and equipped with a picnic table and a fire ring. This campers' getaway attracts an estimated 28,000 campers for overnight or extended stays annually. Its beauty and fun attracts another 36,000 visitors yearly who spend the day discovering the wonders of nature.

The shoreline consists of a natural beach of fine sand, the perfect spot to indulge in pleasure walks, picnics and unsupervised swimming. To get to the main beach take the entrance road straight until the road ends. There is a designated parking area at this location and picnic tables and grills are situated in a dune setting.

Pack your picnic basket full of goodies minus any glass bottles; broken glass leads to some miserable barefoot strolls down the beach. Keep your eyes peeled for grouse, deer, rabbit, fox and according to DNR officer Rosco Howard even an occasional bear has been reported.

While kicking back in the afternoon sun, enjoying your lunch on the beach, notice picturesque Fisherman's Island just 100 yards offshore, within reasonable walking distance for an afternoon of nature discovery and breathtaking scenery. The island is an easy to reach retreat, a sort of natural sanctuary you can get to either by boat or by wading through shallow water.

Years like this one when water levels are low there is a land bridge between the island and the mainland making the destination just a wade away. After talking with DNR Officer Howard, boaters should proceed toward the island with caution; low water levels this summer are masking some pretty menacing boulders just below the water's surface.

As you wade your way towards the thickly vegetated island, check out the point extending out from shore reaching out toward the island. If you are a frequent visitor of the park you probably noticed in late April or early May that this area was fenced off. This fencing acts as a protective barrier to allow for nesting of the endangered wild fowl, the Great Lakes Piping Plover.

For campers, as the night winds down and the campfire is stoked, the following local legend of Fisherman's Island is sure to send shivers up your spines.

Legend has it, two fishermen named French and Martin had cabins on the island and made their living off the bounty of the lake. One day, one of the fishermen was found dead floating in a small boat. The other fisherman was never heard from again. It was never known if both died in a fight or if one murdered the other, sent his body adrift and took off.

Perhaps his spirit is still roaming the island.

On the less scary end of the spectrum, the island was also reported to have been an outpost for Mormons during the turbulent early days in Charlevoix's history. It was also a marine post office — passing schooners sent a dingy ashore to drop off mail.

Fisherman's Island State Park, with its rich history and wildlife, is a huge expanse of land full of excellent afternoon adventures and evening camping. Leave behind any off road vehicles — even mountain bikes are only permitted in designated areas. This park is a gem preserved for its generous and unique qualities meant for public enjoyment, to be used for simple scenery worship.

McDonald's opens doors at new location with new sign

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Numerous questions and rumors concerning the location and purpose of the new McDonald's site and the future use of the old facility have been making their way around town.

According to Tom Holka, owner of Charlevoix, Petoskey and Kalkaska McDonald's eateries, the new facility was needed to expedite customer service and the efficiency level at which the restaurant operates.

"The Charlevoix McDonald's building and many others are deteriorating and becoming inefficient so it was time to refurbish. The new building will be equipped with new drive-through technology with a speaker video screen making things more efficient for both customers and workers. When you say 'Big Mac Combo' on the screen and we will hear you really well," said Holka.

Beyond the need for technological modifications Holka also spoke of the location as being a more central site. He hopes the new store, just a block away from the old location, will attract even more customers.

"The new location is closer to the corner, maybe we will see more action. We are not moving just for the money, but it will really benefit customers and workers," said Holka.

Upon proposing the original McDonald's franchise, local group "Keep Charlevoix Beautiful" protested the traditional use of the golden arches, utilizing the Charlevoix sign ordinance, originally composed by the planning commission in 1982, as their basis for dispute. The group felt the internally lit large plastic sign did not fit with the community's character. The old franchise accepted the regulations stipulated in the sign ordinance and installed a small wooden sign that presently sits in front of the old location.

President of Keep Charlevoix Beautiful, Joann Curtis explained the aim of the group, "Keep Charlevoix Beautiful feels committed to the identity of Charlevoix and how individuals living here and visiting view the pleasantness of the streets."

The old McDonald's sign was not used for the new store.

The new location has followed the sign ordinance regulations and it seems a sort of compromise was reached. The wooden sign was replaced by the golden arches characteristic of the typical McDonald's franchise with a few alterations to suit city standards.

"We've always wanted a sign you can really see. The new sign is much more visible. We wanted the sign to be internally lit but the city said it had to be externally lit. We actually wanted the sign itself to be a little bigger, but we went with a smaller sign to comply with the city's request and it's high like we wanted. We won't break any rules and complied with the city's requests. I think people will like it (the new sign) better; you really couldn't see the smaller old sign. You won't miss this sign. Ninety-nine percent of people couldn't care less about what the sign looks like. I would expect zero complaints," said Holka.

Many have speculated that another fast-food restaurant will be replacing the McDonald's location left vacant for the new location but according to Roger DeHook, real estate broker for the McDonald's corporation this will not be the case.

"We are not allowed to sell the facility to a fast food venue, but we are not opposed to selling the building to another restaurant. A lot of brokers know the spot is available, but we have yet to actually market the site because we didn't want any negative connotations to arise from a for sale sign — like we are going out of business," said DeHook.

The new McDonald's facility celebrated its grand opening Aug. 18 at 11 a.m.

Future uncertain for Castle Farms property

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

The future is uncertain for local landmark, Castle Farms, which may be changing owners for the fifth time in its long history of service to community residents.

According to John Murray of Vacation Properties Network, "No offers have been submitted for the Castle property, but we have seen a lot of interest. Different people have approached me looking for different ways to use it including: a community center, development and some looking to own their own castle."

According to Murray the property bought by Art Reibel in 1969 is now part of a trust allocated by the late Reibel to daughter Kim Reibel.

"Art used the property for art shows, concerts, storage and as living space for himself. Her (Kim's) father passed away, she lives in Florida and does not want to come back to Michigan to maintain the Castle," said Murray.

According to Murray, as a whole the property encompasses 38 acres of land. Built in 1918 as the Loeb Farm it took 200-300 stone masons to construct the elaborate buildings that currently lie on the 25 acres off of M-31. These 25 acres are zoned commercial while the 13 acres across the highway, where concert parking was typically permitted, is zoned agricultural.

"There is also another six or seven acres we sold separately. The offer was accepted and a storage facility will be operated on this separate acreage," said Murray.

With the booming real estate market in Charlevoix some may fear the loss of this historic site to private housing developers. Murray did not see this as a potential threat commenting, "I doubt that (the Castle will be torn down) very much. There is too much nostalgia associated with the Castle. Where else in the U.S. would you find a castle this unique?"

According to documents found by Charlevoix Historical Society member David Miles, Castle Farms endured the following ownership changes: "The estate was built in 1916 and was pretty well done in 1918 costing $10 million. Owners prior to the Loeb family were the Paddock family who then sold to the Loeb. In 1972-76 VanHaver owned the land and worked on the buildings. VanHaver put in $200,000 to bring it up to snuff. Nothing else indicates a previous owner beyond Paddock. The farm itself was in operation by 1918," said Miles.

Throughout the history of the Castle Farms it has served as a functional facility for a horse ranch, a restaurant-tavern, a farmers' market, a mall, a metal-work tourist attraction and a concert venue.

Renovations on schools completed over summer

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

In preparation for the 2000-2001 school year a number of school officials were hard at work in both the high school and the elementary school to implement some needed renovations.

Parents can breathe a sigh of relief as a government mandate has led to the cleanup of asbestos in both the high school and the middle school. According to school officials this was not a situation where incidents of harm were filed — a change in government regulation necessitated the cleanup.

"The asbestos removal project was paid for out of the sinking fund passed a few years back. This is the second portion of a two phase project. We are working on putting in the new ceilings," Charlevoix Superintendent of Schools John Sturock said.

According to Sturock the high school library will also be cloaked in new carpet.

"In the elementary facility we had asbestos removed and we are now putting in new bulk heads, a new roof and working on some touch-up painting," said Sturock.

High school athletes will also be pampered by renovations integrated into their facilities. According to Sturock an anonymous donor gave the high school funding to resurface the track.

"The track project went very well and has been completed. We put a new rubberized surface on. There are seven layers of rubber material so the surface is really soft; it feels like a sponge when you walk on it. It should last a good decade and is much safer for students than wearing track spikes on a cement surface," said Sturock.

Basketball players and fans are also in for a real treat as the school's general fund financed the resurfacing of the high school's gymnasium floor.

"It has been 12 or 13 years since this extensive of a resurfacing project has been undertaken. Every summer two to three layers are put on the floor so the project has taken a while — they had spent a lot of time sanding the layers off. You would be amazed how much lighter it is," said Athletic Director Keith Haske.

The gym floor restoration project started in mid-August and on Aug. 24 the workers were painting the floor — one of the steps in the final stages of the project. The girls' basketball teams are anxiously awaiting the completion of the project and have had to practice in Petoskey in order to practice on the full court.

No renovations were made to the middle school as the old high school will be used as the new site of Charlevoix Middle School after the completion of the new high school at the Marion Center Road site.

According to school officials they are unsure of the future use of the current building where middle school classes are held.

"We are putting renovations to the middle school on hold until we decide how we will end up using it," said Sturock.

Weather blesses yacht race

'Yachting notes'

The sixth race of the Summer Series saw 36 starters blessed with near perfect weather. In Division 1, SLAPSHOT again screamed over the line first with a corrected time of 1:27:58, more than five minutes better than KAMIKAZE. Just 3 seconds later it's GOTCHA! and then it's FLASH by only 4 seconds. BLASEN IV was, once again, back a good bit.

MI-JOY led Division 2 by one minute over J HAWK with M 3 breathing down her back. Then it was BABE and BALD EAGLE in short order followed well back by SAF-FRONT and SUNKIST.

JESSIE was again the fastest P-26 by 37 seconds ahead of TIRELESS with ORIGINAL SIN just 26 seconds further back. Then LOST VERMONT nosed out CYGNUS by 10 while SANDPIPER lagged by a couple minutes.

APOTHECARY again won the Jib and Main Fleet by 6 minutes over CHEEMAUN.

SWINE FLEW picked up her first win of the Summer Series and the entire J-22 Fleet followed her in like clockwork: SUPERFLUOUS, GECKO, TOO RECKLESS, HUSSY, PALEFACE LITE, ROCK STEADY, FIRST DATE, HABANERO by one second over HIGH MAINTENANCE, HOG-TIDE, JUBBLIES, WHAT'S HER NAME, THUNDERSTRUCK and CRAZY HORSE.

Coming into the home stretch of the Summer Series with only two races ahead of us, using just one of the two permitted drops.

Division 1: KAMIKAZE and SLAPSHOT 10, GOTCHA! 11, FLASH 17, MINT JULEP 22 and BLASEN IV 27.

Division 2: MI JOY a perfect 5, M 3 15, BABE 16, BALD EAGLE 17, J HAWK 18, and SAFFRON 26 and SUNKIST 39.

P-26: TIRELESS 9, JESSIE 11, LOST VERMONT 12, ORIGINAL SIN 16, CYGNUS 20, SANDPIPER 26.

JAM: APOTHECARY 6, CHEEMAUN 10 and HIGH SEAS 14.

J-22: HUSSY 8, SWINE FLEW 13, TOO RECKLESS 13, SUPERFLUOUS 22, FIRST DATE 26, GECKO and ROCK STEADY tied at 32, MOISTURE MISSILE 35, PALEFACE LITE 42, HABANERO 50, HIGH MAINTENANCE 53, CRAZY HORSE and THUNDER-

STRUCK at 56, JUBBLIES 61, WHAT'S HER NAME 64, SCURRY 69 and HOG-TIDE 73.

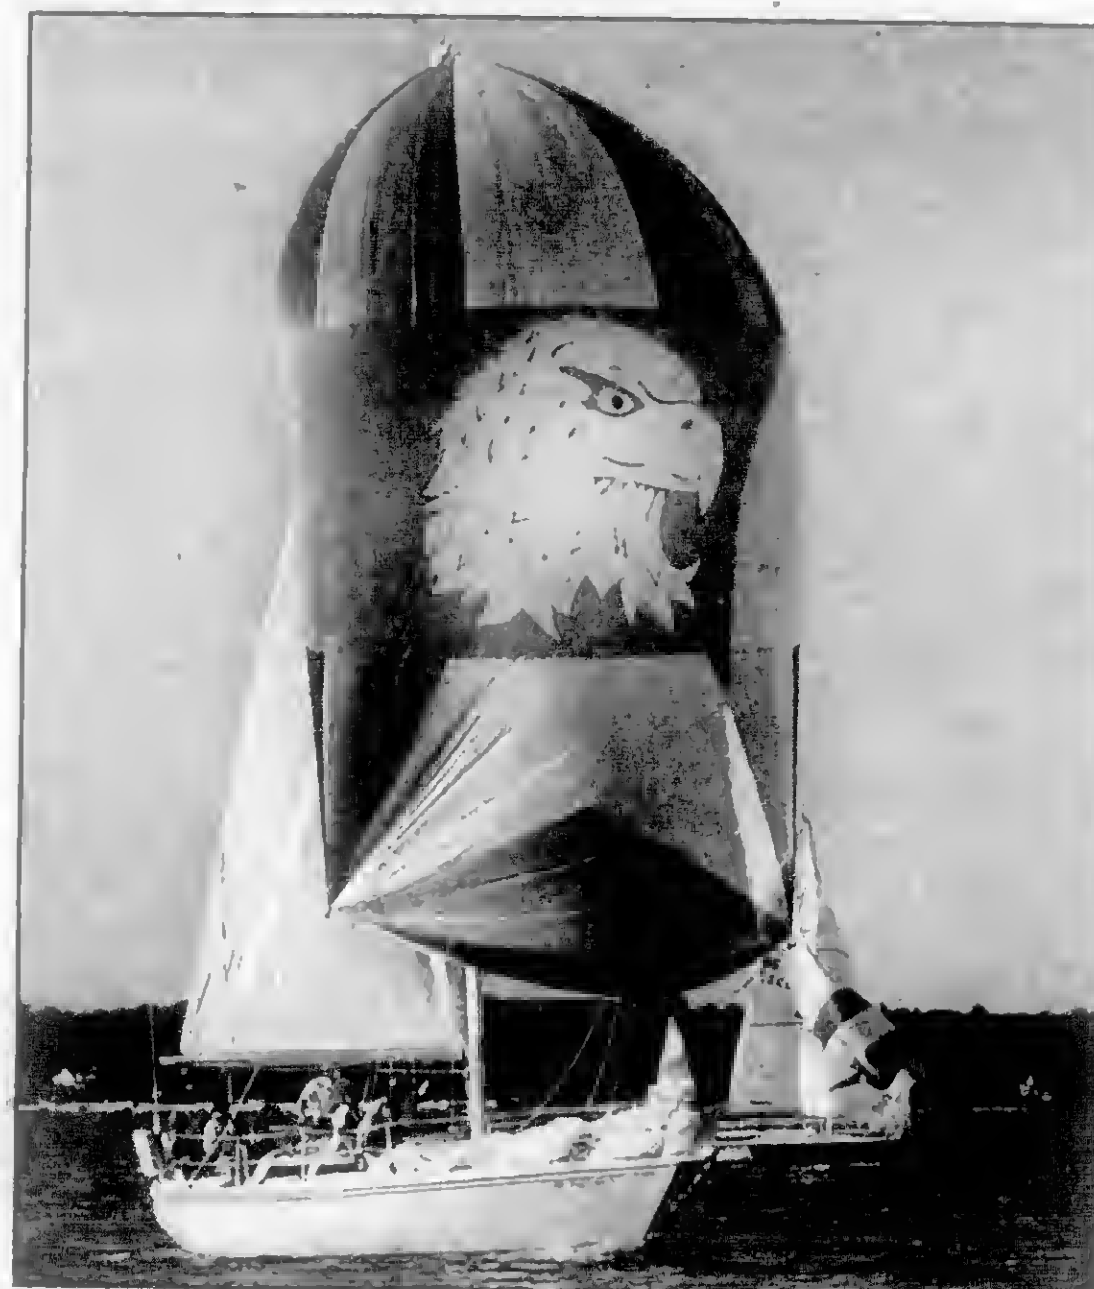

As always, the coming Labor Day weekend will bring the fleets to Lake Charlevoix for the Charlevoix Yacht Club Triangle and the Red Fox Regatta.

Their sails will present many "photo-ops" as the events unfold. Friday evening you'll see many participate in the Charlevoix Yacht Club Triangle at this end of the Lake. On Saturday all classes start here and end up at Boyne City, followed up with a little "R & R" in the park.

Sunday morning they all head back here and then to the Charlevoix Yacht Club for awards before heading home. We expect well over a hundred entrants, which should make for excellent viewing.

May we ask those of you who will be on the water with us, to exercise a little extra courtesy and caution? It will be appreciated!

Yachting Notes is submitted each week during the "warm" months by the Charlevoix Yacht Club. To contact the club, see its website at www.charlevoixyachtclub.org or call 547-9170.

Belvedere to host GAM Women's Championship

The Belvedere Golf Club seems to bring out the best in many of the state's top amateur golfers.

Golfers like Peter Green, for instance who has won the Michigan Amateur Championship three times at Belvedere Golf Club or now PGA Professional Dan Pohl who won the Michigan Amateur at Belvedere back in 1975 and 1977.

This week, Belvedere will once again test many of the premier amateurs in Michigan during the second edition of the GAM Women's Mid-Amateur Championship, an event reserved for the 25-and-over female golfer.

There are 43 players in the field who will be competing in a 36-hole stroke play tournament. Players must also possess a GAM/USGA Handicap-Index of 20.0 or less at time of entry. The golf course will be setup for a 6,067-yardage layout and will test the best female amateur golfers in the state.

Defending Champion Mary Jane Anderson is coming off her big win at the GAM Women's Championship at Saginaw CC.

Anderson of Clarkston became just one of three players in Michigan golf history to win the GAM Women's Championship and the Michigan Women's State Amateur Championship.

The only other players to accomplish this feat are Joan Garety of Rockford and Stacy Slobodnik of East Lansing.

Anderson will be trying to make history by winning all three amateur events in Michigan. At last year's GAM annual meeting, Anderson was awarded the "GAM Player of the Decade."

Barbershop singers invite area men to join

The Windjammer Chorus of the local barbershop singers chapter invites all men to its open house at 7:30 on Sept. 12 at the Methodist Church on State Street in Charlevoix.

The "Four-Man Fishin' Tackle Choir" will provide quality singing and great entertainment.

The chapter is number 23, obviously one of the earliest in the society. It was originally in Boyne City and late in the last century moved to Petoskey. Just this past year it moved to Charlevoix where it is hosted by the Methodist Church. It meets on Tuesday nights at 7:30 p.m.

The barbershop chorus serves multiple functions.

It is a training ground for those new to the art/hobby. It is also an entertainment vehicle for community functions.

The name of the parent organization is the Society for the Preservation and Encouragement of Barbershop Quartet Singing in America (SPEBSQSA). It takes that name and goal seriously and provides opportunity for men to sing in quartets and develop the skills for the art.

Some mostly like the singing just for their own enjoyment, while others like also to perform and entertain.

The style of the music is unique in several ways, but mostly in the frequent use of a chord called a "Barbershop Seventh" which has a characteristic harmonious sound that is seldom heard elsewhere.

This "major minor seventh," as it is called by music theorists, cannot be played in tune on a piano, but must be sung unaccompanied.

A good quartet can produce an expanded ensemble sound which gives the impression of more than just four voices. When they make a chord "ring," it is a sound that really "grabs" those who like that sort of thing.

School district forced to cancel ground-breaking SCHOOL

The plaintiff, the preservation group, also sites the need to preserve the current status of the site as a necessary condition of the case.

A document filed by the environmental group at the Charlevoix County Clerk's office states, "The (temporary restraining order) is necessary to prevent irreparable injury and to preserve the status quo until the matter can be more fully reviewed."

According to the document, the plaintiff afforded fair warning to the defendant, the school, that such actions would result if they opted to move forward with the project.

"The school began construction on the site almost immediately after receiving approvals from the township despite warnings from (Charlevoix Area Natural Resources Preservation Association's) attorneys that the school would be proceeding at its own risk because of the pending appeal of the permits," the document stated.

The Scholarship Committee of Charlevoix Area Hospital's Guild announced the recipients of the annual scholarships totaling $1,600.

Scholarship winners are: Lisa Hoadley, who is attending nursing school at Western Michigan University in Kalamazoo; Keri A. Curtis, who is studying nursing at North Central Michigan College in Petoskey and who is working at Charlevoix Area Hospital; Michael J. Czerkes, who is attending medical school at Michigan State University and plans to study at the University of Surrey in England for one year and Nina T. Lieb of East Jordan, who is studying physical therapy at Andrews University in Berrien Springs.

Each year the Guild gives four $400 medical scholarships for a maximum of four years.

The scholarship is open on a competitive basis to anyone holding a high school diploma who has been accepted into an approved school for a course of study leading directly into a health care profession.

The pending appeal referred to in this document points to procedural concerns surrounding the site plan approval granted to the school.

Sturock referred to the basis of the suit currently filed against the school group, the Marion township board and the planning commission, saying, "The group filed suit taking issue with the standards set forth in the site plan review claiming these standards are unenforceable."

In the aforementioned filed document, the environmental group points to four standards which were inadequate to support approvals from the Marion township board and planning commission.

These four standards as documented are as follows: "(1) The Special Use Permit was issued without the standards required by law in the zoning ordinance. (2) The Special Use Permit was issued without consideration of all the impacts of the school to the surrounding land uses and the natural environment. (3) The site plan approval is contrary to the township master plan and is prohibited by law. (4) The school has begun construction on the site before receiving all of the necessary permits and before the special-use permit has become effective."

Construction has already begun on the site, but the temporary restraining order halts both further alteration of the site and ceases the enforcement of approvals issued by the township board and the planning commission until the hearing takes place on Aug. 29.

The scheduled hearing will decide whether a preliminary injunction is in order.

Tell yourself you just don't have time to spend thinking about promoting your business.
3. Don't Advertise
Just assume everybody knows what you sell.

Open Democrats face criticism in county

"There is a future for anyone who wants to get involved. They have ideas they need to sell their message to the county populace. If people on the opposition want to run, more power to them," said Haggard.

However based on conversations with local democratic candidates, Haggard holds a very ideal vision of how the system operates. According to local Democrats, their plight for greater representation has been met with opposition beyond the sheer numbers at the polls.

Local Democrats, including both candidates and voters, in several instances have found their party affiliation has been equated with immorality. In these instances the candidates' qualifications were overlooked in favor of broad-based character judgments.

Chase commented on this saying, "I know an individual who will not declare a party because they are so tired of Democrats being beat up over the issue of moral character."

Williams who recently changed her party affiliation from Republican to Democrat added, "Republicans know me and know that I am not a different person. My qualifications did not change and they are good."

Haggard added, "A person chooses what they want to choose. I don't believe anything should be held against anybody for what they believe in. There may be some needling but nothing is done in malice."

Beyond under representation for the party, a greater threat could be at hand.

As American citizens, freedom of speech is one of our primary sources of solace and independence. Some local Democrats argued that community backlash felt over divergent ideologies stifles their First Amendment right — candidates and voters are afraid of being personally attacked or are not willing to sustain the public ridicule associated with running against the majority.

Kay Chase offered the following anecdote supporting these claims: "A couple of Democrats who are wonderful people, very involved in the community, ran for township office and came in dead last. It makes people think twice before running. Nobody is willing to give people a choice and the candidates are publicly ridiculed, further discouraging them from running."

But, it is evident that Charlevoix is a community primarily comprised of Republican voters. According to Haggard, Republican party loyalty tends to thrive in more rural communities, like that of Charlevoix, because smaller communities seek greater autonomy from government.

"Smaller communities tend to want less government than bigger communities. We can pitch in and do it ourselves — like when we get together with businesses or in planting petunias. We've (the Republican party) done a good job convincing people our thoughts are the best way," said Haggard.

According to Edward R. Johnson, Democratic candidate for County Sheriff, not only does Republican Party dominance stem from the size of the community, but there also exists a certain degree of tradition that may perpetuate the cycle.

"Northern Michigan seems to have a trend (perpetuating party loyalty.) The attitude is such that 'my grandparents were Republican so that is the party I will choose.' It is something that is almost ingrained," said Johnson.

To bridge the partisanship gap to ensure all of the community is represented and can identify with our local elected officials, Johnson said he has a new approach which eliminates party preferences and focuses entirely on community representation.

"We have a two party system in our country. I don't feel that local offices should be partisan but rather they should represent everybody," he said.

Chase added she sees a light at the end of the tunnel.

"Our demographics are changing; we have different age groups coming into the area. We (the Democratic Party) are receiving many new members. Democrats running in this area are also proof of the changes," she said.

CADDIES' EXCURSION SUNDAY

Will Make Trip to Beaver Island On the Steamer City of Boyne

The much anticipated event of the year among the caddies of the Charlevoix Golf Club will take place on Sunday next, when the Steamer City of Boyne will leave this city early in the morning with the "bunch" to spend the day on Beaver Island.

The boat will leave Charlevoix not later than seven o'clock and returning from the island in time to reach home by dark. Boys who are eligible to take in the trip are requested to be at the dock on time, and each bring his own drinking cup.

The picnic dinner will be a feature of the day, the expense of which, as well as that of the excursion, will be taken care of by contributions from the club and players.

The excursion is a recent feature of the management of the Golf Club, and is intended as a reward to the caddies for the service they have given. A number of association members will be present and the best of care taken of the boys. Caddy Master Ricaby is to be congratulated on the manner in which he had taken charge of the caddies during the past year. One thing he has insisted upon — order and good conduct — has greatly improved the caddy situation, and it is to be hoped that the good work along this line will be continued.

BELVEDERE DEPOT IS DESTROYED BY FIRE

Structure Complete. Loss at Early Hour Tuesday—Cause Not Known

Fire of undetermined origin completely destroyed the Belvedere depot of the Pere Marquette Railway company early Tuesday morning.

The fire was discovered and alarm turned by P.D. Ance, night watchman at the Belvedere Club. The blaze had apparently been burning inside the structure for some time, suddenly breaking out over the entire structure. The building was a total loss before local firemen brought the flames under control.

The loss, which included ticket stock and records in addition to the building, will run into several thousand dollars.

According to Station Agent B. Nickerson, train service will be discontinued to the Belvedere side until the depot is rebuilt, which will probably not be until next spring. Railroad workmen started Tuesday morning clearing away the wreckage.

Ironton Ferry grounded

Bad luck continues to hound the Ironton Ferry.

The ferry returned to Charlevoix County last Thursday, but it has been in operation for only three hours since then. A busted outboard shaft is the latest malady plaguing the ferry, according to Irvin Sturm, Charlevoix County Road Commission engineer-director.

"Three hours after the ferry opened for operation Friday, the outboard shaft, which is a part of the old equipment on the ferry, busted," Sturm explained Monday.

"They had the shaft in the machine shop this morning and plan on working on the ferry the rest of the day. He (Ken Wyskochil, owner of Wyskochil Marine Service, which has been working on the ferry.) wouldn't estimate when the ferry would be ready.

"And I won't either," Sturm said following the breakdown Friday, two employees from Wyskochil Marine Service complete with skin diving equipment, pulled the defective shaft from the ferry.

A new piece of equipment had to be purchased and a man was sent to Saginaw to pick it up.

A machine shop then had to be hired to taper and thread the shaft to fit the ferry.

One of the few county residents who had a chance to ride the ferry before it broke down was Ralph Richardson, county commissioner representing Eveline and Wilson townships, the two townships most affected by the absence of the ferry.

The Ironton ferry provides an important link across the South Arm of Lake Charlevoix for travelers on Ferry Road. It also connects the two halves of Eveline Township.

Richardson, who rode the ferry Thursday night, said he was impressed with the work that had been done on it.

"The engineering looks good," Richardson said. "All the negative things that I've been hearing didn't appear to be true. In spite of everything, I think they did a good job."

The Ironton Ferry was taken out of service before the season was over last fall and towed down to Traverse City for its five year marine inspection by the U.S. Coast Guard and for the replacement of its engine.

It was due back in Ironton in April in time to open for the regular season. But because of a mis-ordering and a non-delivery of parts required in the drive train, scheduled work on the ferry was delayed for three months.

Once the repair work on the ferry was completed two weeks ago, bad weather continued to hold up the ferry's return to Charlevoix County. Twice last week the ferry left its Traverse City port bound for Charlevoix and twice it had to turn back because of high winds and waves.

Officials were concerned that the ferry would be swamped as it was being towed up the Lake Michigan shoreline.

Finally on Thursday, the ferry made its way down the Pine River Channel to enter Round Lake and then Lake Charlevoix amidst blowing boat horns and a standing ovation from Charlevoix area residents and visitors standing along the channel.

State taking apps. for development rights buy

Michigan Department of Agriculture Director Dan Wyant announced recently that another round of applications is now available for landowners to nominate their farmland for development rights purchase under Michigan's Purchase of Development Rights Program.

The program, now administered by the MDA, allows landowners to sell the rights to develop their lands for uses other than agriculture to the state in return for cash payments. Once development rights are sold, the land is placed in an agricultural conservation easement, permanently restricting the land from development. The easement remains with the property, even if the land is sold.

Funding for the program accumulates from the repayment of tax credits when the temporary Farmland Development Rights Agreements end.

Applications may be obtained by contacting the MDA's Farmland and Open Space Preservation Office at (517) 373-3328. They must be received by Nov. 30.

No faxed applications will be accepted.

Applications received by the deadline will be evaluated based on selection criteria, established by the Michigan Legislature and scoring system approved by the Michigan Natural Resources Commission and the Michigan Commission of Agriculture.

To be eligible for the program, at least 51 percent of the land submitted in the application must be devoted to agricultural use and all applications must be approved through a resolution by the local unit of government with zoning authority over the nominated property.

There is no minimum acreage to be eligible. However, parcels less than 409 acres in size will receive a score deduction.

Other factors considered in the selection process include: The productive capacity of the farmland, the threat of conversion to non-agricultural uses, the proximity to other similarly protected land, the availability of matching funds and how the program complements local farmland preservation efforts.

Once an application is chosen, the amount landowners receive for their development rights is determined by an appraisal. However, the appraisal cannot exceed $5,000 per acre, which is the current cap set for the program.

In addition to the cash payment landowners selling their development rights receive, other advantages include the retention of ownership of all other property rights, the potential for property and estate tax relief and the preservation of farmland for future generations.

Lightning starts fire in residence

Lightning is believed to have started a fire in the crawl space of the Bob Parker residence, at 4974 Loeb Road in Marion Township.

The Charlevoix Fire Department received a call of "smoke under the house, at 7:59 a.m. on Tuesday. On arrival they found very heavy smoke, but very little fire, in the crawl space of the nearly new home.

An investigation revealed that lightning had apparently caused an electrical line to catch fire, and ignite the underside of the home's floor.

Before the fire could burn into the house, a plastic water line burst through, and the water effectively put out the majority of the fire.

The fire department completed putting out the fire with water from the fire truck tank and used fans to clear the smoke.

Pajtas rules in school's favor

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Circuit Court Judge Richard Pajtas ruled Tuesday that the evidence offered by the Charlevoix Area Natural Resources Preservation Association, did not merit the issuing of a preliminary injunction on the construction of a new high school on Marion Center Road.

"The defense would suffer greater harm from the delay than would be suffered by the plaintiff if the preliminary injunction were to be issued. The community would be harmed if it were to be issued," said Judge Pajtas.

According to School Board Attorney Bill Ewald, Pajtas' decision relieves the school board of a huge financial burden that would have resulted from further delay.

Ewald highlighted these costs in his argument before the judge saying, "This is a delaying tactic (by the plaintiff) which will put tremendous financial and physical burden on Charlevoix Public Schools. This delay will lead to escalated construction costs and more importantly, costs to the education of the children of this community."

Jim Olson, attorney for the preservation association, with the aid of his associate Karen Ferguson, presented numerous aspects of proceedings that occurred during the

Charlevoix schools to start with some new faces Sept. 5

Kids attending Charlevoix Public Schools will be welcomed by some new teacher and support staff faces in the classroom Sept. 5 while some familiar educators won't be returning for the 2000-2001 scholastic year.

The social studies selection committee made up of Anne Marie Conway, Connie Ford and Judy Boss reviewed a pile of resumes to find Bryan Hawkins. Hawkins will be joining the high school social studies department this fall. Some kids may remember Hawkins from last year — he taught grade 11 students a lesson on slavery during his interviewing process for the position.

Hawkins has an extensive background as both a student and as an instructor. He received hands-on experience while completing a year-long internship program with the Utica public school system.

In preparation for his career in education Hawkins attended Michigan State University majoring in interdisciplinary studies. Having reached dean's list status three semesters during his collegiate career, Bryan understands the meaning of high scholastic achievement and will bring his diligent efforts to the classroom.

Stupak, Yob face off for First District seat

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

In the race for U.S. Congressional Representative to the First Congressional District, Democratic incumbent Bart Stupak, running for his fifth term, will be facing Republican candidate Chuck Yob of East Jordan.

"We represent the concerns and wishes of northern Michigan residents, this has been our great honor and privilege," said Stupak.

Stupak was involved in politics early on as he watched his father and mentor serve on the Gladstone County Board as both a supervisor and as a commissioner.

Stupak himself followed his father's lead and became involved in public service in 1972 as an Escanaba police officer. In 1973 he further pursued his career in law enforcement becoming a Michigan State Trooper.

While serving the public as a Trooper, Stupak found himself intrigued by the many facets of law and chose to work his way through law school. Injured in the line of duty in 1982 Stupak was no longer able to perform his duty and medically retired in 1984.

Retirement did not mean he would no longer serve the community. Rather, the change afforded him the opportunity to represent the residents of Menominee, Delta and Dickinson counties in the Michigan House of Representatives.

Stupak evolved from a law enforcement official to a law builder when he made his way to the U.S. Congress in 1992.

"I hope to continue the good work we are doing with the people in northern Michigan. I believe in the issues I work on. Ron Pierce died at Camp Grayling and was denied his VA benefits so we went to work and passed a bill that stipulates that families of those who have heart attacks or strokes during inactive on-duty training will be compensated," said Stupak.

Stupak also pointed to inequities seen in veteran's benefits as they only receive $.11 per mile when traveling while other government officials receive $.32 per mile for work related travel.

"These bills will help constituents and veterans across the nation. These are obvious inequities. I have taken leadership positions on the veterans issue and the Great Lakes water issue in northern Michigan. I enjoy public service and will continue as long as the voters allow me to," he said.

The Great Lakes water issue is of local concern to all as the First Congressional District has more shoreline than any other district in the continental U.S.

Stupak has also seen other areas of needed improvement including the prescription drug problem faced by the elderly population.

"Another hot issue is prescription drug coverage. I started addressing this issue in Congress in the fall of 1998. I have since seen some ideas become reality and seen positive steps in helping to protect the people," said Stupak.

As Stupak looks forward to his hopeful reelection he has also come to understand the difficulties of his position and has taken active steps toward alleviating legislation blockades in Congress. Furthermore, Stupak offers the promise of hard work to voters of the First Congressional District.

"Trying to move legislation through is both challenging and frustrating. If you don't sit on a given commission and need unanimous consent it can mean a lot of time, effort and hard work. I will continue to work hard on the Great Lake water issue, prescription drug coverage and medical coverage for everyone. I will continue the hard work and honest effort my staff and I put forth for the people of northern Michigan," said Stupak.

But, in this election Stupak will face Republican candidate, Chuck Yob; a tough challenger with a unique perspective.

Yob sees local control as the avenue to northern Michigan's success commenting, "I will continue to fight for and defend our way of living up here. I want local people and local government to make decisions as to how we live our lives and use our property."

Yob was born in Hesperia, near Muskegon. He has lived most of his life in southwest Michigan and relocated to East Jordan in 1994, where he and his wife currently reside. According to Yob he has been involved in the political arena for 30 years — working with his local Chamber of Commerce and representing Michigan in the Republican National Committee since 1989.

Early on, Yob took a hard look at northern Michigan issues. "My folks moved from Italy to the Upper Peninsula where they lived from 1910-1920. They would still be there today if there were jobs," said Yob.

According to Yob he intends to fight for increased job opportunities in the UP because he understands the residents struggle. "I want to fight for folks getting hurt in the First Congressional District. In the UP and Alpena there are no jobs and roads need work. No one is taking care of these people. I think I can do better, so I want to go to Washington to fight for northern Michigan ideals and to defend our way of life from Washington bureaucrats and politicians," said Yob.

Yob feels local residents and local government control would lead to greater efficiency in terms of managing local resources. "I can protect the voters rights. He (Stupak) wants Great Lakes water, education, roads and the environment controlled by Wash. I want local control — townships, boards of education, county government and parents to deal with the issues. It's local vs. national," said Yob of the ideological difference between his platform and that of Stupak.

Bart Stupak

According to Yob he feels Washington is unable to make decisions regarding issues affecting the First Congressional District while not sharing an understanding of the lifestyles and cultural realities of the area. He feels that if national control is allowed, northern Michigan residents will reap negative consequences.

Michigan's First Congressional District covers a vast land mass consisting of 27.5 counties, each with unique concerns and needs. It is the elected congressman of this district who brings local matters to Washington, where legislative decisions are made concerning how the issues are to be addressed.

Legion to host pancake breakfast

On Sunday, the American Legion Pancake Breakfast will be a one time special.

The breakfast will be a quiche type consisting of diced toast overlaid with egg and grated cheese. Pancakes, ham, fruit salad cup, orange juice, coffee and tea will be included, all for $4.25.

The legion will also have a large group of traveling bicyclists who will be sitting down at 6:30 a.m., and will be fairly well finished by 8 a.m., the legion's regular starting time. Thus its regular Charlevoix customers, as well as visitors, will not be unduly inconvenienced.

The regular legion crew will be ably assisted by the Women's Auxiliary.

Corrections

In the last couple of weeks editions of the Charlevoix Courier, a few mistakes slipped by during editing.

First, on the Health page of the Aug. 16 edition — page 11 — the phone number for our contributing columnist Edward Newcomb, M.D., should have been (231) 547-6554.

The next two mistakes came in the Aug. 23 edition. On page 14, the story on Castle Farms, should have said it was located on M-66. On page 28 the story on a state development rights program should have said property less than 40 acres in size will receive a score deduction.

It's time to start the election coverage

It's that time of year again. No, it's not school season — although it does start on Sept. 5 — and it's not deer season or any sports season....it's ELECTION SEASON! All across the United States people are arguing, smiling, kissing-up and making promises all in the hopes of getting voted into public office.

Many media outlets enjoy getting into the mix too. Election 2000 stories are popping up in newspapers and television shows across the country, in addition to a variety of pundits trying to make sense of it all.

Here at the Charlevoix Courier, we tried to avoid jumping into the fray too early. We tried to avoid writing story after story in every issue of the paper since January about elections.

We were even trying to wait until after Labor Day. But, we failed. A couple of political campaign stories started to find their way into the paper....we just couldn't wait to get into the game ourselves.

So here we go. Up until the month of November, the Courier will have weekly local election stories focusing on a variety of topics from the economy to taxes. We started this week with some feature stories on some of the people running for local offices.

In addition, starting in late October, we will start giving out the "Editor's Endorsements" as weekly editorials. This means, the editor, Jeremy McBain, will give suggestions on who to vote for this November.

We must emphasize, these endorsements do not affect the type of story or the angle in any story written by reporters for this newspaper. We have no interest in being a biased newspaper, although we are sure no matter what we write we will still get called "biased" by someone.

The main campaigns we will be following are: State House District 106, the first congressional district, Charlevoix Township treasurer's race and Charlevoix County Sheriff's race. We will also be following other races of significant local importance.

The main campaigns we will be following are: all of the above, the Michigan Supreme Court Race, the senator race between Spencer Abraham and Debbie Stabenow. There may be a few others.

We will not be following the presidential race. We will leave that up to the "bigger" papers, because we want to focus on local issues.

With that said, we want to wish all the candidates good luck in their races, follow the rules and make it a clean match.

Now....let the games begin.

'Behind the news'

Have you noticed how our TV commercials have gone downhill since the computer is dominating the scene?

It's "show-off" time with skillful whirling, flashing, buzzing, zooming, swishing and blinking on the screen — all done by the guy with the mouse for his own amusement, not ours. I get bewildered trying to follow the message in current advertisements and was beginning to think that I was losing it, but when mentioning this problem to a group of young people, they all agreed — much to my surprise — that they couldn't follow the thrust of present day commercials either!

Not only have the commercials gone downhill, but many of the top rated shows such as "West Wing" have gotten much too "arty."

For some strange reason, indoor scenes are shot mostly at night in darkened rooms, people are rushing through hallways muttering under their breath and during every crisis the music rises to a loud crescendo that obliterates all words. You have to guess what is going on. I know it isn't my hearing because people enunciate in commercials so that the speech, if not the content, is coming through loud and clear.

Speaking of going "arty," TV photographers have come to the conclusion that close-ups are the "in" thing. Now while watching TV in your living room, not only are the tops of all heads missing, but you get a full view up the nostrils of your favorite actor and the sweaty shoulder of your favorite tennis star.

Then there are our superficial, fast talking news programs. All we get on the air are car crashes, plane crashes, railway crashes, submarine disasters and an occasional fire. It was a star studded day up north when a car ran into a bear, who rolled into a cyclist!

Sure there are a lot of programs with laugh tracks that many people watch, but not me. Someone comes in and says, "Good morning" and there is a roar of laughter. How dull.

"Play of the Day" on the sports programs is admittedly a plus, and even though I have never played a round of golf, watching Tiger Woods sink put after put makes me smile.

Many people tell me that their favorite programs up north are on C-

Span, CNN, PBS, the Discovery Channel — and how they miss the History Channel. They love Biography, Charlie Rose, Washington Journal and all nature programs.

I can't think of many programs except "Touched By An Angel" nowadays that one could call uplifting. On the contrary, there are a great many programs containing violence and steamy bedroom scenes that I wish were off the air.

There's a group, headed by Steve Allen, called the Parents Television Council, that has made good progress in alerting MCI, sponsor of smutty TV shows like "Smackdown!" to withdraw their support. If you would like to support this group, write to the Parents Television Council, PO Box 7802, Burbank, Calif. 91510-9817.

It's been a trying time for us since the advent of the computer on TV and all the "arty" innovations. Let's hope that the time is coming, and not a moment too soon, when the producers will return — not to pleasing their creative crews — but their discerning viewers.

Newspaper is biased

Editor: Democrats in the newspaper and on the front page of the Charlevoix Courier. How rare for Charlevoix!

In a recent article on the Democratic Party in Charlevoix you failed to mention the fact the reason the party appears to be non-existent is because the Schaller Family-owned papers fail to cover its events to a degree that they report the Republican Party activities.

The Charlevoix Democratic Party is very much alive and active; in the last 6 months we have hosted a number of events in which we have had US Senator Carl Levin (twice), but not Charlevoix Democrats. We have even submitted our own press releases and photos but to no avail.

The Charlevoix Courier and its sister paper, the Petoskey News-Review have even listed Democrats who won some local township offices as "Republicans."

The Democratic Party publishes its own newsletter and the First District is one of only two districts in the state to have its own Web page (www.1stdistrictdems.com). These are the tools which Democrats have used to get the message out.

It was with great interest I also read the full page story on the Republican Convention and the fact that Charlevoix had a delegate. A Charlevoix Democrat was a delegate to the Democratic National Convention and is the First Congressional Democratic chair without a word in the Courier. Our regional newspaper (the Traverse City Record Eagle) has had more fair coverage of the conventions and the current election campaign than the local press.

The statement that Republicans do a better job of campaigning and selling their message might well have to do with the fact that whatever the Republicans do is front page news or at least printable in the newspaper. It is a well known fact that your newspaper is owned by a family with strong ties to the Republican National Committee. Could our paper be biased in its coverage?

Look in the mirror the next time you question the existence of the two-party system in our county.

Kay Chase
Charlevoix

(Editor's note: First of all, the Schaller family's political connections have nothing to do with this newspaper. Secondly, in the last nine months, the Charlevoix Courier has received notice on only two events the local Democratic Party has hosted in our coverage area, although we regularly receive notification from the local Republican Party about its events. Most of the time, we avoid simply printing any political press releases in this newspaper because of the biased spin they tend to have. We want to be an unbiased publication that does not fall for political spin. However, we do welcome notices about events the various political parties are having in the area and do try to mention them in the Courier. Thank you for your letter.)

Intolerance to Democrats hurts

Editor: I write to you today expressing my own opinions, and not those of my mother Theda Williams, who is currently the Charlevoix Township Treasurer.

I was encouraged to read your editorial in (last week's) edition of the Charlevoix Courier. Academic and professional interests have led me out of northern Michigan for the time being, yet I still consider it my home and in fact am still a registered voter in Charlevoix County.

Since my youth in Charlevoix I have considered myself a faithful Democrat. While my parents must take most of the credit for instilling me with the values that led me to this decision, it is also imperative to realize that the adults I came into contact with during my youth also had a profound effect on my political maturation.

This is why it is with great dismay that I read about the character assault on Democrats in our community. I have never personally faced the kind of criticism described in the editorial while in Charlevoix, but certainly did while I was a college student in Grand Rapids. My faith was also called into question on numerous occasions. People who know me best will tell you that the only beliefs more important to me than politics and the superiority of the Detroit Tigers, is my devoted faith in Jesus Christ.

It hurts me to hear that local Democrats are facing the same kind of unfounded criticism. One need look no further than President Jimmy Carter to find an example of a man with unwavering faith who is able to be an unabashed Democrat. Moreover, Christian Democrats may look to the Rev. Billy Graham, who has supported Democrats in the past. Indeed Graham, in his memoirs expressed his excitement upon meeting President Harry Truman for the first time, because the President was a Southern Baptist Democrat just like Graham.

I don't pretend to exclaim that either party can legitimately carry the cross of Christ as its banner; all of mankind falls short of the glory of God. Rather, it is my prayer that leaders in both parties recognize that their ability to lead and freedom come as gifts from God, and seek his will at every turn.

Good people disagree on politics, that much I have learned. I hope that those in our community who have not learned that will be touched by the spirit and that a true political dialogue may take place in our society.

Support the Telethon

Editor: Labor Day weekend marks the end of summer for many people, but to me it means it's time for the Jerry Lewis MDA Telethon. Not only does this broadcast bring nationwide attention and support to the fight against neuromuscular diseases, it also energizes our family and all the great people involved with the Muscular Dystrophy Association here in Charlevoix.

My family is among those facing the onslaught of challenges caused by progressive muscle wasting, and we take great comfort in knowing that MDA funds hundreds of the world's top scientists with contributions made to the Telethon. These investigators are working around the clock to find treatments and cures for neuromuscular diseases. We also know that thanks to public support of the Telethon, MDA provides unparalleled help through a network of some 230 clinics from coast to coast.

We can count on excellent doctors, nurses and therapists at the MDA clinic at Mary Free Bed Hospital in Grand Rapids. Their guidance has been a godsend, and MDA experts have answers for us when other doctors might not. MDA also helps pay for wheelchairs and leg braces, and hosts support groups in which families can network with others facing similar challenges.

Each summer, thanks to the Telethon, my child and other kids with neuromuscular diseases spend a week of fun and freedom at MDA summer camp in Holton. It's a fantastic time for the kids and a welcome respite for families who otherwise provide year-round care.

The MDA Telethon broadcast airs locally at 9 p.m. Sunday on WPBN/WTOM-TV Channels 7 & 4. On behalf of our family, and families everywhere who've been touched by muscle wasting disorders, please tune in Labor Day weekend and make a pledge by calling (800)FIGHTMD, or by visiting MDA's Web site at www.mdausa.org.

Exceptional Riders looking for a few good volunteers

The Exceptional Riders Program is seeking volunteers.

The program is a non-profit organization that provides horseback riding lessons to disabled citizens of Antrim, Charlevoix and Emmet counties.

Since 1984 it has served over 200 children and adults (ranging in age from 4 to 65). The program meets in the spring and the fall for eight weeks each session. Twelve students ride each week for one hour (six in the first hour, six in the second hour).

For every rider the program must have three volunteers - one to lead the horse and two side-walkers. This means that it needs a minimum of 18 volunteers just to be with the rider and horse.

This does not include the people who groom and tack the horses, handle the refreshment table, greet and sign-in the parents and riders and the certified instructor.

The Exceptional Riders Program is in need of additional volunteers for the fall 2000 session. Sometimes volunteers cannot attend all eight sessions, due to other commitments in their busy lives. Therefore, some weeks the program is short of volunteers.

In fact, last spring one child was not able to ride because it did not have enough volunteers.

Volunteers need not have any "horse experience" — the program will teach you what you need to know to be a side-walker. All we ask is that you are not afraid of horses.

Volunteer orientation is set for 6:30 p.m. on Sept. 12 at the Pace Setter Farms located at 02420 Marion Center Road (corner of Klooster and Marion Center roads). Remaining sessions will be from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. each Tuesday night until the end of October.

If you can volunteer just eight times to help out the disabled children and adults in your community, please call Linda Johnson at 547-9824.

"But the one who endures to the end will be saved" (Matthew 24:13)

Last week on the hit show Survivor we learned what it takes to survive Cut Throat Island and be the one standing at the end with a million dollars in hand.

Survivor has been described as a study of what it takes to make it in the mean, corporate world in which we live. But if the backstabbing and secret alliances against others are "what it takes" to "make it" in today's world, then is "making it" to a million bucks really what we want? Is this the world you want to survive for?

Jesus predicted about today, "And because of the increase of lawlessness, the love of many will grow cold. But the one who endures to the end will be saved" (Matthew 24:12-13). If Survivor, has captured the reality of life today, then a million bucks is earned through a cold heart.

I believe more of us however (whether we know it or not) are not trying to survive for a million bucks. We are trying to survive the cold-hearted, Cut Throat Island that is this world and be one of those saved from it. We want to survive and be saved into a different world where love and generosity rule; where money is not the highest prize worth backstabbing others for.

Jesus is talking about this kind of survival and promises to bring us to this kind of kingdom prize.

The greatest news of all is that getting there doesn't depend on your ability to face life's challenges in a way that earns your approval with others and with Jesus Christ who is running the show.

Jesus loves and approves of you so much that He already overcame all the obstacles for you. He lived the perfect life for you. He even died and rose from the dead for you. The only thing it takes to survive this world and win the real, eternal prize God desires for you, is to hold on to Jesus Christ as presented to us in the Bible.

There He will take you by the hand and say, "Come on. Let's survive this world and come out the other end living in peace forever. I'll lead the way and carry you when you get tired. I've done this a million times for a million others. Are you ready?"

to Hawkins, the Charlevoix public school system will be losing Robin Berry of Boyne City who, throughout her seven year stay, has worked in both the middle school and the high school.

"I originally taught life skills (home economics) at the middle school and the high school. Last year I taught seventh and eighth grade history," said Berry.

Berry considers herself to be a lifelong learner who took advantage of the opportunities locally available for teachers.

"I learned a lot and pursued research opportunities by taking classes at Char-Em where I learned learning styles and computing skills. I continually shared with my students the importance of being a lifelong learner," said Berry.

Berry has her builders license and is currently pursuing a career in kitchen remodeling.

The efforts of teachers, coupled with the work of support staff who ensure the learning environment is sanitary and organized, combine to assure the public school system runs smoothly and functions as an institution in which students can thrive.

Jeff Heise, the elementary school summer lead custodian, will be crossing over into the classroom assistant teaching with Irene Coen. Replacing Heise at the elementary school will be newly appointed night lead custodian Sally Gates.

Gates has been a Charlevoix resident for 22 years. Sally and husband Ron Gates owned a small business in the area for some time and according to Ron, Sally was ready for a change. Sally has performed substitute work in all three school facilities and has been hailed an amiable individual and a hard worker.

Charlevoix native, Barry Potter will be helping out Gates by joining the custodial team at Charlevoix Elementary School. Potter transferred from DCL where he was a welder but recently found a change of vocation was needed.

"I couldn't weld another 20 years. I needed a little easier and healthier job, to get into a pension and a job that would allow me to spend more time with my kids," said Potter.

Over the last year, Potter has been helping out with custodial needs at all three schools but will be concentrating his efforts in the Elementary School full-time. As a father of four, Potter understands that kids mean messes and messes mean work.

"It is a sturdy job, I don't think they'll ever run out of work. As long as there are kids there is stuff to clean up," said Potter.

After the final bell rings at the high school there will be two new smiles greeting student-athletes on the soccer field and in the gym.

Tom Conlan, general manager of the Belvedere Golf Club and retired Coast Guard officer, will be replacing Josh Block as interim varsity soccer coach while Block takes medical leave for the year.

Conlan has 15 years of experience in coaching varsity soccer. The team kicked off their season Aug. 26 at home against Harbor Springs.

Bret Erskine, the former assistant coach for the varsity basketball team will be taking over the head coaching position for the boys junior varsity hoopers.

Bryan Hawkins, Sally Gates, Barry Potter, Tom Conlan and Bret Erskine, will all be filling new positions with the Charlevoix Public School System welcoming students back for another year of study.

Sheriff gives tips for bus safety this school year

Charlevoix Courier Wednesday, August 30, 2000 - PAGE 11

The first day of school marks a significant milestone in the life of a child. It's an exciting time for making new friends, learning new things, and for some, riding the school bus.

Every day approximately 20 million students use school buses as transportation to and from school. Although school buses represent the safest form of highway transportation, there are a number of safety factors both students and drivers should be aware of. Hoping to ensure that the school year gets off to a safe and happy start, the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office encourages caution whenever school buses are present.

According to the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA), over the past 11 years, an average of 35 school-age children died in school bus-related accidents each year. In this average, nine were occupants on the school bus, while 26 were pedestrians. NHTSA also reports that an alarming two-thirds of all accidents occurred outside of the bus.

"Children are often eager to get off the school bus because they are excited to tell their parents all of the fun they had at school that day," said Sheriff George T. Lasater. "It is crucial that parents re-enforce the school bus safety rules children learn at school."

Lasater also suggested that parents drive their child's bus route with them and practice the proper safety precautions.

Throughout a child's life, there are a number of situations where parents will be unable to exercise control. However, there are numerous precautions they can take to help ensure their child enjoys a safe ride to and from school. The Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office has some safety measures they encourage all parents to discuss with their children.

Students

- 1) Always arrive at the bus stop early.
- 2) Prior to boarding, wait until the bus has come to a complete stop, the door opens, and the bus driver says that it's OK to board.
- 3) Always walk on the sidewalk when preparing to cross the street near a bus. Make eye contact with the driver so that you are sure he or she sees you.

- 4) Never walk behind the bus.
- 5) If you are walking beside the bus, walk at least three giant steps away.
- 6) Take extra precaution to make sure that clothing with drawstrings and book bags do not get caught in the hand rail or door.
- 7) Never stop to pick up something that you have dropped when a bus is stopped. Wait until the bus has driven off to avoid not being seen by the driver.

Motorists

- 1) Remember that children are unpredictable in their actions. Exercise extreme caution when traveling in a school zone.
- 2) If there are no sidewalks, drive cautiously. Be more alert to the possibility of children walking in the road.
- 3) Be more aware of children playing near school bus stops.

- 4) Slow down and prepare to stop whenever you see yellow school bus lights flashing.
- 5) Never pass a school bus when there are flashing red lights. This is a sign that children are getting off the bus.
- 6) Learn and obey the school bus laws in your state.

For further information contact Lasater at 547-4461.

Williams banks on her many years of experience

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

With 14 years under her belt as Charlevoix Township treasurer, Theda Williams is gearing up for what might be a hot campaign after she switched parties from Republican to Democrat.

Theda Williams

Johnson said she switched parties for "reasons of personal conviction." While in college, she said she leaned toward the Democratic party in its "Kennedy Camelot."

years, but became a Republican after college when she got married and had children.

"At the time, I didn't feel strongly about it as before, but there have been some personal issues that have changed my thinking," she said.

Williams elaborated on this saying she saw a person who worked very hard throughout their life for a company for many years and that still wasn't enough for this person to keep their job.

"I learned corporate America can be very unkind," she said.

After this life lesson, Williams realized she was more a democrat than a republican.

But, this change in a party affiliation does not change Williams' way of working as a township treasurer and her love of the community.

Williams has lived in Charlevoix Township for 17 years. She has a husband, Ron, and three children: Bradley, 23, of Lansing; Rhonda, 20, a student at Calvin College and Tony, 18, also a student at Calvin College.

Her service as treasurer started in 1987, when Rose Bergmann retired from the position after 36 years. Williams, who was Bergmann's deputy treasurer at the time, was hand-picked to be the successor.

After becoming treasurer, Williams said she has seen the township and the position go through many changes.

While growing three times its size, the township budget also grew. But, Williams said the township has always been able to pay for all its purchases for this growing community with cash.

Williams also takes great pride in saying the township has a balanced budget.

"The books are in order and the township passes its yearly audits easily," she said. She added a lot of these successes are due to Township Supervisor Oscar Stroud and a very strong township board.

"I am the most proud of the little things that people don't see," Williams said. Things like when she personally called people in the township to inform them of a taxing change so they didn't pay more taxes on their properties than they should, the time she stuffed all the tax bills for the township in individual envelopes while sitting at her kitchen table or the calls she gets at home from township residents with questions, even in the middle of the night.

"The little things speak more about who a person is than the larger ones," she said.

Due to her many years of experience as a treasurer and the success of Charlevoix Township, Williams also has been called in to help other township treasurers that have run into problems.

"I have always told people I have a great job. I enjoy doing it, but there are some things I would like to implement," she said. Such as donating her current personal website — www.geocities.com/thedawilliams — to the township to get more information out to the public.

Williams summed up why the voters should give her another term as treasurer by saying: "You should vote for me because I am dedicated, honest, skilled at my job and it's my goal to keep citizens of Charlevoix Township first and foremost in the decisions I make."

Johnson wants to give back to the community

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

After a party-switch from Republican to Democrat by incumbent Theda Williams, the race for Charlevoix Township treasurer has been joined by Margo Johnson on the republican ticket.

Margo Johnson

opening on the republican ticket for the position. Since she did not realize this before election paperwork was due for the primaries in August, Johnson was on the primary ballot as a write-in candidate.

"I saw that as an opportunity to get involved in the community," Johnson said.

Johnson recently moved to Charlevoix Township on a permanent basis from southeast Michigan last year, but she added she and her husband, Bob, have been taxpaying members of the community for 24 years.

After graduating from Michigan State University with a business degree, Johnson worked for the automotive industry in southeast Michigan for over 30 years. Johnson has one son, Brandon, 24, who lives in the Detroit area.

Johnson said her husband is from the upper peninsula and the couple have wanted to live permanently in this area of the state for a long time.

And now that they do live in this area, Johnson said she has been looking for a way to get more involved in the community. So far, she has fulfilled this desire by taking part in various kinds of volunteer work, including work with a non-profit small business consulting organization based in Petoskey.

"That's been a majority of my time, but it hasn't been quite enough," Johnson said.

While she doesn't have any experience as a treasurer, Johnson said she believes she can adapt herself into a team, she is very open, thinks before she talks and has integrity. She added she also has her experience in business to give to the position.

Instead Club offers kids many alternative activities

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Students of the Charlevoix Middle School are offered the option of joining the Instead Club, an abstinence-based after-school pilot program funded by the Michigan Abstinence Partnership.

"Through hands-on learning activities we are trying to teach kids alternatives to risky behavior. It's a great program that offers kids a place to go. They enjoy having a place to be and being involved in planning trips and snacks. They do know they're there to learn other things to do," said Teresa Vanas, community health coordinator.

At a meeting of the school board Aug. 14, Cathy Atchison, program officer for the Charlevoix County Community Foundation, presented the club with a $2,750 grant check to offer operational support for the cause. The foundation's Youth Advisory Committee was responsible for recommending that the grant be offered to the Instead Program.

"The grant money will help fund our field trips and will help provide supplies," said program coordinator, Diana Avery.

Activities take place after the school day ends in both the summer and during the regular school season. Some activities participants were involved in include; beach excursions, golf and bowling outings and field trips to the community pool. The group also engages in community service work — raking lawns for the elderly and cleaning up the school grounds and city parks.

For their second year of operation, Instead Club coordinators have more activities in the planning process for club participants including: a cooperative learning activity at the Camp Daggett Ropes Course, bowling, swimming, sledding and a ski day. They are also pondering incorporating a tutoring session into the activities offered, helping with students studies.

Lori O'Neill, Education Coordinator for Planned Parenthood in Petoskey, is also involved in the program and believes the group's efforts have been beneficial to those who have partaken in the activities.

"Instead is an all-encompassing developmental program to help kids make good choices. The program is quite successful during the school year. We are trying to build assets in the kids so they are more likely to feel better about themselves and in turn make good choices," said O'Neill.

According to program coordinators, Linda Taché and Diana Avery, Instead is trying to prepare Charlevoix's middle school children for potentially threatening future circumstances. By educating the children as to the dangers that may lie ahead and encouraging alternative activities the program decreases their susceptibility to engage in dangerous activities.

"In many cases parents are unaware of peer pressure at the middle school level. It is at this age that kids begin to break away from their families and start creating their own peer groups. Kids who are more goal-oriented are more likely to keep away from early sex," said O'Neill.

In order to achieve their goal of prevention, the Instead Club has broken down their course of action into three stages of instruction including: educating parents, the school curriculum itself and the Instead Club.

Program Coordinator Diana Avery added, "If you keep kids busy they don't have time for bad things. If we can get them involved in sports, band or performing arts we hope that they will continue participating in these activities through high school and will engage in positive activities."

Racing season almost to a close, tight standings so far

A. Nony Mouse
'Yachting notes'

The next-to-last race of the Summer Series was sailed under light air conditions that included a major wind shift that converted the course from a windward leeward to something else.

Thankfully, the Race Committee shortened course or they would probably still be out there!

This time Division I saw KAMIKAZE scream over the line seven minutes ahead of SLAPSHOT. They corrected out with over a nine-minute difference on elapsed times of 1:16:32 and 1:26:15, respectively. They were followed across the line by FLASH, GOTCHA!, BLASEN IV and MINT JULEP but MINT J moved up one place on corrected time.

M 3 led Division II by 4 minutes over MI-JOY. Next were J HAWK, BABE, SAFFRON, SUNKIST and BALD EAGLE, but BALDY corrected ahead of SUNNY.

The P-26 Fleet saw LOST VERMONT cross the line about six minutes ahead of ORIGINAL SIN. Then it was TIRELESS, JESSIE and CYGNUS, just seconds apart.

SANDPIPER was only another minute behind.

APOTHECARY took the honors in the Jib and Main Fleet by default as the becalmed CHEEMAUN fired up the iron spinnaker and retired to the comfort of her home port. HIGH SEAS, once again, did not start.

The beautiful (to my eyes) black spinnaker of TOO RECKLESS nosed out SUPERFLUOUS by four seconds! Five seconds later it was HUSSY ahead of HS MOISTURE MISSILE by 39. Just 19 seconds later it was SWINE FLEW, a solid minute better than PALEFACE LITE who was only 24 seconds up on FIRST DATE. This first gap in the tight finishes ended when ROCK STEADY crossed a couple minutes later. Then it was WHAT'S HER NAME, HOG-TIDE, CRAZY HORSE, HIGH MAINTENANCE and HABANERO. GECKO, JUB-BLES, SCURRY and THUNDER-STRUCK did not start.

With only one race left in this series, the standings, using both drops:

Division 1: KAMIKAZE 8, SLAPSHOT 9, GOTCHA! 11, FLASH 15, MINT JULEP 20 and BLASEN IV 27.

Division 2: MI JOY, still a perfect 5, M 3 & BABE tied at 13, J HAWK 16, BALD EAGLE 17 and SAFFRON 25.

P-26: TIRELESS 9, JESSE and LOST VERMONT tied with 10, ORIGINAL SIN 14, CYGNUS 20, SANDPIPER 26.

JAM: APOTHECARY 5, CHEEMAUN 9 and HIGH SEAS 14.

J-22: HUSSY 7, SWINE FLEW and TOO RECKLESS tied at 13, SUPERFLUOUS 17, FIRST DATE 25, MOISTURE MISSILE 28, GECKO and ROCK STEADY tied at 32. Then its PALEFACE LITE with 36, HABANERO 49, HIGH MAINTENANCE & CRAZY HORSE tied with 52, WHAT'S HER NAME and THUNDER-STRUCK also tied, at 56, JUB-BLES 61, HOG-TIDE 67, and SCURRY 69.

The Charlevoix Yacht Club Tri-angle, sailed Friday is the preamble to the excitement of the Red Fox Regatta, to be sailed Saturday and Sunday.

Over the three days there will be intense boating activity on Lake Charlevoix as over a hundred Regatta competitors join the other pleasure boats enjoying the Labor Day Weekend. Please be extra careful and courteous!

Rayders' lose 45-12 in opener against St. Ignace

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

The Charlevoix Rayders' varsity football team opened its season with a 45-12 loss to St. Ignace Friday in a away game.

The Rayders' troubles started from the very first play of the game, when Charlevoix's pass was intercepted by St. Ignace, who then took the ball back down the field for a touchdown.

"We had a lot of mental mistakes: missed assignments and penalties. Hopefully, we can correct those and see marked improvement," Head Coach Todd Klinger said. "I would hope the missed assignments and mental mistakes have to do with nervousness."

Klinger said offensively the line needs to do a better job of sustaining blocks. Defensively, the Rayders gave up too many big plays.

Added to the Rayders' woes was St. Ignace's excellent running back, whose elusive maneuvering through Charlevoix's defense earned him five touchdowns in the game.

While the team may have not played the greatest game Friday, Klinger said he did see some good in the game.

For example: Charlevoix running-back Ryan Leitner racked up 140 rushing yards and received all of the Rayders' touchdowns. Jeremiah Teuscher also shined Friday in the quarterback position as he threw for 112 yards and completed 6 for 10 passes.

On the defense, Klinger said

Mike Kochanny did a very nice job at defensive end and defensive tackle.

"The kids played hard the whole game. As the game went on, we started to play better defense to where we were stopping them," Klinger said.

But, the Rayders will have to work on putting an end to their mental mistakes that cost the team so many touchdowns against St. Ignace when they face Benzie Central this Friday in the home opener.

According to Klinger, Benzie is a very physical team that likes to run tight trapping plays on the inside.

"We will have to shut it down," he said.

Golf Pro raises money for juniors' program

Belvedere Golf Professional, Steve Braun proved several points by completing 100 holes in a one day span of just over 11 hours.

By doing so he will collect pledges from friends of junior golf that should total over $2,500.

His first point was area golfers support golf for youngsters. It will be the third year his efforts have gathered that similar amount for the Charlevoix County Junior Golf program. His second point was that, as in the past, his scores improved the more he played. In fact, he finished his final round with six birdies.

Starting at dawn and playing straight through until 5:45 p.m., he played very good golf. His first 18 holes produced a 79. He followed with rounds of 78, 77, 74, 74 and finished with a 39, then paled hole 100 to finish in a flurry. His finish served a third point — golf can be enjoyed by all ages.

Belvedere member, J. Huston Witherspoon, soon to be 100 years of age, took the cart-driving chores on the 99 and 100 holes to inspire Braun to his strong finish. Other volunteer drivers aiding Braun's efforts were: Rosemary Corradi, Dave Fowler, Barry Pierce, John Sell, Lil Left and George Lochner.

Braun was pleased with his effort.

"We have one of the finest programs in the country according to the National Association and in our five years of existence, we've introduced many kids to golf who would otherwise never be able to afford the game. I'm proud to be part of it and to be able to provide some additional funds to enable our program to grow," he said.

The PGA of America schedules an annual fund-raiser for junior golf throughout the country. Pledges are taken for each hole played and 50 percent are earmarked for the Charlevoix program. 35% will stay in the PGA Foundation and the remaining 15 percent will go to the Michigan section PGA Junior Golf Program.

Dean Davenport, who organized and directs the program was elated regarding the event.

"Steve has been a tremendous asset to our success. While in Flint he pioneered that program and was awarded the American Junior Golf Association's National Award for his dedicated service, and he's continued to give to the kids in the Charlevoix area," he said.

Davenport also identified the program needs.

"We have 200 youngsters, some needing clubs so our loaner sets are in great demand. We need to purchase a used golf cart that we could leave at the Municipal Course for our use when we are there. We have been able to send eight of our older students to a week of golf camp this summer at Ferris State University so monies generated in the marathon plus funding from the Supie Golf Classic will enable us to continue to serve area youngsters in the summer of 2001," he said.

Those desiring to still pledge Braun's efforts and help Junior Golf may do so by calling Steve at 547-2611.

Johnson wants to be township treasurer

According to Johnson the township treasurer is responsible for taking in township taxes, depositing the taxes in an account, keeping records and working very closely with the township clerk. She added the treasurer is also a voting member of the township board.

"I don't have any reason to think that Theda (Williams) hasn't done a fine job. I don't think it is a matter of her performance. On the other hand, I don't think it ever really hurts to have change," she said.

Johnson added, while she may be a new permanent resident to the community, she has already been getting out into the community by going to various events around town.

"I haven't been sitting back and waiting for things to come to me," she said.

Johnson summed up her reasoning for being voted in as township treasurer by saying: "I would vote for me because of my integrity, communication skills, caring about the community which I live to the point of working hard within it and the need for occasional change."

EVENTS IN BRIEF

About those coming events...

As a courtesy to readers, announcements of local coming events of broad general interest that arrive by the 10 a.m. Monday deadline are published in this section of the newspaper on a one-time, first-come, first-served basis. Because there is no guarantee of placement, readers should not rely on this free service as their only means of reaching the public.

in Charlevoix and graduated from Charlevoix High School in 1927. He held the post of Commandant of the U.S. Coast Guard from 1966 to 1970.

The Society's collectible Christmas ornament for the year 2000 is now available as well as the 2001 calendar featuring vintage photographs and dates of historical importance. These items can be purchased at the Harsha House Museum or at the Ice Cream Social.

Also beginning Sept. 5, the Harsha House Museum's fall hours will be: 1-4 p.m. Tues., Wed., Fri., and Sat.; 1-9 p.m. Thurs.

Software upgrade

The City of Charlevoix is planning to upgrade its utility software and a number of employees will be trained in September. With the conversion, everyone will receive their bill approximately the same time. One billing cycle will receive their bill later than usual in September. That is if everything goes according to plan.

Preservation group loses injunction bid

Marion Township Board's deliberations which consequently resulted in the issuing of a special use permit to the school board that they thought were not adequate. Olson also looked at the zoning ordinance's lack of reference to the future land use as a deficiency in the standards.

"This case involves an important subject matter that raises serious questions concerning the loss of farmland. Statistics show that at the turn of the century we are facing an increase in population that will require this farmland. There is a question of standards. The ordinance (zoning ordinance) has defects. Until these are fixed they don't have the authority to grant a special use permit," said Olson.

Marion Township Planning Commission and Township Board attorney Jim Young disagreed with Olson's criticisms of the township board's decision to issue the special use permit.

"Our decision was that the issue as related to the facts was whether the township decision was supported by sufficient evidence on the records. Expert number one may disagree with expert number two. Assuming both opinions are competent, the township has the right to accept whichever data it considers to be most persuasive. Their findings were comprehensive and detailed," he said.

Olson also grounded his argument for a preliminary injunction on the actions of the school board in proceeding with construction at the site prior to obtaining the proper permits. Included in his argument was the lack of a sewer extension permit and lack of approval from the office of fire and safety.

Furthermore, after reviewing the numbers of students in attendance at each of the three schools Olson did not determine that the construction of a new facility for students of Charlevoix Public Schools needed to be pursued on an expedited basis. Therefore, the resulting delays from a preliminary injunction wouldn't harm the students, he said.

"The students' interests are not a major problem with the preliminary injunction," said Olson.

Ewald disagreed with Olson's depiction of the state of affairs in terms of local facilities for Charlevoix students.

"K-5 and junior high are conducting classes in modulars. The new school offers kids advanced technology so they can compete. A delay would hurt them, and that is who would be irreparably harmed," said Ewald.

The issue of sprawl as related to the proposed sewer extension came under direct scrutiny from those representing the school and township boards. Ewald used a crystal ball metaphor equating the conception of sprawl with speculation of future circumstances, not relevant to the case. "The Plaintiff is asking the court to look into a crystal ball and foresee the future. The controlling body is the township," said Ewald.

"The sewer extension is part of the project, not a crystal ball, and the effects are not a crystal ball. If we don't look into the future, why do we have planning and zoning?" questioned Olson.

Superintendent of Schools John Sturock also addressed the issue of sprawl saying, "Do we consider our children sprawl? We have a need for a facility that we are trying to address. Our youth is our greatest resource and we should try to meet their needs. I think this community is solidly behind this issue."

The environmental group claims the possible future sprawl issue is their primary concern with the site location. However, some have argued the Charlevoix Area Natural Resources Preservation Association is not an environmentally concerned group but rather represents the concerns of adjacent property owners.

"The Charlevoix Natural Resources Preservation Association acting in the public interest is a fallacy. They serve one, maybe two adjoining interests," said Ewald.

Olson addressed this accusation saying before the court, "Accusations claiming we are trying to help Dr. (Robert) Mossman are absurd. In fact it's Martincheck, Boltz down the road from the site and others who are concerned, frustrated citizens. This should not be lightly disregarded."

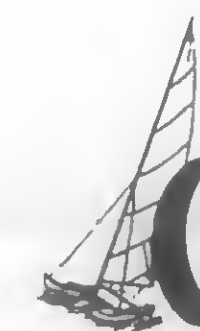

While it may seem that the school board has won the battle, according to Young, their guard should not be let down as the future still holds potential struggles.

"I would expect the court to issue a stay pending the appeal," said Young of the possible next step in the process.

Jim Sneathen of BETA design updated the latest stages in the design and construction process saying, "The final construction documents are being finished and printed this week. We will be filing for the final permit from the Office of Fire Safety. In the meantime, we plan to continue with site preparation."

School is in session

By JULIE MUSILEK

Anxious teachers, community residents and city officials gathered in the gym at the Charlevoix Elementary School early Tuesday morning for a welcome back celebration.

"We are always excited to start a new year. This is a fun time. Schools are lonely places when students aren't filling them. They are there to be filled with kids," said John Sturock, Superintendent of Charlevoix Public Schools.

Students began filing into the halls of the elementary school in shifts Tuesday, some arriving at noon while others came at 1 p.m. Middle school and high school pupils started classes at noon.

As students and staff gathered, a buzz filled classrooms and halls — students becoming reacquainted with friends they hadn't seen over the summer, acquainted with new teachers, and in some cases a new building.

"You would have to be excited; these are exciting times. We have approximately 335 young adolescents coming in at noon. We are as excited and as ready as they are," said Charlevoix Middle School Principal, Dennis VanGuilder.

A successful start is the product of hectic preparation by parents, teachers and students — all with a vested interest in ensuring the students' successful education. Teachers compose lessons and organize classrooms for the students while parents gather supplies and arrange schedules for their kids. Students themselves mentally prepare and begin to shake off the lazy days of summer. The work of all three parties converges on the first day of a new school year.

Integral to the success of an educational institution is gathering of appropriate staff and organizing of the right formula. According to Elementary School principal Richard Swenor that is exactly the course of action

Beach-goers to see changes next year

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Charlevoix is home to an amazing display of fresh water resources and fine sand beaches, which many sun seekers and beach bums will be happy to see undergo beach renovations next spring.

Although, this summer, a local resident lodged a grievance with City Manager Mike Weisner complaining of dangerous drop-offs from the Michigan Beach parking lot, falling approximately 1.5 feet to the beach below. According to the concerned citizen's one phone call to the Charlevoix Courier office has not made for a smooth, worry-free entrance to the recreation area.

"I had a call a couple of weeks ago and a fill-in has been done since then. The Recreation Department responded. I am not aware of anyone being hurt," said Weisner.

While a fill-in was conducted by the Recreation Department at the center entrance to Michigan Beach, two other pits were left unchanged. Perhaps these areas will go untouched for now but come spring 2001 Michigan Beach will be getting a major face lift.

Recreation department head Ike Boss commented on the community benefit to result from changes saying, "This means a lot to Charlevoix residents because there will be many local beaches with nice facilities."

The Charlevoix City Council has developed a beach restoration project targeting both Michigan Beach and Depot Beach.

City Manager Weisner pointed to improvements planned for Michigan Beach which are to include: replacing the wall currently acting as a barrier between the parking lot and the beach, restroom renovations, concession stand changes, two picnic shelters (like those at Ferry Beach), a basketball court and a volleyball court.

"We are planning an access through the old water tower from Park Avenue. There will be a walk way and viewing platforms. This is a nice project," said Weisner.

Two face off for county sheriff position in Nov.

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Facing off in the November election will be Democratic candidate Edward R. Johnson and Republican incumbent, Sheriff George T. Lasater, both vying for the position of sheriff.

Sheriff Lasater has been serving Charlevoix County for the past 24 years and is looking to continue attending to community needs during a possible seventh term.

"In my 24 years of service in the county I've made every effort to make this a sheriff's office citizens of the county can be proud of," said Sheriff Lasater.

While some may argue Sheriff Lasater has built a solid foundation for the department, opposing viewpoints suggest that six consecutive terms served by Lasater are an indication of a need for change. In the upcoming election, voters will decide if the county is ready for a change or if Sheriff Lasater's efforts are to continue.

Edward R. Johnson, Democratic candidate for sheriff said, "I think it is time for a change in the office. We need new ideas. I think I can improve on what is there. We need more people involved to serve the community and to get a new angle and approach on things."

In light of the recent examination by the State Attorney General's Office concerning Sheriff Lasater's performance in a controversial case, some voters agree. However, Lasater's track record also proves his capability of maintaining order and instituting programs of great public importance.

"We are all human and make mistakes periodically but we try to be responsible to the needs of the county in a professional manner," said Sheriff Lasater of the investigation by the Attorney General.

According to his supporters, successful programs instituted by Sheriff Lasater throughout the past 24 years have been immense assets to the community. These programs include; neighborhood watch programs, a DARE program for schools, bicycle safety programs, senior citizens programs and numerous others.

However, Johnson believes he can improve the foundation built by Lasater and offers a few ideas as to how these "improvements" would facilitate the relationship between the citizens of Charlevoix County and the sheriff's office.

"I think things need to be done differently. In light of recent problems I think it is time for a change. Everything will be above board, I will have an open door policy. I plan to meet with community leaders and address their concerns and problems. I've heard a lot of people in the eastern boundaries of the county are concerned about not seeing adequate deputy patrol concentration in their area. I will address their concerns," said Johnson.

But, Lasater's experience as sheriff for the past 24 years speaks for itself. Furthermore, while in office he increased his personal knowledge base training in numerous courses.

Some of the courses attended by Lasater include; crime prevention school, child and spouse abuse seminars, seat belt seminars, and sexual assault seminars.

However, like Lasater, Johnson offers voters an extensive array of attractive qualities for a law enforcement official to hold.

According to Johnson, having graduated Summa Cum Laude with an associates of science degree in Law Enforcement, he is educated and aware of the duties of the county sheriff. Johnson also played an active role in law enforcement, serving with the Clawson Police Department, thus further enhancing his understanding of a sheriff's active role.

Fund set up for burn victim

To help meet the medical expenses and cover lost pay from being out of work after being terribly burned in an accident, a fund has been set up for area resident David Hostetter at Charlevoix State Bank.

Hostetter, who owns a body shop on Barnard Road, was working on a automobile engine a week ago when a backfire caught his shirt on fire and burned off most of the skin on his arms, chest and neck.

For treatment Hostetter has to go to Munson Hospital in Traverse City for what looks like a long recovery. However, Hostetter and his family have no medical insurance.

To help him and his family, money is being accepted at the Charlevoix State Bank under the name, "Hostetter Burn Fund." For further information on this fund or how you can help, please contact Randy Maurer at 547-5642.

OPINIONS

Drive safely during this new school year

School is back in session. That means it is time to be a little more safe on the roads around the schools and buses.

As a motorist there are many important rules to remember when school is in session. Last week, Charlevoix County Sheriff George T. Lasater highlighted some of these.

We felt, for safety's sake, we would like to reiterate them and add some thoughts of our own.

The most important rule to remember when you see a bus with its red lights flashing is to stop your vehicle behind the bus. The red lights mean that children are getting off; it does not mean the bus-driver is letting you go around.

Doing so is dangerous for the children and against the law.

Additionally, use some caution when you see a bus with flashing yellow lights. This means the bus is about to stop and let some children off. As with the red flashing lights, it does not mean it is time for you to step on your gas pedal and pass the bus.

Again, that is very dangerous.

When driving by a bus stop you must be very cautious of the children. As many parents will tell you, children can be unpredictable and have been known to run out in front of vehicles without warning.

This is especially true in school zones, where there are many children to watch out for. We must stress to motorists — of all ages — to drive slow in these areas.

A little side note to students with vehicles: It does not matter how cool your car looks as it zooms by your friends at the school, or how loud you can make the engine when you rev it, if your actions were responsible for injuries to a pedestrian.

We at the Charlevoix Courier would like to wish all of the children a successful and safe school year.

What uses more energy, power or manual mowers?

Roger Knutson

'Ear to the ground'

Last summer, on impulse, I bought an old-fashioned, human-powered, reel-type lawn mower. It is not an antique; it has rubber tires, its original paint and for all I know, titanium gears.

When pushed through the grass it makes a quiet snickering sound. This magnificent product of the American Lawn Mower Company cost me the grand sum of ten dollars and has been more than worth the price.

The patch of green around our house is not properly identified as a lawn, at least by comparison. In the mowed portion of our yard, I can count at least 20 species of plants that are not grass, although grass dominates early in the season. The other plants are mostly European natives that came here with the grass seed centuries ago and have thrived anywhere we attempted to grow the grasses they came with.

All these plants grow at different rates and flourish during different parts of the summer. What can be said positively about the lawn is that it is predominantly green and that it seems to thrive without much interference from me or anyone else. It produces a single marvelous crop of dandelion flowers each spring, but they are nowhere in evidence at any other season.

This late summer I have been using my new-old, human-powered lawn mower on my grass and other plants. It requires small adjustments every now and then, but when properly adjusted, it cuts everything beautifully and drops the cut blades and leaves right where they were before being cut, already distributed as next year's humus. I can mow the lawn early Sunday morning and not disturb anyone. When I stop, the manual mower stops; I don't have to shut it off.

I do own a power mower and I do use it. I had been led to believe that it was easier to cut the grass with the power mower and that I was saving my energy if not the world's.

My energy is important to me, possibly more important than the small amount I reduce the world's oil supply by cutting grass with petroleum power. After pushing the manually operated edition of lawn care this morning, I began to think about just how much more or how much less energy I might be using with one or the other of my grass-cutting options.

It didn't seem any harder to push the reel mower than it was to push the powered one. The manual reel mower weighs just over 20 pounds to about 50 for the power mower, but how hard are they to push? Had

I been fooling myself that the power mower was easier to push? I have always been more interested in information that opinion, and a lifetime of biological research has suggested that in most cases information is valuable.

The scale from my fishing tackle box, when used to pull the reel mower while it was mowing low grass, registered 13 pounds. The same process with the power mower required 14 pounds of pull. The requirements are so close to the same I declared it a tie.

It takes me as much energy to push the power mower as it takes to push the manual product. I don't save any of my energy either way. I can save my and my neighbor's ears from further assault if I use the manual method, but even that is not enough to convince me to abandon the power mower completely. When I need to be quiet, for myself or others, the option is there. I believe that is a good option to have. Choices are always important, and choosing with information is more important than choosing based on opinion, in lawn care and in other human activities.

The Democratic Party is alive and well

Editor:

The headline on Julie Musilek's front page article in the Aug. 23 Charlevoix Courier asks, "Where are the Democrats?"

As one, let me tell you where my cohorts are in Charlevoix. They are working their political beliefs. They are working with the Community Food Pantry to feed the hungry.

They are in the League for Peace and Freedom pursuing peace. They are working for justice in funding by joining Planned Parenthood in questioning why Viagra is paid for but not prescriptions for birth control. They are accepting the challenge to work for the dignity and rights of all Americans.

Or she is Kay Chase, Democrat extraordinary. She is chairwoman of the First District Democrats, Chairwoman of the Charlevoix County Democrats, delegate to state and national conventions, dinner organizer, frequent press release writer of those unpublished articles about Democrats' activities, mother, daughter, postcard writer and mailer and great friend.

We are alive and well in Charlevoix.

Remember 'other guys'

Editor:

Labor Day is an important time to remember the diligent efforts of America's workers. Throughout our nation's history it is the diligent efforts of working men and women who have made our economy move.

As Executive Director of the Northern Michigan Chapter of Associated Builders and Contractors, I would like to send out a special note of thanks to the "other guys." The millions and millions of workers in our country who have chosen to exercise their freedom of choice and who have chosen not to belong to a labor union.

The U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics estimates that organized labor represents just 14 percent of the nation's workforce. This means that the vast majority of today's workers choose not to belong to a union. Nationwide, ABC represents approximately 22,000 merit (open) shop construction and construction related firms. Since the 1920s labor unions have steadily lost their grip on our nation's construction industry.

These highly skilled craftspeople are helping to build our schools, our highways, our hospitals, our churches, our offices — our country. Far too many times, on Labor Day, these dedicated workers often toil without the recognition provided to their few union counterparts. This Labor Day, I encourage everyone to recognize and appreciate those open shop workers — workers essential to the overall welfare and stability of our industry and our country.

Trees to be trimmed in city, while replacements offered

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

"Charlevoix the Beautiful" is home to some of the most dazzling landscape in the world — thanks to city officials, the Shade Tree Commission and area residents this characterization will continue to accurately depict our surroundings.

At a city council meeting Aug. 21 final bids were decided on as to which company would handle the City of Charlevoix's tree trimming and removal needs.

"This is an ongoing program. Every year we take down trees and trim others. These are right-of-way trees not those in peoples backyards," said Street Superintendent John Martin.

According to Martin, the project is funded through tax dollars provided in general operational funding. A memo presented at the city council meeting Aug. 21 states that the city has allocated $40,000 to this year's budget for tree removal and trimming.

Bids were opened to parties wishing to undertake the matter of removal and trimming Aug. 16. Five companies responded and Willcome Tree Service of Petoskey

"Our goal is to keep the tree lines filled. We've seen areas along the sidewalk where there are gaps that need attention."

Bob Irving,
Shade Tree Commission member

tabulated the lowest cost incurred by their company while managing local problem spots and were thus awarded the post.

Both Martin and Electric and Water Superintendent, Ed Whitley, will be headed up and down streets in search of possible troublesome trees. These trouble spots occur where trees have aged over time and pose a threat to neighboring structures making tree removal a needed service.

However, as was foreseen by the Shade Tree Commission, if removal continues without an effort to replenish the supply, we will see the character of our community change.

The Shade Tree Commission is offering City of Charlevoix residents and business owners the opportunity to pitch in and make sure street-side shade trees, which are removed, are replaced.

"Our goal is to keep the tree lines filled. We've seen areas along the sidewalk where there are gaps that need attention. In the last two years removal has taken place but there has been less planting. We need to get the word out that people get these trees free of charge. We just ask that you keep them watered," said Bob Irving, Shade Tree Commission member.

TREES

Residents and businesses are offered their choice of trees to fill vacant areas including: red maple, sugar maple, green ash, little leaf linden, red oak and Callery pear. According to Irving, tree planting is to take place in the fall except for the red oak which will take root in the spring.

Mary Adams, Shade Tree Commission member, encourages tree planting of various species warning the danger of uniform planting. "We are trying not to encourage planting of all Maples because if a blight comes through like was seen years ago with the elms, afflicted by Dutch Elm's Disease, it would threaten the trees."

Anyone who notices a dying tree or branches weighing on power lines should call Martin at 547-3276 and those who see gaps in the tree line and are looking to fill the void should notify the City Manager at 547-3270. The city provides tree removal, cutting back and replanting support staff.

Man arrested for assaulting Charlevoix sheriff's deputy

A Melrose Township man was recently arrested for assaulting a Charlevoix sheriff's deputy.

Charlevoix County Deputy Rex Behling was on patrol in Melrose Township performing liquor inspections around 5 p.m. on Aug. 31.

While traveling between locations he checked the registration of a car in front of the patrol car.

The registered owner was shown to have a restricted driver's license from multiple alcohol violations. The car was followed into the parking lot of a liquor establishment where the deputy was headed.

Behling at this point determined that the driver may be in violation of his restricted driver's license. Before a traffic stop could be made the driver stopped and got out of his car and began to confront Behling.

He refused to produce a driver's license and stated he did not have to. He began calling Behling a communist and then struck Behling in the chest several times with a small radio/telephone.

He was advised he was under arrest and he began to fight Behling and even tried to spray the deputy with pepper spray that the suspect was carrying.

Behling was able to call for assistance and controlled the suspect until off-duty deputy Todd Reeves arrived.

The suspect was arrested without further incident and is lodged in the Charlevoix County jail.

He is expected to be charged with Assaulting a Police Officer, Resisting and Obstruction and Violation of a Restricted Driver's license. The name of the 38-year-old man is being withheld until his first court appearance.

Sheriff George T. Lasater complimented Deputies Behling and Reeves for controlling the situation and using good professional judgment in handling the crisis.

Neither the deputies nor the suspect were injured during the confrontation.

Annual Charlevoix County CROP walk to be Sept. 30

With a new motto of "putting caring into action locally and globally," many earnest people in Charlevoix County are getting ready to walk for the hungry again this year.

The 17th Annual Charlevoix County CROP Walk will be on Sept. 30 and walkers are hoping for a beautifully sunny day like last year's.

Walkers from Boyne City, Charlevoix and East Jordan will walk approximately six miles, ending their hike at the Ironton Congregational Church where Boyne Valley Lions Club will serve a luncheon to the walkers.

Co-ordinators of this year's event were named in May at a meeting with Johanna Balzer, Associate Director of CROP Walk in Michigan. Co-ordinators are Kay Smith, Charlevoix; Diana Walls, Boyne City; and Marge Teske, East Jordan.

They have set a goal of 150 walkers for the 2000 Walk and hope to raise $17,500 to help hungry people, both in Charlevoix County and in countries around the world. Though most of the funds raised will be used by Church World Services in overseas relief and development work, a percentage will remain in Charlevoix County, to be used by the three local food pantries in these communities.

Last year 136 walkers earned $17,210. Each of the food pantries in Charlevoix, East Jordan and Boyne City received $1,433.59 last year for local use in combating hunger.

CROP Walks are interfaith, community events, part of the outreach of Church World Service, the disaster relief, development, and refugee resettlement ministry of the Church World Service.

Walkers are urged to ask family, friends, and co-workers to sponsor them for this event. Sponsor envelopes are available from local churches.

For more information about the Walk, contact Kay Smith, 547-2920 in Charlevoix; Marge Teske at 536-3128 in East Jordan; or Diana Walls at 582-6485 in Boyne City.

Please join the many other walkers who have made Michigan the leading CROP Walk fund raising Region in the USA for CWS for the past fourteen years.

Charlevoix Beaches to be improved next spring

The city council estimated the total cost of the proposed changes to Michigan Beach at $423,000.

With increased amenities like basketball and volleyball courts, beach recreation opportunities will be attractive features for beach visitors and according to Boss may even allow for summer beach volleyball leagues.

"This project will bring a lot to Charlevoix residents. We need restrooms at Michigan Beach and Depot Beach. About three or four years ago the lines collapsed inside the building at Michigan Beach and we haven't had indoor restrooms since. They will be tearing out the floor, improving the concessions and installing indoor restrooms," said Boss.

Depot Beach will also be receiving needed attention. The city has allocated $191,000 in funding for the project. Depot Beach changes are to include: new restrooms, landscaping, an irrigation system, play equipment, a volleyball court, fencing in given areas, sidewalk ramps and a wood chipped trail through neighboring forest-like areas.

These exciting improvements are scheduled to begin in spring of 2001 but with the tourist season approaching soon thereafter construction may see delays.

"We are hoping to start the project in the spring of 2001. We'll have to assess how much we will disrupt the park. We may have delays but we'll have to assess that as we proceed," said Weisner.

School bells ring once again for area children taken in the elementary school over the summer.

"We've got six new bodies in the building — one new teacher, two new custodians, a cook and a playground supervisor. Four teachers will also be changing positions. We are gung ho on Balanced Literacy, a new program teachers were trained for. This is exciting and it is a great research-based program for the kids. I'm always excited about a new year," said Swenor.

The hard work of staff, parents and students was evident as the new year opened with optimism and encouraging energy.

"We're going to have a great year. I am looking forward to having a wonderful group of students, excellent parental support and a dynamic staff. Everything you need for a successful school year," said High School Principal, Gary Grundman.

Charlevoix resident makes a run for state house seat

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

In the upcoming election, Nov. 7, Charlevoix resident Francis "Brownie" Flanders will be running as a Republican for the post of Michigan state representative to the House of Representatives in Lansing.

Francis
Flanders

Flanders has not always been a part of the political arena, he recently retired from a career in banking spanning over two decades. "I feel like with my experience working in a trusted industry, dealing with small mom and pop operations in the northern part of Michigan, I have a good sense of northern Michigan culture. I have a lot of energy and this is my opportunity to bring something back to the part of the country I love," said Flanders.

In 1977, after passing 20 years with Citibank and Trust Company in Jackson, Flanders relocated to Alpena where he worked for Alpena Savings Bank for two years. Then, in 1980, he chose to transfer to the larger of the two Alpena banks, NBD where he worked until 1992.

He then received a call from his old friends at Citibank, who had recently purchased Charlevoix County State Bank, and offered him a position. In February of 1992, he took over the Charlevoix County State bank as President.

In 1997 the bank was sold to Citizens where Flanders worked as a consultant for two years, then choosing to retire.

If elected to the post of State Representative to State House District 106, covering Charlevoix, Cheboygan, Presque Isle and Alpena counties, Flanders will be replacing first term incumbent Andy Neumann of Alpena.

"I have no aspirations to go to Washington and pursue my political career further, I just want to represent the people of northern Michigan," said Flanders.

Flanders highlighted a few issues of both federal and local importance he views as meriting local attention.

The first of which is the bovine TB cases found in deer herds and commercial cattle. The USDA has revoked Michigan's TB free status, which according to Flanders, has a terrible impact on farmers.

The DNR has targeted the affected area naming it DMA 452, short for deer management area 452. This area spans five counties in northeast Michigan including Alcona, Alpena, Presque Isle, Montmorency and Oscoda.

Flanders views this issue as part of "survival of the fittest," nature's way of managing an overabundance seen in deer herds.

"This will have a wide-ranging effect, not only are hunters and farmers being affected, but places like gas stations are losing sales, as they are no longer permitted to sell bait," he said.

The second big issue of concern to Flanders is proper care provisions for local seniors.

"I'm a senior myself, I share the people's concerns over the cost of prescription medication. If you have no private insurance there is no prescription money allocated by Medicare. This is a federal issue that needs to be addressed on the federal or state level," said Flanders.

Flanders claims to lie in the mainstream on the liberal/conservative continuum stating, "I'm gonna be on the side that believes we need less government, less intervention and less taxes where possible. I hold Christian values and currently serve on the church vestry and believe in the Right to Life. I have no hidden agendas and I do not consider these viewpoints as positions but they are my beliefs."

Flanders is endorsed by both the Michigan State Chamber of Commerce and the Small Business Association of Michigan.

Neumann wants to finish the work he has started

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Democratic incumbent candidate for State Representative, Andy Neumann looks to the November election with optimism and fresh ideas for northern Michigan residents in the 106th district.

"I have a lot of unfinished business," said Neumann.

Neumann, currently completing his first term, holds a grass roots outlook on politics. "We all have to take on a level of responsibility to make our lives and the lives of others better. I decided to get involved in politics to take on that responsibility," he said.

According to Neumann, through his efforts two landmark bills have passed including: a rescindence by Governor John Engler, who retracted his program that proposed a shift in road commission funding to private hands and the second instance where Neumann acted as a watchdog for area Ameritech users to amend the Telecommunications Act protecting users from unwarranted charges.

According to Neumann changing policy as a one man team is no simple task.

"So much of my job is based on building strong relationships. Issues, both big and small, require working relationships with community chairs and other legislators in both the House and Senate and getting these individual's support for projects and ideas. That is the only way we can get things done, especially in northern Michigan. One person represents this vast area — we need cooperative efforts to get things done," said Neumann.

Neumann pointed to several issues as being of central importance to the 106th district, one of those being health care.

"Michigan is the forty-first state in terms of the quality of state health care provisions. Those on Medicaid are not slackers, most are senior citizens who have spent all the money they had saved and are now in long-term care facilities or are children without health care. In the 106th district we have five hospitals who have collectively lost 13-16 million dollars. Nurses have been laid off and physical therapy has been cut back. We've lost services and physicians because they can't afford to stay, the reimbursements from Medicare and Medicaid are not enough."

Rayders golfers rack up two wins in conference

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

The Charlevoix High School Varsity Golf team is showing its talent on the course with two recent wins and one great tournament finish.

"I'm very pleased with the team. They are jelling," said Coach Jim Glynn.

On Aug. 31 the Rayders beat Boyne City at Ye Ole Nine Holes in Boyne City, 166-181. Leading the team was David Shearer, who shot a 39.

The day before, Aug. 30, the Rayders faced 23 schools including; Boyne City, Harbor Springs, East Jordan, Inland Lakes and Suttons Bay, at the Inland Lakes Invitational. Charlevoix walked away from that event with a second place finish and two members of the team taking medals. They were: Shearer and Allen Brooks.

Charlevoix's score at this 18 hole event was 332.

Both of these nice showings came right after another win, Aug. 29, against Elk Rapids at the A-Ga-Ming golf course, 175-186. Shearer was the leader for the Rayders again after shooting a 37.

These wins leave Charlevoix 3-0 in the conference standings and 3-1 overall.

Charlevoix football team comes up with a big win

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

The Charlevoix Varsity Football team achieved a little satisfaction after a loss the week before, with a 27-6 win over Benzie Central Saturday at Benzie.

The game was originally scheduled for Friday, but was canceled due to bad weather.

"We played very well. Defensively the kids were very aggressive and physical and quick to attack the ball," said Coach Todd Klinger. He added senior linebacker Matt Horon had a tremendous game, chalking up 18 total tackles and an interception.

"The defensive line of Rob Boss, John Kilkenny, Mike Kochanny, Chris Loper and Chad Mackowiak all played great games," Klinger added.

Offensively, the Rayders also had a fantastic night gaining 212 rushing yards.

"(The offensive line) gave us a great surge all night," Klinger said.

The Rayders started scoring on the opening drive when senior quarterback Jeremiah Teuscher passed to Ben VanGuilder for a 20 yard touchdown. Also in the first was Ben Coen with a one yard run for a touchdown and — set up by Horon's interception — a 19 yard touchdown run by Ryan Rafacz.

Benzie came back at the start of the second half with a score, but missed the extra point. This was their only chance for the rest of the day.

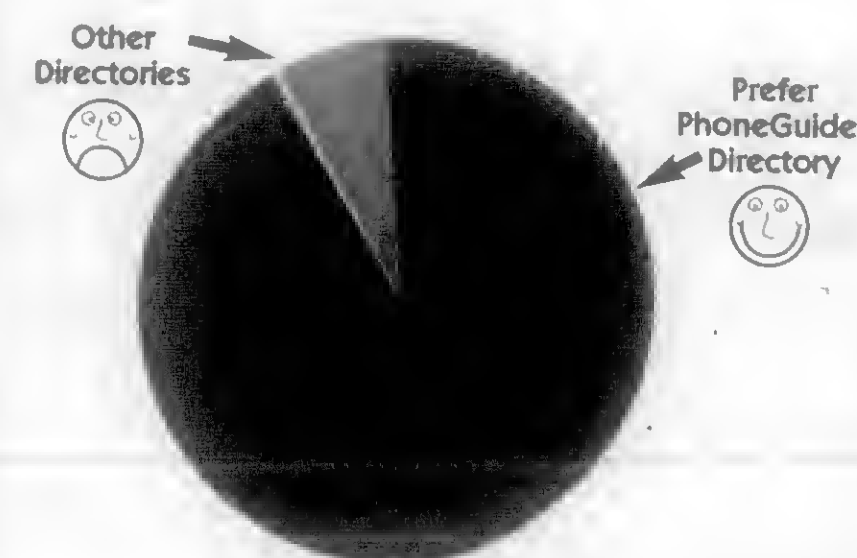

Charlevoix answered this touchdown with a touchdown of its own when Coen scored on a five yard run.

Ryan Leitner was the leading rusher with 19 carries for 76 yards. Coen had 14 carries for 68 yards. Teuscher was 10-15 with his passes and threw for 110 yards, while Rafacz caught seven passes and ran for 67 yards.

Lake kept busy with yacht races throughout last week

A. Nony Mouse

'Yachting notes'

The summer series finished on a spectacular note.

In Division 1, SLAPSHOT needed to beat KAMIKAZE for a tie on points in order to win the series on the tiebreaker of most first places. In this last race she did beat her, but she also let GOTCHA! beat both of them for that vital first place. The series ends in a most unusual unbreakable tie: SLAPSHOT and KAMIKAZE have identical records; 11 points from two firsts, three seconds and one third. Not only that, but their drops are also identical (one third, one fourth).

So, we have two Summer Series First Place Winners.

GOTCHA! earns third place honors just one point back at 12. Then it's FLASH with 20, MINT JULEP at 24 and BLASEN IV with 33.

In Division 2, MI JOY, skipped the final race and still had only seven points, just one more than perfect. M3's second earns her the series second place honors with 15. A tiebreaker (most first place finishes) gives BABE (who also skipped the final race) third place over J HAWK, each with 20. BALD EAGLE with 22, SAFFRON with 26 and SUNKIST with 38 wrap up the division. SAFFRON won the final race by 10 minutes.

The P-26 Fleet had a great series finish as JESSE won the evening and thus, the series with just 11 points. TIRELESS dropped its sixth place in this race to nose out LOST VERMONT for series second and third on a tiebreaker (most first place finishes) with 12 points each. ORIGINAL SIN with 17, CYGNUS with 24 and SAND-PIPER with 31 follow, in that order.

The small Jib and Main (JAM) Fleet had only two qualifiers, so the first place honor goes to APOTHECARY with 6 points — a perfect score. CHEEMAUN, the only other qualifier, ended up with 13 points.

The J-22 Fleet had a superb series with SWINE FLEW, by winning the final race, tying HUSSY with 11 points. The first tie breaker, number of first place finishes (3 to 2), leaves HUSSY First and SWINE FLEW second. With a third place in the final race, TOO RECKLESS ends up with 13, just 2 points back, and solidly captures the third place flag.

While MOISTURE MISSILE had the second place finish, she ends up behind SUPERFLUOUS in the series with 30 and 24 points, respectively. FIRST DATE with 33, ROCK STEADY with 38, GECKO with 40, PALEFACE LITE with 41 and HABANERO with 53 wind up the top ten.

Following are CRAZY HORSE 61, HIGH MAINTENANCE 65, WHAT'S HER NAME and JUBILIES both with 68 in that order (tiebreaker), THUNDERSTRUCK has 73, HOG-TIDE 81, and SCURRY 87.

But, that wasn't all for yacht races last week, as boaters were on the water last weekend for the annual Charlevoix Yacht Club Triangle and the Red Fox Regatta. These events were all over the place, from the ridiculous to the sublime.

From the ridiculous... Friday's Charlevoix Yacht Club Triangle; dismal, wet and angry skies greeted the adventurous as they donned foul weather gear and headed out to the starting line. An observant and understanding race committee recognized that the visible lightning streaks were rapidly joining us on the course and promptly (as soon as they were sure that we all were soaked) canceled the race. The applause was thunderous! Most retired to Whitneys', the beloved sponsor of this non-race!

...through holes in the lake... Saturday's Charlevoix to Boyne City leg of the Red Fox started under gloomy conditions, but with a decent breeze. The best and the luckiest were well ahead as they made the quick passage to Horton Bay via Hemingway Point and Young State Park. (It would be too easy to just let them sail directly from the start to the finish line.) It seems, however, that Mother Nature felt they were doing too well and wrapped her skirt around the "I" mark, cutting off all traces of a breeze but only to the area around the mark.

In the strange vernacular of the racing sailor, this is affectionately known as "A Hole in the Lake." It typically lasts only until the last place yacht has caught up to the first place yacht and seems rather fair — at least to those near the back of the fleet. One hole in the lake is bad enough, but as soon as everyone was moving again, she gave us another.

YOUR HEALTH

Watch for the signs of skin cancer

Daniel Mann, M.D.

'To your health'

Northern Michigan offers many year-round outdoor activities for everyone, from boating, hiking, sunbathing, and golfing in the summer, to skiing and showboating in the winter.

Unfortunately, these activities provide excellent opportunities to become exposed to cancer-causing ultraviolet radiation from the sun.

Although skin cancer is currently a popular topic in the news and press, it has always been a concern in the medical community. Recently, skin cancer rates have been rising every year exceeding all other cancers. Over half of all new cancers are skin cancer, with over 1 million new cases each year. Despite these alarming numbers, few of us take preventative measures to limit our risk of developing skin cancer.

A suntan is your body's response to injury caused by ultraviolet radiation from the sun. UVA and UVB rays have been linked to premature wrinkles and sunburn, respectively. Both lead to skin cancer. There are several kinds of skin cancer, including basal cell carcinoma, squamous cell carcinoma and melanoma, which is the most serious type, as it can spread throughout one's body.

Sunburns, especially severe blistering ones, are the leading cause of melanoma, as well as the most preventable risk factor. Other risk factors include fair-skinned, blond or red-haired individuals, freckles, blue eyes, and other family members with melanoma.

I like to instruct patients about warning signs of moles and pigmented lesions that are suspicious for melanoma using the A-B-C-D mnemonic. These include (A)symmetry, (B)order irregularity or scalloping, (C)olor variegation, including hues of blue, black, brown, red, purple, and white, and (D)iameter over 6mm. In addition, lesions that are changing in these characteristics should be examined closely.

The following are some helpful suggestions to limit your risk of developing skin cancer:

- Limit sun exposure, especially between 10 am and 4 p.m., as this is when the sun and ultraviolet levels are most intense.

- Wear protective clothing, including a hat and sunglasses to limit exposure.

- Avoid tanning beds.

- Wear a sunscreen with at least SPF 15 that protects from both UVA and UVB radiation, such as the recently approved compound Avobenzone.

- Apply sunscreen 15-30 minutes before sun exposure, as it takes that long to start working.

- Reapply sunscreen at least every 2 hours, especially if you are sweating.

- Sunscreen needs to be worn throughout the year and even on cloudy days, as up to 80% of ultraviolet light reaches you on these days. Water, snow, and cement are excellent at reflecting UV light.

- Don't forget to apply sunscreen to lips, and other areas that are susceptible to burning, such as the nose, ears, and neck.

- Use waterproof or water-resistant sunscreens with swimming, boating, or other water sports.

- Remain in the shade as much as possible.

- Children need sun protection also. In fact, children receive up to 80 percent of their lifetime sun exposure by age 18. Do not use sunscreen on infants younger than 6 months of age and keep their body and head covered whenever possible in sunlight.

Most importantly, remember to examine your skin regularly and see your physician if you have any suspicious lesions or questions. I hope these suggestions will help to ensure many enjoyable, but safe outdoor activities under the sun.

Dr. Daniel M. Mann, MD can be contacted at Pine River Medical Associates, Inc. located at 14734 Park Avenue in Charlevoix. The phone number is (231) 547-6554.

Local artist donates lighthouse paintings

Charlevoix artist Sue Bolt donated an original, signed print of the Charlevoix lighthouse to each member of Charlevoix Area Hospital's Lighthouse Club, which boasts a membership of 584.

Lighthouse club members received their signed print at the annual reception Aug. 17 at Charlevoix Area Hospital. More than 70 members filled the hospital's dining room overlooking Lake Michigan.

The Lighthouse Club was established in the early 1980s. Its membership dues of $100 a year helps to support the hospital. Community members, hospital employees, volunteers and physicians make up the club's membership.

Sue Bolt, and her daughter, Lori, have been faithful Christmas tree designers for the hospital's annual fund-raiser Holly Daze.

Soccer team starts season with a win in Leland

The Rayders soccer team gained a split Aug. 26 at the season opening tournament in Leland.

Charlevoix lost the opening 4-1 to Class B Reed City. The Rayder loan goal was scored by Roscoe Serrels on a penalty kick.

Charlevoix came back strong to claim third place in the consolation championship against McBain NMC, 3-0.

The Rayders mustered 14 shots on goal compared to 2 for McBain.

The Rayders goals were scored by Serrels, Kiel Tilley and Jason Haas. Assists went to Spencer Bryan, Mike Dupuis, Bryce Daly and Craig Stockman.

Tilley and Haas also shared the shutout in goal.

Not too far from the finish line she saw something else that displeased her and - you guessed it - yet another hole in the lake! Finally, after sailing and parking for 3 hours and 20 minutes, at 2:40 Shulz's big KOKOMO crossed the line.

Her negative rating increased her corrected time to 4:21:25, still best in both Class (PHRF 5) and the Fleet. Those holes caused the great majority to spend over 5 hours on the course. Some 480 of us (97 boats) then spent hours at the debriefing with truth serum provided by a company called Mount Gay.

...to the sublime. Sunday's Boyne City to Charlevoix leg saw Mother Nature relent and let the non-displacement boats start last, but finish first as they screamed home.

TUCKFIELD's Cat (817) had the first gun at 1:21:49; less than 2 hours after her start! (On Saturday, it took her 4 hours and 44 minutes to win her class.)

KOKOMO again crossed first in displacement yachts (those in the water as opposed to those on the water) but not until 1:38:41, not nearly fast enough to save her corrected time of just over 3 hours, for eighth in her class.

First in Fleet and in PHRF 2 goes to GULLSTONE, Babel's lean and mean I-210, with WHITE KNUCKLES, just 80 seconds slower, getting Second in Fleet and first in PHRF 5.

Highlights... Quite a few sailed well enough to get first in class on both days, meaning they also were first in class overall. (Overall is scored on lowest total corrected elapsed time, not finish position.)

FLASH in Div. 2 (JAM 2), JESSIE in Div. 3 (PHRF 1), GECKO in Div. 4 (J-22) and all three non-displacement winners accomplished that feat. There, it was TUCKFIELD in the Open Div. 10, LISTON in Nacra 5.8, Div. 11 and STRUBLIZED in Inter Div. 12.

(JAM 1) CAPRICCIO (Sat.) and BOOMA (Sun.) - Div. 5 (PHRF 2) WHITE LIGHTNING and GULLSTONE, Div. 6 (PHRF 3) RILEY and SLAPSHOT, Div. 7 (PHRF 4) GOTCHA! and LOCOMOTION, Div. 8 (Melges 24) SNOW PILE EXPRESS & MENTAL FLOSS, Div. 9 (PHRF 5) KOKOMO and WHITE KNUCKLES.

With the Charlevoix Yacht Club Triangle and the Red Fox Regatta behind us, we have an open Wednesday evening, Sept. 6. On Sept. 13, we'll have the first race of the six race Fall Series. Also, next week, we'll publish the Charlevoix Yacht Club Treasure Hunt results and let you try your skills on solving some of the now obsolete clues.

The American Red Cross needs your blood

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

The American Red Cross will be at the Community Reformed Church in Charlevoix, on the corner of US-31 North and Meech, Thursday, in search of donors willing to aid in their cause.

"The process takes about 45 minutes, and in that 45 minutes I can save up to three lives. It keeps me coming back," said Jim Rummel, communications manager for the Great Lakes Region of the Red Cross.

However valiant the cause may be, it seems that any time blood is involved people tend to get squeamish and are hesitant to contribute. Rummel assures all perspective donors that no risks are involved during the donation process.

"For the donor there are no real health risks associated with the process. The needle and bag are new and sterile. They are unwrapped at the time of donation," said Rummel.

According to Rummel, blood drawn from donors is separated into three parts, each performing a vital role in the human body.

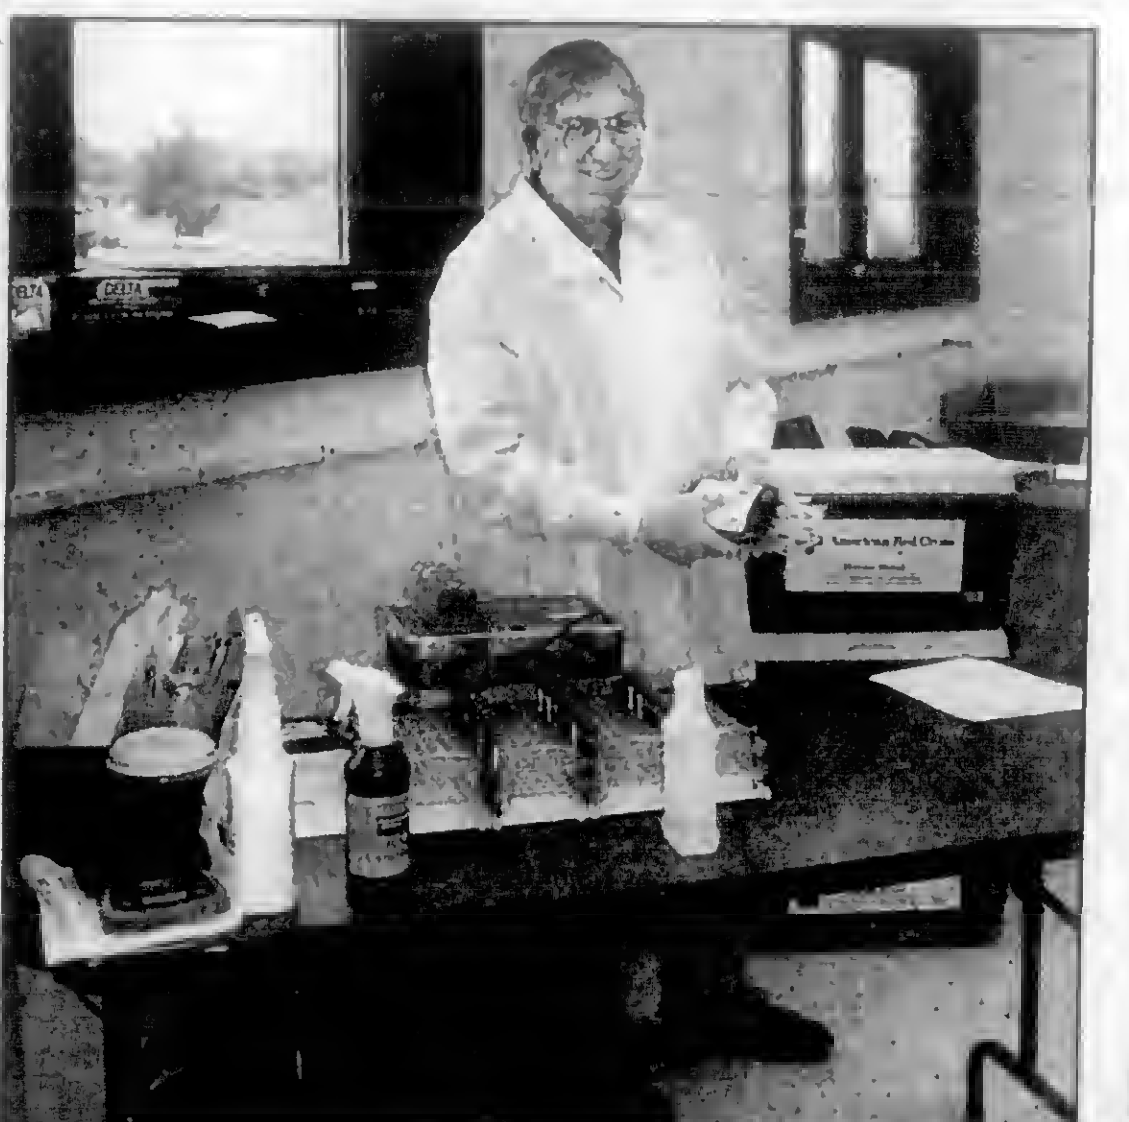

Whole blood can first be broken down into red blood cells. These red blood cells are needed for surgery patients who require a high level of red blood cells to be present in order to allow oxygen to be used by the body. The second division is made up of platelets, a part of the blood used to restore the blood's ability to clot. According to Rummel, cancer patients are huge users of platelets. The third useful material present in the blood sample is plasma, the yellow portion which further aids in the blood's ability to clot.

"Patients in Michigan, not including the five Detroit counties, need 2,000 of these products daily which equates to about 700 donors," said Rummel.

These figures reveal a constant need must be met in our area. This need can be reached through the aid of participants willing to expend 45 minutes of their time to save the lives of others.

The process involves registration where the donor's identity, lifestyle and general habits are established. The donor's temperature is then taken to establish the level of hemoglobin (iron) in the blood, "to make sure the donation won't hurt you."

"Poor eating habits will get you deferred. We lose six to seven percent due to low iron levels. We lose another six percent due to donors unknown elevated temperatures, flu and cold symptoms. You will also be deferred if taking certain medications or if you have visited certain parts of the world where you may have contracted diseases, like malaria. This is a fairly specific process," said Rummel.

After you've been given the green light you are then allowed to donate — this process takes about eight minutes. The donor lies down on a table and the individual facilitating will choose an appropriate vein where the needle is then inserted. Once the bag is filled donors are escorted to a refreshment area where juice and cookies are offered to re-elevate sugar levels in the blood.

"We suggest refreshments so the body won't react negatively to giving out five percent of its blood. The response of the recipients is the best part. I have gotten many letters thanking Red Cross donors for saving hospital patients lives," said Rummel.

Donations will be accepted from 1 p.m. until 6:45 p.m. Sept. 7.

We have changed the programs and seniors are paying out of pocket for care and prescriptions more so than ever," said Neumann.

If reelected Neumann hopes to initiate a program that would allow the state to negotiate prices for medications commonly used by seniors. The pharmacy then orders the medication under the program. According to Neumann this program would cut bills in half for those individuals 60 and over.

Neumann was born in Alpena where he, wife Sandi and their two children still reside. Throughout his lifelong residence in Alpena Neumann has been involved in numerous vocations and projects of community service.

Prior to being elected to the post of state representative Neumann was employed for 17 years as a city of Alpena EMT and an area firefighter.

Neumann was also involved in the Alpena school system from 1989-92.

"I offer a real voice for voters. I have been very active in the district and in Lansing representing the District 106. I put 1,000-1,500 miles a week on my car making sure I am everywhere in the district that I can be," said Neumann.

Football team looks to its speed for success

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

While they may not be the biggest team in the conference, the Charlevoix High School Varsity Football team has some great speed and some seasoned players.

According to Coach Todd Klinger, 14 players from last year's team make up the total 26 players on this year's team, with an even mix of juniors and seniors. These players will be valuable assets on both offense and defense.

"Overall offensively, we have some kids that will be able to make plays and give us an exciting offense," Klinger said.

Klinger has two in mind for the quarterback position this year: Senior Jeremiah Teuscher and junior Patrick Gowell.

Teuscher started in the last three games last year and is good with his tosses, Klinger said. While Gowell is probably a little quicker with the runs, he added.

Leading in the offensive backfield is senior Ryan Leitner, senior Troy Smith and senior Ben Coen — Coen is a third year starter. Receivers this year include junior Ryan Racacz, senior Ben Van-Guilder, senior Kyle Louiselle and junior Dennis Avery.

The offensive line will be lead by senior Matt Horon at guard, junior Rob Boss at tackle and junior Nick Schwein at guard. Other players on the offensive line include: Junior Chris Loper and senior Bryan Burns at center and senior John Kilkenny, senior Keith Patrick, senior Mike Kochanny and junior Kyle Dobrowolski.

At the tight end spots this year are: Junior Keith Daly, junior Bo Moore and junior Gordie Lake.

Many of these same players will be seen working both sides of the ball when the Rayders defense takes the field.

"Everybody plays two positions on the offense and defense," Klinger said. "We try to set up a rotation to get as many kids playing as we can and also give kids a rest."

In the linebacker spots are: Coen, Horon, Schwein and Smith. The defensive linemen are Boss, Kilkenny and senior Chad Mackowiak.

The defensive secondary will include: VanGuilder, Racacz, Louiselle, Gowell, Daly and Teuscher.

"We are hoping to be an attacking defense to take advantage of the speed we have," Klinger said.

The Rayders will need all the speed and strength they can get out of both its offensive and defensive squads this year, as they are facing some pretty tough competition for the championship.

According to Klinger, the teams to beat this year are St. Ignace, Benzie Central and the reigning champions, Traverse City St. Francis.

"Between all the other teams it should be a dogfight," Klinger said.

GIRLS' BASKETBALL

Basketball team full of experience this year

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

According to Coach Jason Otter, the varsity girls' basketball team is full of solid and experienced players that will take the team a long way.

"On the offense, we work hard and get after people. We put a lot of pressure on the ball," Otter said. "The first few games will be bumpy but we should win our conference and go quite a ways this year."

The problem right now is Otter is down a few players forcing other players to play out of their regular positions, and is having problems with fouls. But, once the team is back to full strength and their foul troubles gone, he sees great things on the horizon.

"If we can come out and do what we do, I expect us to do really well this year,"

Otter outlined his team this year starting with returnees.

The first key returnee for the team is sophomore Leslie Hoffman.

"She is definitely looking good. Last year she was first team all conference so we are expecting a lot out of her. (Hoffman) is probably one of the best players they have ever had in Charlevoix," he said.

Another key player is junior Jennifer McClellan. According to Otter, McClellan is a great leader for the team and can be relied upon to do whatever is needed of her. However, McClellan is out for the first few games.

Another returnee is junior

The Charlevoix High School Girls' Varsity Basketball team is: Leslie Hoffman, Katie Swenor, Jennifer McClellan, Rachel Kanine, Kathryn Ricks, Meghan Vogel, Krista Swenor, Daniell Voehlheim, Lauren Silberhorn, Kelly Ward, Coach Jason Otter and assistant coach Jim Parrish. The JV team is: Jessica Pettis, Rebecca Kanine, Samatha Kupka, Rachel Wyniawskyj, Alyssia McDonough, Shayna Drost, Natasha Kleiber, Ashley Ager, Amanda Boss, Candace Boss, Katie Way, Brooke Blanchard, Kristy Skippergosh and coached by Lisa Carlson. The varsity team is pictured. Below are the Rayders in action last year. With an experienced team this year, the team expects to go far. (Top photo by Jeremy McBain. Bottom photo from files)

Danielle Vogelheim. According to Otter, she is a really fast and athletic player who works hard and is tough under the boards.

Adding to the returnee lineup is sophomore Lauren Silberhorn. Otter said she is an extremely hard worker who he will expect big things from later in the year. He is giving Silberhorn a little time off because she is returning from reconstructive knee surgery.

"We have got to ease her back in slowly because of that knee," he said.

Junior Krista Swenor is another returnee on the team. Otter said Swenor can be counted on for "all the little things" that will win a game.

The team also includes: Sophomore Kelly Ward, junior Kathryn Ricks — who Otter says has great leadership, junior Rachel Kanine, junior Katie Swenor, sophomore Natasha Kleiber — who will play both JV and Varsity this year and sophomore Ashley Ager — another player who will be on both JV and varsity.

CROSS COUNTRY

Both cross country teams filled with talented runners

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

With both teams filled with talent and great attitudes, boys' and girls' cross country coaches Ken and Mary Plude foresee a successful season for the teams.

"They look really good," said boys coach Ken Plude. Two of the boys on Ken's team went to state last year and he expects they will lead the way for a trip to state for the team this year.

Ken said his top boys this year are Zack Hopkins, Tim Daining, Gordie Selph and Zack Bajose.

As for the girls, Coach Mary Plude said while they are pretty much a new team, they do have some very talented girls such as Liz Ulrich, a state medalist from last year, and Heather Probert, another Charlevoix cross country runner that went to state.

"(These runners) know how to get through the pressure and Liz (Ulrich) is highly motivated to get them to state," Mary said. "We can come in anywhere from first to third."

Added to this is the high number of boys and girls that are trying out for the team this year. According to Ken, he has 27 trying out for the varsity team, while Mary has around 21. Only seven of these hopefuls will get to run on the varsity team at meets.

To make the competition for the team a little more exciting, getting a spot on the varsity squad does not mean you are set for the rest of the season. Ken and Mary said their varsity teams can change throughout the season, depending on who is running the best at the time.

All of the talent these two teams have this year will be greatly needed when they start facing competitors in their conference.

"We have a lot of difficult teams in our region this year. Last year was real tough," Ken said. "The conference (this year) will be real tough. Probably one of the toughest around."

So far, Ken said the team to beat will be Benzie Central. Last year, Benzie took sixth in the state, but lost a lot of their leaders to graduation, Ken said.

"We are pretty equal in comparison," he added.

Mary said the strong teams for the girls will be Suttons Bay and Benzie Central. Benzie is the defending state champion and the team is pretty much filled with the same runners as last year, she said.

Success against these teams depends on how well some of the younger Charlevoix girls develop their running skills, Mary said.

The boys' cross country team includes Peter Gorkiewicz, Zach Dennis, Jason Westenbroek, Mike Castiglione, Josh Popenhagen, Zach Bajos, Gordie Selph, Eli Pace, Mike Flowers, Andy Gels, Tim Cross, Kyle Kramer, Drew Wright, Corey Bascom, Will Kerkstra, John Billington, Brian Christianson, Will Barrett, Tim Daining, Mickey Bohn, Zach Hopkins, Dustin Meryun, Dan Philips, Ade Dhaseleer. Soccer team to work on rebuilding this year

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

The Charlevoix soccer team is facing a rebuilding year after losing eight to graduation last year and losing Coach Josh Block to an injury.

But, Interim Coach Tom Conlan said, from what he sees, the team has a lot of potential to become one of the best in the conference. Block is out for most of the year with a ruptured Achilles heel; he isn't expected back until the end of the season.

"They (the team) have a lot of good individual skills. It's going to take a while for the kids to learn to work together," Conlan said. "We have some real talent."

Conlan added the team is very fast and learns very quickly.

One of the things Conlan said he will be stressing in practices this year is defensive skills. Last year the team scored a lot of points during their games, but were scored on a lot as well, he said.

Added to this, Conlan said, is the team has practically lost last season's entire offense.

As for the individual talent, Conlan said he is very happy about the progress of many of his players. Currently, he is looking at junior Roscoe Serrels for the center mid-field positions in addition to sophomore Travis Smith and sophomore Craig Stockman for an offensive punch.

In the goalie spot, Conlan said he is considering junior Kiel Tilley and junior Jason Haas.

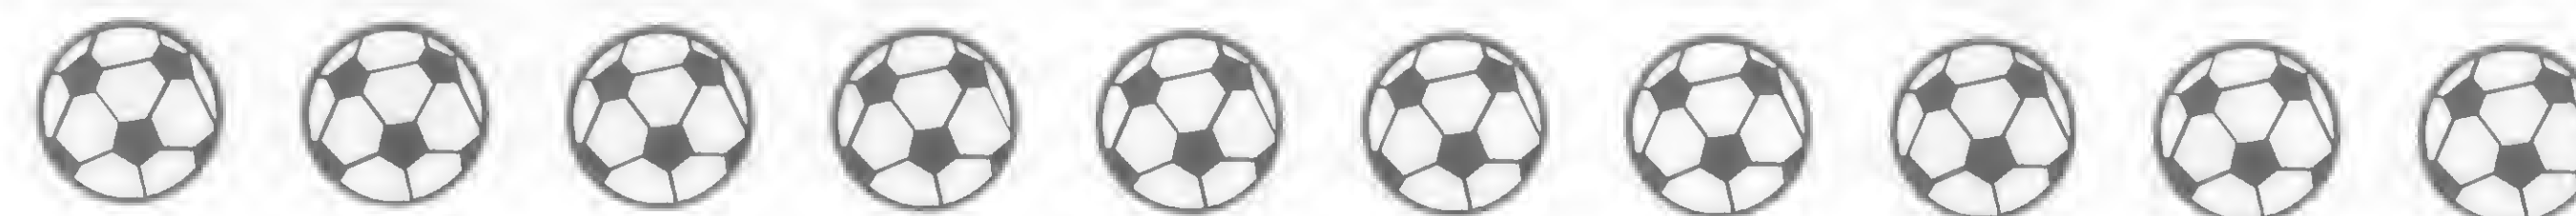

While losing many players last year, Conlan will also be returning nine this year, including seniors, Tic Bakker and Tony Shearer.

In addition to working on its experience problems, the Rayders will be facing some tough competition in the conference.

Conlan said one of the main focuses this year is Harbor Springs, who is expected it to continue its usual competitive ways with Charlevoix. He added, Elk Rapids has also been playing a high level of soccer this year, while Traverse City St. Francis is in the midst of rebuilding its program.

"Our goal is to be competitive and to learn. I would be pleased in our building year if we make .500. I will also be pleased if we make progress in defense and passing skills," he said.

GOLF

Golf team full of youth, experience

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

Regardless of his team's youth, Charlevoix Golf Coach Jim Glynn has high hopes for this year.

"We are young, but we have a mix in there that gives (the team) some experience," Glynn said.

Glynn has four returnees on the varsity team, out of 16 total students who have come out. Of those, Glynn said he is still not sure who he is going to keep on varsity and who he is going to send to the junior varsity team.

Jockeying to be one of the five or six players on the varsity team is a competition that will last throughout the season, he said. And, even if a player makes the varsity team, they may not be able to keep that position for the entire season.

In regular Lake Michigan Conference games, the Rayders can play with six players on the varsity team. The best five of those six scores are counted.

If a varsity player starts to lose their game, Glynn said he will send them to the junior varsity team and bring up another player.

But, Glynn already has at least five solid players picked out for the team, probably for the season.

His number one player this year is sophomore David Shearer, who was on the varsity team as a freshman. The number two spot is occupied by senior captain Craig Siwarga. The number three position went to junior Alan Brooks, the fourth spot is freshman Jordan Nystrom and the fifth spot is senior Chris Smith.

Battling for the sixth spot at this time is junior Nick Cole and freshman York Smith.

Glynn added he has many players this year that are talented. Which, he believes, is due to the Charlevoix Junior Golf Program run by Charlevoix resident Dean Davenport.

"(The program) has done an outstanding job with the young kids," he said. "It is very influential."

The Rayders started their season Aug. 23, with a win against Traverse City St. Francis at Belvedere Golf Course.

"Traverse City St. Francis is the team to beat this year. They are a tough team and didn't lose anyone from last year," Glynn said. He added, another tough team this year will be Harbor Springs.

Overall, Glynn is looking forward to a fun-filled and successful season.

"I want to make it enjoyable," he said.

Northern Michigan is an agricultural and hunting hub — as bovine tuberculosis makes its way through ten counties in northern Michigan, threatening deer herds and livestock populations, the disease also rears its menacing head at the livelihood of local residents.

Counties who have recorded cases of bovine TB in deer, cow, raccoon or coyote populations include: Presque Isle, Montmorency, Otsego, Alpena, Oscoda, Alcona, Crawford, Antrim, Oscoda and Mecosta.

Otsego County borders Charlevoix County on the southeast making containing the disease-stricken animals of the utmost importance to local residents.

"We have not found any deer (or any other animal) to be infected in Charlevoix County. We will be conducting surveillance this year as we did last year. Some surveillance going on now includes looking at road kill and conducting extensive testing during hunting season. Hunters are asked to bring in the heads of the deer to test stations to be checked. The main thing to do is when you find lesions in a carcass take it to the Department of Natural Resources (DNR)," said DNR Veterinarian Steve Schmitt.

Research of bovine tuberculosis has been conducted, but a cure or a vaccination has yet to be discovered. Furthermore, past research fails to shed light on the current crisis as, according to the DNR, bovine TB rarely occurs in wild

Flanders, Neumann differ on solutions for bovine TB

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

While the impact of bovine tuberculosis has proven to directly affect many economic and social spheres in northern Michigan, where do the candidates for the District 106 stand?

Francis "Brownie" Flanders of Charlevoix and Andy Neumann of Alpena continue their battle for the position of state representative for District 106, which includes Charlevoix County. Both claim to be avid hunters and hold similar positions in the wake of the harsh reality facing local residents as a result of the bovine tuberculosis crisis.

However, the candidates plans for attacking the crisis lie on separate ends of the spectrum — Flanders remains cautious and waits for further research results while Neumann is anxious and calls for immediate and complete government intervention.

Flanders' caution is backed by an approach which looks to the complexity of nature and the human ability to cause greater damage when intervening, consequently offsetting nature's delicate balance.

"Hopefully they will find a treatment or a vaccine. I can't imagine depopulating the deer herd in Michigan. A couple of tough winters and it may take care of itself. That is nature's way. We've had a couple of mild winters so the sick animals have made it through. A lot of money has been allocated to research, they will hopefully come up with answers.

The alternative is to go out and get rid of the animals, that doesn't make sense, how would you even go about doing that? Imagine some individuals reaction to eliminating a herd of animals without really knowing what we are doing. That would be a dramatic response," said Flanders.

Neumann, on the other hand, calls for immediate government intervention.

"The state has a responsibility. This is nothing anyone asked for, its an act of God or something. This is a disaster and we need to find a way to make the people whole again. As much as I hate to see things be micro-managed, the bovine TB plan has to be," said Neumann.

The candidates solutions follow different strains of thought but their positions converge as each recognizes the wide-reaching impact of the disease, touching numerous economic spheres.

"I think that if the studies being done indicate it (bovine TB) is as widespread as it may be, it will be a tremendous hardship on farmers and hunters in the state of Michigan. Where whole herd testing shows widespread contamination, there is no cure, a tremendous impact will result. No one would want to eat beef, hunt or drink milk," said Flanders.

Beyond the impact felt by hunters and farmers Neumann also addressed the economic impact felt by area merchants.

See ISSUES, page 19

Bovine TB continues in some Michigan herds deer herds. Therefore, eradicating the disease has come down to decreasing deer herds.

"Bovine tuberculosis has its highest density in northeast Michigan. We have a strategy in place that has brought the previous prevalence percentage down to 2.2 percent from 4.4 percent. As that prevalence percentage goes down, the likelihood of the disease spreading decreases," said Schmitt.

OPINIONS

Are your pets really the cause of messes?

Jeremy McBain

'Just a thought'

Who is the greater of the mess-makers: Humans or animals?

I found myself asking that question about nine months ago when I was looking for a place to live in Charlevoix. The problem was, my wife and I have a cat and many places in Charlevoix do not allow pets.

I must interject, I was not really fond of cats. I generally think they shed too much, they meow late at night, they never listen and they can be weird — example: Why do cats stare at nothing and then go nuts? But, my wife is a cat lover and two years ago insisted we get one.

So, she dragged me to a pet store to purchase a cat.

The cat quickly discovered my dislike for him and found great joy in tormenting me.

He would step on the television remote control in the middle of a good show, switching the channel right at the climax; he would step on the answering machine and erase all the messages before I got home from work — and his favorite — when I was sleeping he would curl up on my face.

After watching me chase him through our apartment in metro Detroit, my wife named him "Bandit" after the character played by Burt Reynolds in the movie "Smoky and the Bandit."

But a strange thing was happening during this little game the cat was playing with me. I began to like him. I started to have a soft spot for him and actually found some of his actions "cute." My prayers that I could one day be rid of him eventually diminished.

Thus, came the problem when I moved. Many places in Charlevoix have a "no pets" policy. My wife and I have never damaged an apartment or home we have ever rented and think of ourselves as responsible people, but because we have a cat, we are typecast as undesirable tenants.

To our happiness, eventually my wife and I did find a very nice, little rental that allowed us to have our cat. But, the place has become too small for us and we are looking for something bigger.

And once again we are running into the "no pets" dilemma.

"No pets" is a very vague term to me. A pet can include a dog, cat, fish, bird, iguana, snake or any other legally owned animal. According to many landlords, the reason for their "no pets" policy is, "pets just make a mess of the property." But, do all pets really do this?

Does a fish make the same mess as a bird and does a cat make the same mess as a dog? I would argue no. I have seen dogs tear up carpets and defecate all over the place, but when was the last time you saw a fish tear up a carpet and defecate all over the house?

One could even argue not all members of a particular species can be blamed for their brothers' and sisters' actions. My cat, for instance, has never ruined any part of our apartment or gone to the bathroom on the floor. Although, I have heard some landlords tell tales of cats doing this.

But, I argue, why hold all cats and dogs accountable for the actions of one? Does a landlord ban humans from the property if they run into a bad tenant?

Sometimes, people will do more damage than their pets.

Once in college, while visiting a friend's house, I noticed a large hole about the size of a human in the wall. Upon questioning, I learned that the tenants of the house had a drunken bet the night before on who could put their entire body through the wall. These weren't the smartest of people — I think they went on to get degrees in public relations.

Now, when was the last time you saw a cat or dog get liquored up and try to run through a wall?

In the above case, their landlord did charge them to fix the wall, as a landlord should for any damage done by a tenant or their animals.

I must admit, I have even made more messes in the house than our cat. Much to my wife's distress, I tend to leave dirty dishes in the sink and my clothes around the apartment.

The cat, however, has two dishes and no clothing. He looks like Mr. Clean compared to me.

I understand some landlords think pets immediately equal destruction. I would like to ask landlords out there to keep these thoughts in mind the next time they immediately say "no pets."

And, if you are a landlord with a property to rent, my wife and her neutered and declawed male cat are looking for a new place to rent. However, they do have a slightly-messy male human they simply do not want to get rid of.

The outdoor wedding's beauty

Edith Gilbert

'Beyond the news'

Almost everyone likes to hear about Charlevoix weddings, especially out of door summer weddings.

One wouldn't believe there was much to do when planning a garden wedding on Turtle Hill, with its spectacular view of blazing sunsets over Lake Michigan and silver moons rising over Lake Charlevoix, but in this case, there was! The bride, Erika MacGillivray planned this event for a year and a half with spectacular results that matched the view.

For starters, she engaged the family florist from Flint, Burt Smith, who arrived with his assistant and a truck filled with 60 dozen long stemmed roses, 35 dozen French tulips, 20 dozen five foot tall delphinium from California, 100 green calla lilies from Bogota, Columbia, and 900 feet of garlands shipped from Miami, Fla. with which he decorated the festooned tents. He filled large glass vases with crushed cellophane that looked like ice, before adding water and flowers for huge dinner table arrangements.

After a long search, Erika located 25 candle-lit glass lanterns, which were hung among the tree branches to augment the torches lining the walks. Turtle Hill twinkled brightly, competing only with a star lit sky.

The 3 foot high wedding cake was composed of individually decorated cupcakes stacked in a circle that formed a triangle. Guests helped themselves to this delicious treat.

Erika chose an antique ivory satin dress from the 1950s and the groom, Michael Hudnut, said that when he saw Erika, "I was thrilled!"

Still, there's always something unexpected that happens at almost every wedding no matter how much detailed planning is involved. In this case, three days before the wedding, the husband of the Rev. Mitty de Chaplain, a friend from New York, had to have open heart surgery, so a substitute minister had to be found. Fortunately a local minister from Ironton, the Rev. Harold Kruse obligingly filled in and performed a charming private ceremony for 15 members of the family and close friends an hour before the guests arrived.

Roberta Brady's six piece band

"Gypsy" was one of the two bands that played various kinds of music under a separate tent before during and after a seated dinner.

Joan MacGillivray, step-mother of the bride, greeted over 150 guests from Florida, New York and Montana, looking ravishing in a short, flowing, red, Yves St. Laurent dress. After the wedding, she thoughtfully arranged for the artfully arranged flowers to be sent to the Crooked Tree Arts Center.

Father of the bride, Chuck MacGillivray, laughed with a sigh of relief when I asked him about the wedding and said, as most fathers do, "It's over!"

Letters to the editor

Not all intolerance should be condemned

Editor:
I would like to address your editorial titled Political Intolerance Must Be Stopped, published in the Aug. 23 edition of the Charlevoix Courier.

Intolerance is not, per se, something to be universally condemned. We were all born intolerant of hunger, soiled diapers, pain, heat and cold. The manifestation of that intolerance was that we cried. Interestingly, we cannot argue that religious intolerance is always wrong. How about the Satan or devil worshippers, or the Ku Klux Klan, if we can stretch a point by classifying these as religions. If we say these are not religions, we are being intolerant, aren't we?

Thomas G. Bassett
Syracuse, N.Y.

As with art, beauty (or ugliness) lies in the eye of the beholder. Those hurling such 'insults' obviously have strong feelings as to the apparent beliefs and actions of one of our political parties. Our Constitution guarantees freedom of speech but, thank God, it correspondingly does not guarantee freedom from criticism (political intolerance) of what is said, however ugly it may seem.

Are your politics showing, Jeremy?

Thomas G. Bassett
Syracuse, N.Y.

Democrats are here

Editor:
Thank you very much for your recent articles and your editorial on Democrats and politics. As one of the pioneer Democrats, being nearly 82 years of age, I have first-hand knowledge about discrimination against my party in Charlevoix County through the years. We have stayed alive and active by spreading our beliefs and concerns in any way we could, with little help from newspapers and the radio stations. Don't think we didn't try!

Until recently, it was always hard to get Democratic news printed or read over the air. Oh yes, we could buy an "ad," which often was buried in the back pages. We learned to take care of ourselves, displaying our bumper stickers, putting up posters wherever we could and setting out yard signs, plus other means.

Just because we haven't elected many people to office doesn't mean we aren't here. One time, a number of years ago, we put up a good show when our Democrat, running for county clerk (I think), received about 2,000 votes to about 3,000 for the Republican winner. Now that was something for Charlevoix County!

Personally, I have seldom been humiliated in public and the bias against "our kind" was usually subtle, but still hurtful. We, as a group, have been treated as second class citizens. As Kay Chase stated it: "To be known as a Democrat has meant being treated as a social out-cast."

Thank you

Editor:
The City of Charlevoix can be very proud of the community spirit which was exemplified at the Red Cross Blood drive on Sept. 7 at the Community Reformed Church. Under the direction of coordinator Ellen Schuiling, 133 residents came out and we collected 116 units of blood! Wow!

This tremendous turn out was so helpful as the American Red Cross continues to strive to recoup the blood supply after the last major holiday of the summer! On behalf of the patients we serve, thank you to all who helped in this effort.

Simply put...three Cheers for Charlevoix!

Editor:
On behalf of the Waterfront Art Fair Committee, I would like to thank all the community members involved with making the 42nd Annual Waterfront Art Fair a huge success.

A special thanks to Chief (Dennis) Halverson, the Charlevoix Police Department, Mike Wiesner, and all the city employees who put in extra efforts to help the day run smoothly.

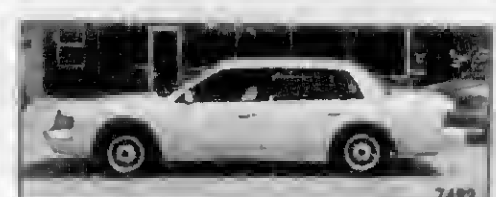

It takes the time and support of our entire community working together to maintain the excellent national reputation the art fair has achieved over the years. We appreciate your involvement.

New faces this year at St. Mary's school

St. Mary's School welcomed 92 students Sept. 5 to a sparkling new facility stocked with all the amenities.

Important additions include four new instructors and a new administrative head. They are:

Janet Troppman

Troppman's personal background information and position accepted with St. Mary's: "My husband and I have lived in Charlevoix for 22 years and have been a member of St. Mary parish for that length of time. We have three children who all attend St. Mary's School. I have accepted the Principal position at St. Mary's School of Charlevoix. I started the end of June even though my contract began on Aug. 14. There is so much you want to get a handle on coming into a new system. Plus you want the school year to start off good."

Janet Troppman

Linda Levitt

Qualifications: "I have a B.S. of Accounting from Ferris State University and an M.B.A. from Lake Superior State University and this spring I will graduate with a masters in Educational Leadership from Grand Valley State University. I have been Adjunct Faculty at North Central Michigan College since 1985, which has given me my education background. I was employed full-time as a corporate accountant for LaVanday Capital and Trade Corp. of Charlevoix."

Troppman's administrative philosophy: "You look at what the school has done and you want to embrace that and build on it, because there's so much value there. I want to continue with the traditions and establish new ones. As to my approach to administration I have a participate style and believe in teamwork. The staff at St. Mary will be involved with the direction the school is going in."

Challenges Troppman sees in her position: "We just implemented a school-wide discipline program. We had our first school assembly in our family center to introduce and explain the new program. Our school has had discipline, however it wasn't consistent."

Troppman's view on the benefits of facility renovations: "Last year we added a two million dollar expansion and it was completed in January of 2000. The students are very appreciative of this brand new facility, mostly because the parents of the students were very involved in the process. We are working on the playground currently and are seeking funds to fulfill this. We are on a tight budget due to the long-term debt mortgage."

Renee Golovich-Keie

Sharon Peters

Why Troppman feels St. Mary offers a unique learning environment: "St. Mary School empowers students to grow spiritually, academically, artistically and physically so they may experience, understand and live their responsibilities to God, family, community and self. Teachers, in partnership with parents, are dedicated to providing the spiritual and academic development of each child."

Troppman's projections for the future: "With my business background, I am looking at ways to grow the school and promote the programs we currently have. We are a small Catholic School but our vision is broad, our hopes and dreams are great."

Linda Leavitt

Leavitt's personal background information and position accepted with St. Mary's: She was a Harbor Springs resident of 23 years and a mother of one. Leavitt accepted the position as the third grade instructor for St. Mary's.

Qualifications: Bachelor of Science from Eastern Michigan University; certified K-8 grades; 15 years of full-time teaching and 10 years of substitute teaching.

Leavitt's teaching philosophy: "I believe that each child deserves an education that challenges him/her and inspires them to learn in a caring environment."

Why Leavitt feels St. Mary's offers a unique learning environment: "Because of small class size, parental involvement, the religious emphasis and the closeness of the staff."

Additions to the students learning environment specifically incorporated by Leavitt: "I have experience and I love problem-solving. I hope to bring to the children a positive sense of self."

Elizabeth Browe

Browe's personal background information and position accepted with St. Mary's: "I was born and raised just a couple of blocks from St. Mary and have remained a resident, except for my few years away at college. I am the half-time fourth grade teacher. Mrs. Dvoracek teaches in the mornings and I take over in the afternoon."

Qualifications: "I graduated from Central Michigan University in Mt. Pleasant in May of this year. I did my student teaching at the Charlevoix Middle School from January to graduation. I have spent the last three years at college being a substitute teacher."

Challenges Browe sees in her position: "Since this is my first teaching position I consider the entire position as a new challenge for me, but one I am looking forward to accomplishing."

Why Browe feels St. Mary's offers a unique learning environment: "St. Mary's is an extremely unique environment because the smaller class sizes offer more individual attention as well as increased parental involvement. I enjoy the small staff because it causes more of a family environment."

Renee Golovich-Keie

Golovich-Keie's personal background information and position accepted with St. Mary's: Golovich-Keie is a Charlevoix resident and has accepted the position as the Kindergarten and Pre-K instructor.

Qualifications: "B.S. in Elementary Education. Twenty years teaching early childhood. Most recently I sold my preschool known as The Growing Tree and have been working with Chgr-Em and now teaching for St. Mary's!"

Golovich-Keie's view on the benefits of facility renovations: "It is so great to be in a new classroom and building with all the essentials."

Additions to the students learning environment specifically incorporated by Golovich-Keie: "I will be utilizing the Building Blocks reading/writing based program this year. After working in Charlevoix Elementary School camp READ this summer I was excited to try this approach with our kindergarten at St. Mary's!"

Sharon Peters, the new art instructor at St. Mary's was unavailable for comment.

Obituaries

Ralph E. Phillips

Ralph E. Phillips of Allen Park and formerly of River Rouge died Aug. 12 at the age of 85.

He was the beloved husband of Dorothy, dearest father of David Ralph (Gale) and Paul E. and dear brother of Clarence "Bim" and Marvin, loving grandfather of Amy, Amber, Brian, Gary and great grandchild Joshua.

The family was served by the R.C. Aleks & Son Funeral Home in Lincoln Park.

The following was written by David Phillips, of Charlevoix, for his father.

"My father (Ralph Phillips) began riding Harley's when Ralph joined the River Rouge Police Department. God and Dad worked side by side in helping to curb crime.

As a youth officer, Ralph helped local teens have fun and how to enjoy life. Later Ralph and God joined forces again in starting a fun filled fishing contest in the Rouge, enjoyed by all ages.

In some ways they always managed to take good citizens and help them to become better ones. You could always tell they were doing a great job from the smiles they received within and out of the city — they were tremendous.

You know they did such a good job together, that they made him 'Chief of Police.'

Now my father is following the footsteps of his Father on a beautiful ride in heaven.

On a sun filled afternoon my Dad lifted his huge Harley up, kicked the kickstand aside, mounted his magnificent machine, buckled his helmet, put his sunglasses on, straightened his jacket and tie and with his final bit of energy, gave a kick to the starter and the engine roared.

Ralph waived a final good-bye to my mom and all of us standing on the curb, his family and friends, Dad raced his engine, one more time and then away he rode on that Harley with God sitting beside, as the two of them drove out of sight.

I thought to myself: Here stands the frame of a good, just and upright man.

Circuit Court may still hear school lawsuit

APPEAL

He said it was highly unlikely they (the Charlevoix Area Natural Resources Preservation Association) would prevail in litigation, so he wouldn't grant the preliminary injunction," said Young.

Upon hearing of the request for preliminary injunction by Pajtas the temporary restraining order he previously granted was lifted.

Olson has since seen the rapid pace at which construction on the Marion Center site of a new high school has moved. Thus, Olson also filed a request with the Court of Appeals asking for a second temporary restraining order to be issued, but was also denied this request.

"We would like to see this move expeditiously through the circuit court. This is a very dynamic situation. We felt the ongoing construction places this in immediate status. That says, let's get this expeditiously handled at the trial court level," said Olson.

There were three motions filed by Olson, two of which were denied while the third was granted.

Jim Young explained the Appeals Court's course of action and their subsequent decision saying, "There are three things the plaintiff tried to do. First, they sought a permit to appeal the judge's denial to grant a preliminary injunction. Second, they requested a temporary restraining order to stop all construction at the site. Thirdly, they asked the court for immediate consideration as the normal appeal process takes three to six months.

The Court of Appeals granted the motion for immediate consideration. (The school's) briefs were in Lansing by 11 a.m. and by 4:30 p.m. we received a phone call that the court had made its decision. They denied the application for leave to appeal and denied the request for a temporary restraining order."

According to Superintendent of Charlevoix Public Schools, John Sturock, continued construction at the site is precisely what the board has planned.

"We are getting ready to lay the foundation. The last package of the high school is out for bid now. Bids are due Oct. 4. We also got approval from the State Fire Marshal's office last Thursday. We have all the necessary permits and are moving forward," said Sturock.

As machines continue to push along the construction process at the site, the preservation group will also push forward. Both parties will be gathering and presenting stacks of evidence from credible sources to be examined by Pajtas for his ultimate decision.

According to Jim Young, at issue in the trial are concerns raised by the environmental group over decisions made by the Marion Township Board and the township's planning commission.

"The judge will review all the evidence to decide whether the township board's decision to grant a special use permit was supported by competent, material and substantial evidence. Under the law, a judge is not supposed to substitute his or her decision for that of a local zoning body, but a judge has to make sure whatever decision is reached is based upon some reasonable facts.

For example there was a big fight over the drainage. If the school had not addressed that issue and if the township had ignored that, there could be a problem. But the school's experts presented one viewpoint while the plaintiff's experts, also with good credentials presented the opposing argument. In this situation the township board is free to believe those experts with the most persuasive case. Secondly there are also legal challenges to the wording in the township ordinance. These are legal and factual questions the judge will look at," said Young.

Five percent fee of income to be charged on instructors

TOWNSHIP

But, Martin responds those who are able to participate in various clinics and lessons held on township grounds are paying a steep price in many cases or in some instances are involved for purposes beyond the generation of income.

"Some individuals charge a lot of money for lessons. I can't imagine five percent would break anybody," said Martin.

However, those organizing the programs, like Hagen Manker, who helps coordinate the Charlevoix Soccer Clinic held at Shanahan Field during the summer, look at start-up costs and fees charged by instructors as included in the clinic price, not profit.

"The 4-H soccer board is non-profit. We always bring someone in as a favor to the community. We have always held the clinic there and have never had a problem. The Charlevoix Soccer Clinic is not a big money maker. It may be easier to do it somewhere else," said Manker.

Dean Davenport, Charlevoix resident and longtime initiator of recreation and sports programs, agreed with the surcharge as a way of maintaining the fields. Davenport said he looked further into the issue and saw the use of township facilities by private parties as time that taxpayers may not be using the facility.

The charge would then act as a balance, he said. "I don't think the rule was adopted to catch misuse of the facilities. Perhaps, they can see tennis and soccer lessons occupying the courts and fields often and taxpayers are unable to get on. Maybe this was meant to safeguard the fields," Davenport said.

According to Township Supervisor Oscar Stroud next year when lessons start up again the 5 percent clause will be in effect. Therefore any consequences which may result will be calculated at that time.

"We care for the field and outsiders come in and have private lessons. We are not trying to stop anyone from teaching the kids games, but we groom and care for the fields. We are entitled to upkeep money," said Supervisor Stroud.

Township Treasurer Martin foresees a registration process to collect five percent of the earnings garnered from private lessons to take place at township facilities.

Beaver Island to host health fair Saturday

In many families, a trip to the fair is an annual event. But to the residents of Beaver Island, who live 33 miles from the mainland, going to the fair is a rare occurrence.

Solution: Plan a community-wide Health and Safety Fair that will not only bring islanders together, but also provide them with health and safety information, and health screenings that are normally not available on the island.

On Saturday over 40 fair participants will be involved in producing an activity-filled morning at the Beaver Island Community School.

From 8 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Saturday, classrooms will become screening centers for bone density, glucose and cholesterol, PSA (prostate cancer) and blood pressure checks. One room will house a veterinarian, who will demonstrate and lecture on pet health and safety. The weight room will be hosted by a certified massage therapist and the computer room will have Beaver Island's newest technology demonstrated; a Telahealth unit, which will link the island and mainland specialists in "real-time" televised consultations.

Even the soccer field will be utilized, as students participate in activities designed to illustrate the benefits of exercise. Also outside will be the Wellness Wagon, from Northern Michigan Regional Health Foundation and Community Health Education Center, along with the Beaver Island Volunteer Fire Department trucks and EMS ambulances. The Karmano Cancer Center's Mobile Mammogram Unit will do mammograms on Saturday and Sunday.

The gym will be the hub of activities for all ages, with booths, games, information and a cornucopia of healthy snacks. The event is being chaired by island resident B.J. Wyckoff.

It is hoped the Community Health and Safety Fair will fulfill its mission of: "Community partners will join together with regional organizations to provide access to health screening and information about wellness and availability of area health services."

Recycling plans being discussed for Charlevoix

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Since the passing of a .15 mill tax increase to be allocated toward beginning, and in some cases continuing, recycling efforts across Charlevoix County, the Charlevoix Recycling Committee met both Aug. 16 and Aug. 23 to discuss and finalize contractual details of the project.

Prior to the meeting Aug. 16 a recycling drop site had yet to be assigned for the City of Charlevoix. At the opening of the meeting, Recycling Committee member Shirley Roloff announced that open space around the property of the Charlevoix sheriff's department would serve as the local recycling station.

Elisa Seltzer, representing the Emmet County Transfer Station who will be handling the recyclables, discussed Aug. 16 requirements that needed to be met by Charlevoix County to solidify its responsible use of its six sites. These six sites include those of Charlevoix, Boyne City, East Jordan, Boyne Valley, Melrose Township and Beaver Island.

According to Seltzer, a one year contract is signed up front with the option of renewing for an additional five years. In essence it is a six year contract that leaves open the option to amend the agreement after a year has passed.

According to committee member Shirley Roloff this contract was reviewed by the assistant prosecutor and needs further approval by the commissioners before being finalized.

At the meeting Aug. 16 concerns were voiced by committee members and representatives from the East Jordan and Boyne City sites as to who would be responsible for maintaining the Charlevoix site.

Site maintenance has since been delegated to Roloff. Day-to-day responsibilities will include making sure the grounds surrounding the recycling bin, and monitoring bin loads to ensure they have not reached capacity. Roloff will act as a contact person or a site coordinator who will deal with these issues.

Controversy surrounds part of beach project

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

It would seem that beach improvements are welcomed by all — however, some Park Avenue residents and Department of Natural Resources officials are questioning whether the proposed additional walkway and viewing platform accessing Michigan Beach are in residents' and the fisheries' best interests.

"They (the city) are planning to build a 2,000 square foot platform on top of a hill and building steps from the residential side. We have a small neighborhood, our concern is that this is the first step towards the commercialization of the neighborhood," said Park Avenue resident Tom Cresswell.

If approved, the walkway would provide public access from Park Avenue through land where a water tower once stood.

At the city council meeting Sept. 5 concerned residents questioned the usefulness of such a walkway and further questioned whether the governing body itself fulfills its purported role, representing the interests of city citizens.

"There are terrific viewing areas from the beach and many others around town. How did this project turn from the Michigan Beach project to the Park Avenue project? The funds would be better utilized in fixing the road and putting wires underground than interfere with the view."

I am a supporter of the beach project, but if they can't maintain the beach now how do they plan to maintain this structure," Cresswell questioned.

Cresswell further asked the council why residents were not informed of the platform project that has the potential to, in their opinion, negatively effect the residential character they feel exists in their neighborhood.

"I was aware of 'the Michigan Beach project' but wasn't aware of the extended project well away from the beach, reaching into a residential area. Neighbors have been talking about the project possibly compromising the integrity of our residential neighborhood. They have allocated $2,500 towards cutting down trees to accommodate the platform. Trees across the whole hillside would cut down."

From the residential standpoint, the city plans to construct a public thoroughfare through a small residential community," Cresswell said.

Aside from residential concerns, according to DNR official Jan Fenske, the property in question also includes an area from which the DNR operates a fisheries research station. This land has been leased by the city to the DNR on a 99 year lease.

Since discussion has been heard concerning the implementation of a viewing platform and a corresponding walkway the DNR has voiced concerns as to how this part of the project may interrupt the operations conducted at the DNR fishery post.

The station monitors fish populations and conducts studies to ensure a healthy fish population is maintained.

"The city has proposed beach development on part of the property they have leased to the state. The DNR loves the idea of improving the beach, it will be great for the public. We are concerned with whether the project will interrupt our ability to carry out research on the site. We have leased the land for another 66 years and are reviewing the proposal to make sure it doesn't preclude our ability to work out of this location," said Fenske.

According to City Manager Mike Weisner DNR officials met with city officials to discuss the platform portion of the proposal that has raised opposition.

"We (the DNR and the city) had a meeting. It (the platform project) is still under discussion at this time. We are still talking. We'll see what the discussion results in," said Weisner.

Future discussion between city officials, residents and the DNR will decide whether the platform proposal of the Michigan Beach project will become a reality.

Londgren offers Charlevoix a few good pianists, singers

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

Londgren Music Studio is hoping to provide the community with more piano and voice musicians.

The studio, which recently opened for business, is located at the Port Air Plaza at 1516 South Bridge Street, across from the Charlevoix airport.

According to owner and instructor
Jeff Londgren, there is often a shortage of organists, pianists and singers for events in schools and churches in the community.

Londgren, who also serves as the part-time pastor for Faith Lutheran Church of East Jordan, added many churches have a hard time finding accompanists for their worship services.

"Christian parents do their church a service by giving children skills that can be used to help fellow Christians praise the Savior, Jesus Christ," Londgren said.

Londgren has taught all five of his children how to play the piano and three of them regularly play the organ for services at his church.

He added he believes musical lessons are one of the best investments a person can make for themselves or their children.

"Musical training provides a skill that brings joy that will last a lifetime. Musical ability provides an excellent source of self-esteem, which comes from working to learn a valuable skill," he said.

Londgren said he has been playing piano for about 36 years.

Londgren has a bachelor of arts degree in music from Southwest State University in Marshall, Minn. He has studied piano and organ under Arneda Freeman, Dr. Charles Kauffman and Dr. Robert Whitcomb and has studied voice under Dr. John Rezato, Dr. Thomas Jenrette and Prof. Randi Ellefson.

He also has a master of divinity degree from Wisconsin Lutheran Seminary.

Londgren moved to Charlevoix in 1997, after living in Petoskey since 1991. He is originally from Minnesota. In addition to his five children,
Londgren has a wife, Elisa.

Golf team's streak ends

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

The Charlevoix High School Golf team's winning streak was brought to a close Sept. 7 after taking last place in a four team tournament at Bay View near Petoskey.

According to Coach Jim Glynn, the loss was quite a rude awakening for the team.

"Picking up three losses in one meet hurts, but (it is) a lesson well learned," he said.

Charlevoix scored a 172 in the event, putting the team in last. Harbor Springs took the win with a score of 161. Petoskey followed with a score of 165 and Alanson took third with a score of 166.

A high point for Charlevoix came with Craig Siwarga's score of a 39, which was the best score for him all year. Siwarga's score was the lowest of Charlevoix's team.

Other Rayder scores at the meet were: David Shearer with a 40, Chris Smith with 45, Jordan Nystrom with 48 and Allen Brooks with 50.

Charlevoix is still 3-0 in the conference, but 4-4 overall. The next game was Tuesday at home against East Jordan. Results from that match were unavailable before press time.

Also on Aug. 7, the JV golf team took a second place finish at Bay View in Petoskey in a four team meet.

The JV squad chalked up a score of 198. Petoskey won the event with a score of 183. Harbor Springs scored 206 and Alanson scored 208.

The low score for Charlevoix was Nick Cole's 41.

Fall series about to start

Sept. 6 was an open date both to relax after all the Red Fox activities and to be available for a Summer Series make-up race, should one have been required.

This gives A. Nony an opportunity to catch up on some odds and ends. First, an apology for not including the overall winners in last week's Red Fox results. When we went to press there was no accurate data available and, rumor has it, the wrong yacht was credited at the after-the-race festivities.

The winner is KOKOMO at 7:22:42, WHITE KNUCKLES is second at 7:26:28 and SURPRISE third at 7:56:44. LUCKY and STINGER wrap up the top five; all are the big PHRF 5 yachts. Honorable mention goes to FLASH, of the JAM Fleet, GULLSTONE (PHRF 2), GECKO and SWINE FLEW (J-22) and RED STRIPE (PHRF 5) as they filled out the top ten.

The Fall Series, of six races, starts tonight and runs through Oct.

18 with Oct. 25 available for a make-up, if needed. Each yacht will score its best five races (i.e. one drop allowed). The season recap, the Charlevoix Yacht Club Awards Night, is just over a week later on Nov. 4. Put it in your calendar now; you will want to be there!

Forty-eight adults and numerous ankle biters competed in the club's Fantastic Treasure Hunt on the last Sunday in August. Just for fun, see how you do given a sampling of typical clues. Since you're probably not out on the water, just identify where to go or answer the questions, as appropriate.

1) A string of pearls afloat in a row, just where they're suppose to grow.

2) Fe MM — she's one of those for whom kids leave a tooth.

3) Which are true? A) The US state furthest east is Maine B) south is Florida, C) west is Hawaii, and D) north is Alaska.

4) Which are true? Flying due south from here A) ...you reach the Gulf at Florida B) ...you never fly over South America C) ...the first ocean you fly over is the Pacific and D) ...the first continent you reach is Antarctica.

Don't feel too bad if you miss one, even the Pirate Chiefs had one wrong, contrary to the chart and the Pirate Chiefs, the South Pierhead Light is flashing, not fixed.

After audit to correct a couple issues, the point totals changed but the positions remained the same: First Overall, and in the eight knot restricted class, goes to the John Murray's "Dirty Dozen" with 235 pieces of eight. Richard Hodgson's 160 gets Second Overall and first in the unlimited class; while John Ochs' "Pine Lake Pillagers" takes Third Overall and second in restricted with 155 doubloons. The after event discussions were even more intense than the on-the-water efforts!

Rumor has it that Thunderstruck will have a professional at the helm for the Fall Series — Mark Pirie sold MI JOY, winner of Division 2 in the Summer Series and then sent his son, Steve, off to college just so Mark has something left to race.

Hope to see you at the Charlevoix Yacht Club Wednesdays after the races and after 5 p.m. on Fridays.

The Answers: 1. Oyster Bay (Pearls from Oysters); 2. Ironton Ferry (Fe is Iron, MM=2000=ton, + Tooth Fairy); 3. Only D (Alaska is furthest N, E & W, Hawaii S); 4. All are true. Easy as pie?

The Charlevoix Rayders soccer team lost to Roscommon 3-2, Sept. 5.

According to Coach Tom Conlan, the Rayders played their best 30 minutes of soccer to date.

After falling behind by three goals and losing both goalkeepers to injury, Charlevoix closed the gap and had an opportunity to tie in the closing minutes.

Charlevoix used three keepers who chalked up quite a few saves. Jason Haas had two saves, Kiel Tilley had 14 saves and Jacob Pace had four saves. Goals were scored by Mike Dupuis on a penalty kick and Travis Smith on an assist by Tilley.

Conlan said, several Rayders played their best games of the season. They were: Steve Andrae, John Curtis, Bryce Daly and Dupuis. Strong defensive play came from the two seniors, Tony Shearer and Tic Bakker as well as Pace.

The young Rayders will host Belaire in a conference match Monday.

Cross Country teams running for victory

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

While the season may be young, the Charlevoix High School boys' and girls' cross country teams are making some impressive strides at recent meets.

The season started Aug. 26 at the Benzie invitational, which was one day after the teams' grueling training session on Beaver Island. Even so, both the girls' and boys' coaches said they were happy with the teams' performance.

"The boys did an exceptional job at Benzie. After one day's rest they ended up getting a second place trophy," said Coach Ken Plude. The Benzie invitational consisted of 23 schools.

Top runners for the boys' team at this meet were: Gordie Selph in tenth place, with a time of 17 minutes, 50 seconds; Tim Daining in twelfth place, with a time of 18 minutes, 13 seconds and Josh Popenhagen in thirteenth place, with a time of 18 minutes, 18 seconds.

The girls' team started off a little tired in the Benzie meet, but still took a respectable twelfth place finish overall — it should be noted they had one day of rest between this meet and their yearly training session on Beaver Island.

Top runners for the girls' team were: Katie Swenor in seventeenth place with a time of 21 minutes, 41 seconds and Liz Ulrich in twenty-first place with a time of 22 minutes, 6 seconds.

"I was very happy with those two girls," said Coach Mary Plude.

The Rayders were back to running on Sept. 6 in a meet with Grayling, which both teams won.

The girls' team beat Grayling, 21-38 — the low score wins.

Top runners were: Ulrich in first, Betsy Tebeau in second, Amy Kennedy in fifth, Jen Westenbroek in sixth and Kate Madison in seventh.

"They did much better. Liz (Ulrich) had no competition and won by some good times," said Ken of the boys' team. "It's a lot of fun. It's a strength building type of course."

The boys' team also had a strong showing and beat Grayling, 17-44.

"We almost had a perfect score. Fifteen points would be a perfect score," said Ken.

Top runners were: Daining in first, Popenhagen in second and Selph in third.

To finish out the last couple of weeks, Charlevoix hosted the Charlevoix Classic Sept. 9.

This race is one of the only "real" cross country races in Michigan, said Ken. While trying to get the best time, runners must also contend with hay bales, logs and mud holes as obstacles.

"They did really well and had some good times," said Ken of the boys' team. "They are just doing excellent. Both of them are just fantastic," Mary said.

Top runner in the boys' 9-10 grade division was freshman Peter Gorkiewicz in thirteenth place, with a time of 20 minutes, 14 seconds.

Top runners in the boys' 11-12 grade division were: Daining in sixth place, with a time of 18 minutes, 29 seconds; Selph in sixteenth place, with a time of 19 minutes, 11 seconds and Popenhagen in seventeenth place, with a time of 19 minutes, 14 seconds.

On the girl's team, Ulrich and Swenor continued to post good times.

In the 9-10 grade division, Ulrich placed seventh and in the 11-12 grade division, Swenor placed sixth.

"They are just doing excellent. Both of them are just fantastic," Mary said.

Back Room championship game goes to Dr. Jim Gels

Dr. Jim Gels of Charlevoix took first place honors Saturday in the Belvedere golf club's Back Room Final's championship.

Participants in the contest started working towards the first place prize in June. After three months of play, the top four scoring players faced each other in a championship play-off.

Those players were: Gels, Ray Schultz, Bob Sippell and Tom Myers. Schultz took second and Myers took third.

Gels name will be placed on the Back Room trophy for the next year.

Football team comes alive in time for 33-13 win Sept. 9

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

The Charlevoix High School varsity football team treated a home crowd to a 33-13 victory Sept. 9 against East Jordan.

"This was a big win for us," Coach Todd Klinger said.

The game started on a slow note for Charlevoix, as East Jordan scored on its opening drive. Throughout the first and beginning of the second quarter, it was back and forth as Charlevoix's answering score by receiver Ryan Racfacz was annulled by another East Jordan touchdown.

But, the tempo of the game soon changed.

In the second quarter, defensive back Racfacz intercepted an East Jordan pass and ran 38 yards for a Charlevoix touchdown.

"It changed the momentum and we scored four unanswered touchdowns after that," Klinger said.

Racfacz's touchdown was followed by a 48 yard touchdown run by Ryan Leitner, making it 18-13 at half-time. In the third quarter, Charlevoix continued on the offensive, with two more touchdowns by Racfacz.

Leitner was the leading rusher with 17 carries and 148 yards. Ben Coen rushed for 80 yards with 12 carries. Teuscher was the leading passer, with nine completions of 12 throws for 130 yards. Racfacz was the leading receiver with eight passes for 98 yards. Van-Guilder received one pass for 32 yards.

The interception also revitalized the Charlevoix defense.

"We were sitting back, not playing aggressive. After the interception, the line came alive," Klinger said.

On the defense, the leading tackler was Matt Horon with 11, followed by Jon Kilkenny with nine and Troy Smith with eight.

Klinger added Chad Mackowiak made a big play in the third quarter that sealed the game for Charlevoix when he recovered a fumble by East Jordan. This move set up Charlevoix for its final touchdown.

"It was a back-breaker for East Jordan," Klinger said.

Charlevoix will host Harbor Springs Friday. Currently the Rayders are 2-1 overall and 1-0 in the league.

State struggling to find solution to bovine TB

DEER

In order to achieve the task of decreasing herds, various approaches have been proposed by politicians, specialists and concerned citizens.

"A common misconception is that people feel we are trying to eradicate the deer population. We are trying to bring the numbers down in the TB affected area. There are more deer than can be supported by natural vegetation. During a hard winter these deer will starve. It's just good wildlife management," said Schmitt.

One approach limits, and in many counties outlaws, baiting — a practice through which specialists believe TB can be passed on.

Tuberculosis occurs when bacteria attacks the respiratory system. As infected deer consume bait they may cough on the remaining apples or whatever may be lying around, contaminating the feed for the next deer who happens upon the bait who could then contract the disease.

However, many hunters are outraged by restrictions passed which ban baiting. According to local hunters, banned baiting makes the hunt more difficult consequently decreasing the number of deer each hunter is able to harvest.

Farmers and retailers also feel the effects of banned baiting which dips into their pockets — they typically would provide bulk quantities of apples, sugar beets or corn during hunting season.

A second tactic employed by the DNR in an effort to decrease herd sizes is extended hunting season. But, some hunters are being deterred from pursuing the sport in northeast Michigan fearing possible health risks incurred when ingesting contaminated meat.

"It is not very likely that a human would contract the disease from field dressing or properly cooked meat. Bacteria would be in TB lesions found in nodules in the lungs, we do not eat those," said Schmitt.

Candidates for house seat discuss bovine TB problem

ISSUES

"At issue with the bovine TB is eradicate it or eliminate it. But there is also a cost factor. Farmers are losing revenue — the threat of infection to their herds means increased costs of testing and issues of milk production. Business owners, party stores, lodging venues and grocery stores, especially those in the northeast part of the state, where the disease is more prevalent, are complaining of large losses of revenue — people aren't coming up to hunt the deer.

There is also a loss to land owners. Prime hunting land property values may decrease. Bar owners have lost 30-40 percent, that is money that helps get them through the winter. Something needs to be done to make up the revenue loss. We could do this through more promotions of northwest and northeast Michigan through Travel Michigan — promote fall colors, winter snowmobiling and skiing....make the focus more positive for people traveling up," said Neumann.

Attempts to manage the problem have included restrictions placed on baiting, but both Neumann and Flanders say that a blanket ban on baiting will not yield favorable results.

"I personally hunt with and without bait. Bovine tuberculosis is not a baiting issue. If tuberculosis is spread by airborne saliva truck loads of sugar beets probably do cause deer to be infected. However, there is a second way to bait using half a dozen apples in front of a deer blind. I see no problem with a small amount of bait taken with a hunter and put in front of a blind.

I never felt very good about truck loads of groceries being dumped in the middle of the woods, it's not very sporting," said Flanders.

Incumbent candidate Neumann also looks at the baiting issue with an "everything in moderation" stance.

"I don't agree with a ban on baiting, spread the food out, allow two gallons. Without baiting you are eliminating opportunities to harvest the deer," said Neumann.

Neumann also hopes to see farmers, whose herds have been afflicted by the disease, receiving government aid in the form of more complete testing and monetary compensation.

"We need more veterinarians. Cattle herds need to be tested before they are sold and there are not enough vets to test the herds the way they are required to be tested. Vets require one full day per herd to test. They then have to come back and check for reactors.

We also need to raise indemnification, the amount of money paid by the state to destroy a cow. Currently the amount is $3,500, it should be upwards of $5,000 to account for future loss. Farmers are getting $3,500 per contaminated cow and that cow may be worth $6,000-$10,000 over its life-span because of the milk it produces. A hard look needs to be taken at the loss of production and potential revenue," said Neumann.

New island power plant to have open house

Great Lakes Energy will have an open house at the new power plant on Beaver Island from 2-4 p.m. on Sept. 27.

Great Lake Energy officials will fire up the generators for open house guests and will offer tours through the new generation facility. Handouts and refreshments will be available.

The new three megawatt generation plant located at 36900 East Side Drive will provide backup power for the island's roughly 450 year-round residents. It replaces an older plant that was torn down earlier this year. The island's primary source of power comes from the mainland via three new underwater power cables.

The plant is the final phase of a $4.3 million project initiated by Great Lakes Energy last year to provide islanders with a reliable power supply for many years. The first phase included laying three new underwater power cables some 27 miles across Lake Michigan from just north of Cross Village on the Emmet County shoreline to the Village of St. James on Beaver Island in August of last year. Also, approximately five miles of power line from the Cross Village substation to the end of Sturgeon Bay Drive were rebuilt.

In addition to serving as an emergency backup, the plant can be used to "export" power to the mainland during peak power demand periods.

SCRAPBOOK

The struggle to keep city-run electricity

Marilyn Boss
'Days gone by'

Charlevoix has had its own electric light and power system for 101 years.

I believe that Charlevoix, Harbor Springs, Petoskey and Traverse City are the only towns in this part of the state that have been involved in the sale and delivery of electric power. According to an article in the March issue of 1963 Charlevoix Courier, Charlevoix had been involved in the production and distribution of electric power since 1899.

The late Bob Miles spoke at the Historical Society meeting several years ago and stated that the Methodist Church was the first building in town to turn its electric lights on. Charlevoix even owned the power dam in the city of Belaire from a very early date and had power lines covering the 32 mile span. The lines came into town along the Charlevoix-Ellsworth road and then came down the Loeb school road, so the school could be serviced on the way to town. The Loeb family paid to have power run out to their property in 1917, when the estate was being built. A lady from the Sequanota Club said that shortly thereafter, they paid to have the line extended to the club.

R. E. Olds also had the line brought from the corner of Mercer Boulevard to his estate on Oyster Bay and he let the people along the route hook on for nothing. The city always gave free porch light service to everyone in town and the wire was hooked ahead of the meter, so it wouldn't cost the homeowner anything. As a result, the city was always nicely lit at night and was one of the advantages of having the power owned by the city.

My husband, Dale, who was a door-to-door milkman, noticed there were several homes where the people would have a two pronged socket screwed into the porchlight receptacle, with a light bulb on the bottom and a couple of extension cords plugged into the socket, running into the house to connect to the family's iron when needed.

Then, in 1961, Consumer's Power came along and offered to buy the whole electric conglomerate for $750,000. The city council refused. Later in 1953, they upped the ante to $1,000,000 and everything broke loose.

Consumer's Power company even sent up people to run a propaganda office, which they occupied at 224 Bridge Street, trying to convince the community that selling was the thing to do. They showed how the city could make $40,000 a year by investing the money at 4 percent. The issue was so hot, that some of the council members went out two-by-two, door-to-door, telling the people not to sell out, as they must vote on the issue.

Some of the city employees went out two-by-two, also. My husband, Dale, was overheard telling some people in the Kroger store to note no and Consumer's found out. His brother, Dean, was working in Jackson in Consumer's home-based division. They drafted him to come home to Charlevoix and go door-to-door against his brother to try and convince the public to sell to them. In reality, this backfired and helped defeat their effort, for word spread quickly when people realized what was taking place.

Four days before the election, former, present and future aldermen and mayors, bought a full page ad in the Courier, telling people to turn down the offer. They were: Dean Davenport, Karl Erber, Lee Moerland, Carl Kohler, Charles Bellinger, Harley Ochs, W. E. Goss, Harry Hooker, Ralph Hamilton, Clare Staley, Ray Kipke, Charlie Heise, Frank Boss, Arthur Ranger, Don Parsell, Robert Neff, Tom Carey, Ed Hansen, Leo Carey, Jess Smith and Harry Gebeau. We all own thanks to these men who had the vision to stop this takeover. The final result of the vote was: 884 no, 403 yes.

The action of these men who were courageous enough to stand up for what was right, now continues to benefit the whole community to this day. All the public lights on Bridge Street and the electric power to operate Mt. McSaubia, the lighting of the ball fields, power for the sewage disposal and water systems, city hall and fire departments, the airport, city garages and the street lights we enjoy, are benefits we reap from decisions made then.

Also, when a storm occurs, we have excellent, quick service from city employees who know where everything is, unlike some towns who have to wait until a crew can come from, perhaps, a 100 miles away.

Yes, Charlevoix does have turmoil, but a community who is interested in doing what is best for everyone, will always have disagreements. The good thing about controversy is that ideas are brought out and, usually, the betterment of the community is top priority.

CONGRATULATIONS JEANNIE BABBITT

Jeannie Babbitt, of Sweet Creations, recently returned from the world wide convention of the cake decorators' organization, I.C.E.S. (International Cake Exploration Society) held at the Renaissance Center in Detroit. Jeannie was the CO-Show Director of the entire conference, which in addition to the week of the conference itself, represents a commitment of approximately six years, many trips to plan the event, and thousands of e-mails. The Society has over 4,000 members, of whom approximately 1,500 attended the convention in August. Representatives from around the world exhibited 1,488 displays, which ranged in size from a six inch cake to an actual automobile that was decorated with sugar frosting and featured full size "dogs" as driver and passenger. Jeannie stated that some of the displays were actual cakes, while others used Styrofoam or other forms. Some were brought in ready made, others were constructed, (or repaired) on the site, in a room called the "cake hospital." The show also featured 97 vendor booths and 12 author booths. During a portion of the conference opened to the public, over 1,000 visitors generated approximately $2,000 in revenue. Those funds were given to the charity P.A.W.S., which trains dogs to aid people with disabilities.

In addition to the world wide international conference, the state organization meets twice a year. The organization and all its meetings are open to cake decorators of any experience level - from novice to master. Jeannie is now "somewhat" involved in the planning of the next state meeting which will take place in Petoskey in October. Anyone who would like information on the I.C.E.S. organization may contact Jeannie Babbitt at Sweet Creations, 582-2215.

Hairy tourist to town chased down

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

An early-morning visitor in Charlevoix Monday found itself being chased around town by local law enforcement agencies.

Charlevoix police, a conservation officer from the Michigan Department of Natural Resources, the sheriff's department and a local bear hunter spent several hours trying in vain to get the visitor, a 200-pound plus black bear, out of the

"I was surprised to see there was a bear in my back yard."

Thomas Bickersteth, Charlevoix city resident downtown area of Charlevoix.

The bear was first spotted around 1:30 a.m. Monday by Charlevoix Officer Pete Schrift when it was walking in downtown Charlevoix, stopping occasionally to look into store windows.

"He was paying special attention to the fudge shops," said Charlevoix Police Chief Dennis Halverson.

According to Halverson, the officer followed the bear from the downtown business district toward Lake Michigan beach, where he lost sight of it. For further help, he called in a state conservation officer, Tim Kochanny, and a local bear hunter, Tom Bergmann.

Using Bergmann's tracking dog, they quickly found the bear near Palmer Street in a tree.

The tree was in the back yard of Thomas Bickersteth's residence.

Bickersteth said he didn't have any idea what was going on, or who was in his back yard.

Reibel family fights foreclosure on the Castle

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

The future of the castle has recently gotten more uncertain as its owner, the Reibel Family Trust, faces a possible foreclosure sale.

While Circuit Court Judge Richard Pajtas granted a preliminary injunction to the Reibel Family Trust Sept. 15 — Kim Reibel, estate trustee, and her attorneys are now busy gathering a cash bond of $148,530.72 before Oct. 5 to save the historic site of Castle Farms from the possible foreclosure sale.

"The plaintiff (the Reibel Family Trust) asked for injunctive relief to enjoin the sale forever, so foreclosure could never occur on the mortgage," said Valerie Barnes of Joseph, Corcoran, Telgenhof and Barnes, the firm employed to handle the foreclosure proceedings for the defendant, FBT Enterprises.

However, Judge Pajtas felt the granting of preliminary injunction was merited in lieu of the hearing on Friday. Pajtas will hear further litigation, pending the posting of bond by the Reibel Family Trust before the foreclosure sale can commence.

Gregory DeGraff, the attorney representing the Reibel Family Trust, explained the status of the situation saying, "The Circuit Court Judge granted a preliminary injunction pending posting of the bond. Which means we have until Oct. 5 to come up with a bond in excess of $140,000. If we post bond before that date the property will not be sold at auction until the lawsuit is finished. If we fail to post bond before Oct. 5 there will be a foreclosure sale. The judge will not allow part of the property to act as bond, we must come up with a cash bond. One option through which we may finance the bond is through a company that writes bonds."

Candidates for 106 district discuss area's environment

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

ELECTION 2000

Recently, candidates for the 106 District State House seat discussed their views on the environment in Michigan.

Incumbent Democrat Andy Neumann and challenger Republican Francis "Brownie" Flanders were asked their opinion of a variety of environmental topics recently from their views on how to protect the environment and provide jobs, to their feelings on the Endangered Species Act.

While both candidates said they want to protect the environment, Flanders took more of a pro-business stance than Neumann.

"I live here because of the environment. I'm a hunter and a fisher. I know the woods and the waters. I think we need to preserve the old timbers we have left. But, we also need to be aware that we need jobs up here," Flanders said.

He said to maintain the environment and provide jobs, he would encourage environmentally friendly companies to move into the area.

"We certainly wouldn't want to be so environmentally friendly we didn't have any work left. But, we don't want to destroy the water and the woods with dirty foundries and chemical plants," he said.

Neumann also said there has to be a balance and added, "If we spoil our environment, what are we leaving for our children?"

For an example of balance, he said there is technology available that could clean up air emissions from plants and still protect jobs at the plants. Neumann further added the state should take more money from the road fund and put it into public transportation.

Some of his other environmental ideas included: Upgrading many of the dilapidated power plants in southern Michigan, working with local cities to control sprawl and creating some citizen oversight of the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality.

On the issue of sprawl, Neumann said the state has to help farmers, by protecting their lands. Farmers should have their farmlands taxed at only agricultural use, not by "what kind of view a person can see by standing on their tip-toes," he said.

"By providing a lower tax rate, that in turn also protects our green spaces and preserves them," Neumann said.

Flanders agreed on the taxation issue for farmers. He added he is also in favor of cluster developments.

Instead of having a house or business every 100 to 200 feet down a road, Flanders suggested all of the buildings be clustered in one area, leaving more land available for green space.

"Clustering just makes sense," he said.

The candidates also discussed cutting timber in state forests.

Flanders said he is in favor of selective harvesting of trees and does not believe the state should clear-cut its forest. Flanders added he owns about 640 acres of woodlands and said eight years ago he clear-cut about 100 acres of it to let some new growth in.

Neumann agreed with Flanders on clear-cutting and said he believes it is bad for the state forests and the local economy.

Alcohol a factor in boat crash

The Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department responded to a boat personal injury accident at about 3 a.m. on Sept. 3 that occurred on Lake Charlevoix near Camp Sea Gull in Hayes Township.

Timothy McDarry, 29, of New York, was injured when the 12-foot-boat he was operating, in a reckless manner, ejected him and became swamped, forcing his two passengers into the water.

The passengers, 29-year-old Jason Wisner of Charlevoix and 28-year-old Terrance Neil of New York were uninjured.

The three had been at a wedding reception and had taken the boat without permission operating it in the dark without lights.

Alcohol was a factor in the crash.

The Sheriff's Department was assisted at the scene by the Charlevoix Ambulance Service and the Michigan State Police.

Clarification

In the five percent clause story on the front page of the Charlevoix Courier's Sept. 13 edition, a clarification needs to be made. ACME Road Testers has paid the township for use of the facility for some time but were not required to abide by the five percent clause until it was passed by the Township Aug. 14.

Watch out for deer

Sheriff George T. Lasater of the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office would like to give a warning and notice to motorists in Charlevoix County - to be alert to deer crossing the highways when driving in the morning, evening and especially at night.

The Sheriff's Office is averaging four car/deer accidents a day for motorists in Charlevoix County. All of these accidents are resulting in property damage to the vehicles involved, and some accidents have resulted in personal injury to the driver or their passengers.

Lasater said the sheriff's office is experiencing an increase in car/deer accidents primarily in the early morning and late evening hours and, accordingly, suggests that you reduce your speed, drive defensively and be alert for deer crossing the roadways.

Correction

On page 23 of last week's edition of the Charlevoix Courier, an incorrect date was given in Marilyn Boss' column on the city's electricity. The column should have stated Consumer's Power upped the ante for the city power system to $1 million in 1963.

Also, in last week's Courier, the obituary for Frank Senger on Page 8 should have included his step-parents Mary Margaret Senger-Dickinson and Joseph E. Dickinson of Charlevoix as surviving him.

Play it safe around black bears this fall

Lately some recent events have been bringing black bears into the spotlight.

According to the Department of Natural Resources, there have been a rash of black bear complaints this fall and there was the recent incident where a black bear roamed the streets of downtown Charlevoix. Charlevoix Police Chief Dennis Halverson added recently there have also been many reports of bear/human contacts in Norwood Township.

To many people, bears are a perfect symbol of northern Michigan. They represent the wild beauty we have around us. Plus, the thought of them walking our downtown streets late at night may seem "cute" to some people.

But, we must remember that bears are wild animals and people should act cautiously around them. For example, the situation with a bear in downtown Charlevoix Monday morning could have gotten much more serious at any moment, especially since it was still in town at a time when children are getting ready to go to school.

Because of the recent local events surrounding black bears, we would like to offer you the following tips from DNR Wildlife Biologist Brian Mastenbrook that will keep you and the bear safe:

- Do not feed the bears. This will condition them to approach humans. This is very dangerous for humans and bears.

- Remove any outside food source that may attract bears near your residence, such as garbage bags or even birdfeeders.

- When camping, hang your food in a tree or put it inside your vehicle. Never put food in your tent. Additionally, if you spill food on your clothing, leave this clothing outside of the tent.

- If you come in contact with a bear, stay where you are and the bear will usually run away. They are usually just as surprised of seeing you as you are of it.

- A bear will only attack if provoked; this means do not throw sticks at it.

- If the bear comes at you, stand tall and stand your ground.
- If you are attacked, fight back with all you have. Do not fall down and play dead, black bears will not fall for this little trick.

The chances are rare that you will even see a black bear in the wild, much less be attacked by one. Even so, the main point to remember is: when you are in the woods, you are on the bear's turf and you should give them the respect they deserve.

The magic and science in the signals of the seasons

Roger Knutson
'Ear to the ground'

This is the time of year when people search for signs and portents.

We want to know just how bad the winter is going to be and the world seems filled with signs. I am never able to remember whether a thick black band across the woolly bear caterpillar is a sign of a long, hard or a short, pleasant winter, but I know it is a sign.

Some folks tell me that the number of berries on the Mountain Ash tree is a sign. Others suggest that when the maple leaves turn early, that is a certain sign of a long, hard winter. Someone even suggested last fall that the squirrels seen swimming out to Lake Michigan in the channel knew it was going to be a difficult winter and were committing suicide.

Just yesterday I overheard a conversation that went like this, "If George Bush is elected, it's going to be a tough winter, maybe even four of them." Possibly it's just because everyone talks about the weather and knows that no one can do anything about it.

Most of these traditional signs and portents assume that squirrels, caterpillars or even trees know something about the future. We all realize that politicians don't know anything about the future, but we must be willing to believe, even briefly, that creatures other than us understand something about the future and are planning for it in their own way.

We are hoping for magic; some incantation or sign that will reveal the future.

Jacob Bronowski, who wrote about the nature of science, said some years ago that science really began to take hold when educated people no longer believed in witches or magic. Apparently what Bronowski told us had begun in the 1500s has not yet taken hold completely.

We don't often look at the entrails of sacrificed goats or seriously look at the pattern of tea leaves in the bottom of the cup, but we still expect signs from animals or plants to reveal something about the unknowable future of our weather.

Do we have any choice? Yes we do.

Meteorology is up to now something of an inexact science. Everyone makes fun of the weatherman who is wrong again. But over the past couple of decades understanding of weather patterns has become more and more clear. While long-range accurate predictions about the coming winter, for example, it is still a ways off, we can be pretty confident about the week to come and often check the weather channel when making plans for the weekend.

Complex as the prediction of weather is, I fully expect that over the next decade or two we will be able to confidently check out whether the woolly bear caterpillars or the Mountain Ash trees are giving us the straight scoop.

If Bronowski was right, science will eventually replace magic completely, not just in the laboratory, but in the everyday lives of all of us. In limited ways and with the right information, we can know just what sort of winter it will be.

I don't believe that trees or caterpillars or squirrels have or will ever have that capability.

Thanks for the sports coverage

Editor:

I want you to know how much I appreciate your coverage of sports in the Courier, especially football and basketball.

We grandmas really look forward to reading about our grandsons and friends playing team sports. Everyone is special to someone and to be noticed in writing is so rewarding.

I have several grandchildren - five of whom are here and I have, since they entered the sports arena, saved and clipped articles for their graduation folders. They are always fun to read from t-ball to twelfth grade and they so enjoy it.

Keep up the good job. I only wish we could get the local radio station to cover them as well.

Some ways to contain sprawl

Editor:

In recent weeks and months, both the Charlevoix Courier and Petoskey News-Review have printed editorials related to the community's concern about sprawl following the decision to build the new Charlevoix High School in Marion Township.

In summary, the editorials state: The greatest challenge ahead will be to manage growth, not vainly attempt to halt it (but) "realistic preservation of the natural beauty and thoughtful, managed development can be accomplished and co-exist in the 21st century."

The editorial urged land use planners in Marion Township to do what is right when it comes to creating a meaningful growth plan and vision for the area. (Courier, 10/6/99)

The Petoskey News-Review (9/15/00) states it is "confident the sprawl issue can be addressed with careful thought and long-range planning by everyone affected."

I'd like to comment on what Marion Township has done to meet the challenge of managing sprawl:

- In 1998 they legally adopted their master plan.

- In February this year, they passed an ordinance that requires developers to set aside 50 percent of the available acres for green/open space.

- In August, the planning commission passed a resolution to support the concept of purchase of Development Rights by the state from farmers to preserve the rural character of Marion Township.

Further protection for family farms may be derived from a new law passed by the state in response to their plight. It would eliminate the agriculture property tax assessment's "pop up." Under this legislation, farmers who inherit or purchase farmland will receive the same property tax assessment cap as the previous owners, provided the land remains used for agricultural purposes.

I submit that this is an endeavor — preservation of farm land — that all citizens of the Charlevoix area can support. The efforts of the Marion Township planners are to be applauded.

Wake-up voters

Editor:

This is a wake-up call to voters and those who could but don't. It is about voter and citizen integrity.

I am getting tired of hearing people tell me, "Nader is the best candidate, but I probably won't vote for him because I'm afraid it might help Bush win." So what is it about Nader that people like so much? My guess is the big thing is integrity.

For over 35 years now Ralph Nader has been working for the good of the general public and those without a big voice in government, saving millions of lives by watchdogging the most powerful organizations in the world — the corporations that are trying so hard to hold our elected officials hostage with their campaign contributions. And Nader is not afraid to say what he thinks, and then walk the talk. That's integrity.

So where is the integrity of a voter who believes the best president would be Nader, but then votes for someone else because of what they think other voters will do?

What would it take for Nader to actually win? Just 33 percent of the vote nationwide could do it or even less if the votes are concentrated in the bigger states like California and New York. As demonstrated by John McCain's primary win in Michigan, there are plenty of voters here, including independents and Republicans, who care about two of Nader's strongest points: Campaign finance reform and candidate integrity.

If just half of the non-voters, fed up with the usual choices, get motivated by Nader's message, along with 20 percent of the normal voters, Nader wins the presidency. Per a recent quote from Michael Moore, the acclaimed in-your-face TV interviewer and movie-maker who is supporting Nader's campaign, "You rule. You are the non-voters, all 100 million of you!"

And after seeing the surprise victory by Jesse Ventura in the Minnesota gubernatorial election, I believe this could actually happen if Nader is allowed into the televised debates, and this is presumably why the bipartisan (not non-partisan) Commission on Presidential Debates is so committed to keeping him out.

So it looks like it is up to the citizens of this country to take up their rightful place in our democracy. Luckily, all the necessary information is on the web at www.vote-nader.org and non-partisan sites like vote-smart.org or the League of Women Voters' Democracy Network at www.dnet.org. So get educated, get your non-voting friends registered and then vote.

Universities did what was right

Editor:

I feel that two Big Ten universities should be commended for their recent actions against members of their basketball programs. Even though their disciplinary actions will most assuredly impede their programs' quests for Big Ten and national titles, these schools have chosen to "do the right thing" and have chosen not to overlook unacceptable behavior.

Brian Ellerbe, the head basketball coach at the University of Michigan last week kicked standout point guard Kevin Gaines off of his team after he was caught driving with a .17 blood-alcohol level. The President of Indiana University last weekend fired Bobby Knight from his position as head coach after "a pattern of unacceptable behavior."

As a coach, I understand how hard it is to remove someone from an athletic team. It is especially tough when that person is vital to your program, as both of these people were to their programs. The bottom line is that no individual can be more important than the program itself. When an individual is not disciplined for unacceptable behavior, the message sent is that it is okay for members of the program to do as they wish, without fear of consequences or repercussions.

Although their records may not reflect improvement this year, I truly believe that the basketball programs at the University of Michigan and Indiana University both became a lot better programs this last week.

Good for them!

Where is the water in Stover?

The Friends of Stover Creek want to know where the water went!

The once robust stream that turned a water wheel for a factory, washed the soil from the beets for the beet cannery and caused locals to fear that it would breach its banks in seasonal storms, is not even a trickle today.

"There isn't a drop of water in it," said Jeannie Blumberg, the spokesperson of the Friends of Stover Creek. "It could be seasonal, or maybe it's affected by low lake water levels."

Church offers course for people facing a divorce

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Beginning Sept. 14 the Community Reformed Church started hosting Divorce Care, a 13 week program aimed at alleviating emotional wounds endured during the divorce process.

"When we sat down as a church and discussed what needs are out in the community, the topic of divorce was raised. We saw divorce guidance as a community need," said Steve Guthrie, pastoral staff and Divorce Care member.

National statistics offered by the Charlevoix Friend of the Court reveal, one in four persons in the United States have experienced at least one divorce and 10 divorces occur per every 1,000 people in northern Michigan.

Locally, comparison studies have shown that northern Michigan's rate of divorce is 30 percent higher than the rest of Michigan. Further statistical analysis records that in 1999, 85 families in Charlevoix went through the divorce process rendering 149 children affected by the dissolution of the marriage.

Karen Kirschner-Simmons of Third Level Youth and Family Services in Petoskey, unaffiliated with Divorce Care, believes there is a growing need in both Charlevoix and Emmet counties for divorce related support programs.

"There is a need for support programs to help families and children going through a divorce. Religiously based programs work well for some," Kirschner-Simmons said.

According to Guthrie, emotional hardship goes hand-in-hand with the fragmentation of marriage as does the impact felt on our youth. Further statistics from research conducted by Child Trends Inc., Census Bureau, show children whose parents have undergone divorce commonly display behavioral problems, are in need of psychological help and have poorer relationships with their fathers and mothers.

Steve Spencer of the Center for the Family in Petoskey, not affiliated with the Divorce Care program, provides insight into positive ways parents can interact with their children in post divorce circumstances.

"Parents need to continue to recognize their child is half of both parents. When a mother or father criticizes their spouse they are criticizing half of that child. Parents should also recognize that the child still needs an attachment to both parents," said Spencer.

Outside of the impact felt by the children parents undergo tremendous emotional hardship and in some cases face financial burden. According to divorce specialists feelings of loneliness, anger, rejection, humiliation and depression commonly result.

BEACONS

By PHILIP G. SCHAIRBAUM
First Congregational UCC

Recently someone sent me this story about something that happened a few years ago at the Special Olympics when they were in Seattle, Wash.

Nine contestants, all physically or mentally disabled, assembled at the starting line for the 100 yard dash. At the gun, they all started out, not exactly in a dash, but with a relish to run the race to the finish and win.

All, that is, except one little boy who stumbled on the asphalt, tumbled over a couple of times and began to cry.

The other eight heard the boy cry. They slowed down and looked back. Then they all turned around and went back.

Every one of them.

One girl with Down's Syndrome bent down and kissed him and said: "This will make it better." Then all nine linked arms and walked together to the finish line.

Everyone in the stadium stood, and the cheering went on for several minutes. People who were there are still telling the story.

Why? Because deep down we know that what matters in this life is more than winning for ourselves. What matters in this life is helping others win, even if it means slowing down and changing our course.

As summer changes to fall this week, might we also be changed from self-indulgent, fast-paced people to more sensitive, patient and caring people, even after the manner of Jesus Christ.

Flanders, Neumann discuss environment

ENVIRONMENT

"Clear cutting ruins the integrity of our forests. If a great number of state parcels in the area are being harvested, that harms our tourist industry and takes away our beauty," he said.

The candidates also discussed air regulations by the Environmental Protection Agency.

Neumann advocates better regulations and realistic enforceable standards on emissions from plants, specifically mercury emissions, which he said is a number one concern for the state.

The first thing that needs to happen, he said, is the state must take away the grandfather clauses that protect some plants built in the 1940s and 1950s from those regulations.

"We have to enforce those laws and enforce them for everybody," he said.

Flanders said he thinks the act is fine the way it is, but added the "auto companies could be doing a better job."

"I think it is important we don't belch nasty stuff out of smoke stacks. But, all of this has to be traded off with the ability to maintain industry so our young people can maintain a wage," he said.

While they agreed on some points, the candidates took a little different stance on the issue of the Endangered Species Act.

Neumann simply said we must protect all endangered species and the environment.

"We have to leave an environment for our children," he said.

Flanders, however, said while he wouldn't want to see any species killed off he thinks "it is a shame when they shut down logging in the west when they are concerned about the spotted owl."

In some ways, it is nature's way, he added.

"I am very much pro-business. We need to be able to make a living. We can't let a whole section go through a recession because of a half-dozen snails will be misplaced," Flanders said. "We need to look at the big picture."

Meggison ready for any Charlevoix jail emergency

Handling mock jailhouse riots and responding to emergency cell extraction's was the focus of a recent three day seminar attended by Babette Meggison, Charlevoix County Jail Administrator.

Held at the 130-year-old Moundsville Prison, now inactive, the event was hosted by the office of Law Enforcement Technical Center, a division of the National Institute of Justice.

Babette was accompanied by Dr. Aaron Westrick, Director of Research of Second Chance Body Armor, Inc., of Central Lake, which sponsored the two law enforcement professionals attendance.

Dr. Westrick, a regular guest speaker at national law enforcement training sessions, also delivered a presentation at the seminar.

Administrator Meggison described the experience as educational, offering invaluable training. "We learned a lot about assembling and training the teams that in the event of an emergency have to be able to rapidly respond to cell extraction," she noted.

She explained that in the event of a jail emergency in northern Michigan, response time could lag for several hours, until a qualified team is on the scene.

"Larger jails and prisons have these emergency response teams," she said. "But in this area we'd have to wait for either a team from downstate or the Upper Peninsula."

Meggison has been jail administrator for the past three years. Prior to that she was a corrections officer for 12 years.

An experienced and qualified corrections professional, she has completed college courses and many training seminars, along with daily on-the-job experience.

Recently the county sheriff's department moved to its new 64 bed minimum security jail on Garfield Street. With renovation of the former jail, the county eventually will have an 89 bed facility. The 64 bed addition will offer a combination maximum/minimum security facility.

Castle Farms center of mortgage dispute

CASTLE

The dispute involves an $85,000 mortgage which payments have not been made in some time. FBT Enterprises who claims the mortgage was financed through its institution, is also claiming personal loans were made by it to the late Art Reibel, owner of the Castle.

"Greenleaf Restaurants Inc. (FBT Enterprises) loaned money to Art Reibel that was used for the benefit of the trust. The principle amount was $85,000 and interest has since continued to accrue. He is owed from the Reibel Family Trust. There is also a separate indebtedness consisting of 21 different notes attached to the brief which show the loan of additional sums," said Barnes.

However, DeGraff believes FBT is claiming monetary compensation beyond what is actually owed by the trust.

"Mr. Fred Taylor (owner and principle officer of FBT) is claiming a lot more money than what is involved on this piece of property. Taylor claims that several years ago he made loans both on behalf of the trust and personal loans to Art Reibel. As security for those loans he received the mortgage on the Castle Farms property of which Art Reibel supposedly signed," said DeGraff.

However, the very validity of the controlling document in the case, the mortgage, has been called into question by the Reibel Trust.

"One document that has since become a very big problem is the mortgage of the Castle Farms Property which was signed by Art Reibel after he had resigned as trustee of the property. So, no trustee had signed the mortgage," said DeGraff.

This poses a big problem for FBT. As was explained by Barnes, FBT would be unable to collect on the ever mounting debt if the mortgage is found invalid.

The financial relationship between Taylor and Reibel began years ago and according to DeGraff, extends further into the Taylor family to the defendant's sister, Cheri Holly (maiden name Taylor). The relationship of Holly historically to Reibel, as an attorney representing the Reibel Family Trust, and to Taylor may call into question potential conflicts of interest bearing on the current suit filed in circuit court.

"Fred Taylor is owner and principle officer of FBT, the company that holds the mortgage. His sister Cheri Holly is an attorney and co-trustee of the Reibel Family Trust. A number of years ago Art Reibel had a deed he wanted signed on a piece of property owned by the trust and Cheri refused to sign it," said DeGraff.

Kim Reibel added, "It is surprising Cheri would have submitted an affidavit on behalf of Fred Taylor. She has represented us (the Reibel Family Trust) legally and as a trustee so it is totally bewildering why information offered by her was present. We are taking steps to have her removed as a trustee. As an attorney, she should understand that this would be a conflict of interest."

The current status of the situation leaves Kim and her attorneys financing the bond while FBT awaits the outcome of this process to establish whether or not the foreclosure sale of the property will occur.

"We are looking to put together a bond so the injunction will remain in place while we sort out the legal affair. The Charlevoix Court will decide which loans are and are not the responsibility of the trust. The issue involves more than $140,000," said DeGraff.

DeGraff also pointed to a possible solution that would benefit all parties included which could begin prior to the Oct. 5 deadline.

"The property can still be sold (through Vacation Properties Network) in this time period. In that scenario all parties would come together; it is in everybody's best interest to have the property sold. If we get the bond nothing will happen until the end of the suit. The preliminary injunction allows proceedings to stop while things get sorted out in court," said DeGraff.

Kim added, "At this point I am working with my attorneys to post bond and also working to raise the money to pay off the debt. This (Sept. 19) is the one-year anniversary of my dad's death (Art Reibel). I want to sell the property and move on with my life."

Introducing Northern Nights

At the end of this month the Charlevoix Courier will be unveiling a new page for readers called "Northern Nights."

This new addition will contain photographs taken during the various private and public parties and events hosted in the community throughout the year. These photographs are submitted by our readers.

Charlevoix is a town filled with citizens who like to have fun with life and enjoy the company of others. It is a town where one can always find a gathering of friends and family. These gatherings can be family reunions, class reunions, dedication ceremonies, Halloween parties, Christmas parties, New Year's Eve parties, fundraisers, concerts or any other special event that brings members of the community together.

Northern Nights will appear monthly on the fourth Wednesday of each month.

Pictures may be turned into the Charlevoix Courier office at 112 Mason Street, mailed to P.O. Box 117, Charlevoix, MI 49720 or you can e-mail them to charlevoixcourier@charlevoixcourier.com.

We cannot promise when the pictures will run and cannot promise how many of your submitted photos will run. It all depends on space available and the number of submissions that month.

We do reserve the right to reject pictures we deem are obscene or show illegal activities.

If you have any questions about Northern Nights, please contact the Charlevoix Courier at (231) 547-6558.

Cable customers could soon watch local meetings on TV

By JULIE MUSILEK
 Staff Writer

Charter Communications subscribers in Charlevoix will soon be seeing some needed upgrades in their local cable service including the addition of the PACE network (Providing Academics Cost Effectively telecommunications network) which airs local programming promoting education.

"It (PACE programming) does not currently come down here because of the way the cable structure was set up. We need to connect three miles of wire to do it. Several years ago we talked with both companies, TCI and Charter, about connecting the three miles running north and south but the connection didn't happen. TCI has since been bought out by Charter and Charter is very education friendly. We are hoping we (PACE) will be in the Charlevoix, Boyne City, Boyne Falls and Gaylord area. The project could take a while to happen, if it ever does," said Jane Millar, PACE enrichment staff and PR coordinator for the ISD.

As was alluded to by Millar there are interconnection issues restricting the transmission of the signal in Charlevoix. Charter recently discussed their plans to connect the wire stretching between Petoskey and Charlevoix and the company believes area residents will have the chance to view PACE programming by the end of the year.

"One of the problems involved in PACE not airing in Charlevoix is that we are channel locked. The overlying reason is bandwidth restrictions. That problem was resolved this year. We are rebuilding and updating all of Charlevoix. We are also doing fiber interconnect this year to tie the two systems (Petoskey and Charlevoix) together," said Dave Robinson of Charter Communications. "For years we haven't been able to operate all the channels we've wanted to."

Millar also understands both the physical and financial issues associated with integrating PACE into the Charlevoix community, but there is also a question of community receptiveness.

"There is an issue of being channel locked, fiberoptic cable is needed to increase the bandwidth and the question is; where will the money come from? They also need to be sure people will take advantage of it," said Millar.

PACE came into being as a result of the communal efforts of both the Cheboygan-Otsego-Presque Isle and Charlevoix-Emmet intermediate school districts. However, while Emmet has tuned in for some time, Charlevoix homes have yet to see the faces of PACE.

PACE programming includes a school forum during which time school officials present publicly relevant issues and events. There are also community forums where members of the community share local issues and events of public importance. PACE in Petoskey airs a program called "A Look at Petoskey," providing citizens the opportunity to hear issues of local importance directly from the mayor.

Fall Series starts out with one second win in J-22

'Yachting notes'

An interesting but erratic breeze greeted the starters in this first race of the Fall Series.

Skippers who could spot and correctly interpret the wind streaks were able to scoot by less astute competitors who were almost parked just a few yards away. The net result was far more than normal position changes, lots more interesting to an observer but much more distressing to the overtaken skippers.

A superb finish in the J-22 Fleet saw FIRST DATE nose out TOO RECKLESS by just one second. Sounds more impressive when you realize that their respective elapsed times were 5.095 seconds (1:24:55) versus 5.096 seconds! A minute and a bit back was HUSSY trailed by SWINE FLEW and HS MOISTURE MISSILE. Then SUPER-FLUOUS, GECKO, CRAZY HORSE, HIGH MAINTENANCE and ROCK STEADY rounded out the top ten. HABANERO and HOG-TIDE were close behind with THUNDERSTRUCK just a bit further back.

Division 1 saw the three big boats spaced well apart although GOTCHA saw her ten minute lead over KAMIKAZE reduced significantly on corrected time. BLASEN IV ended up well back of the first two.

In Division 2, M2 was last but went home with First Place Honors as no others contested. Where were you guys?

The P-26 Fleet had a nice finish as ORIGINAL SIN, CYGNUS and JESSE crossed the line at one minute intervals for First, Second and Third in Class.

Two of the larger boats, SLAPSHOT and FLASH elected to sail the Fall Series without spinnakers and joined the Jib and Main (JAM) Fleet. They also took First and Second with BALD EAGLE coming in Third. HIGH SEAS retired.

Looks like Tom Barnes may win the Sunday Sunfish Series as he got yet another first last week, when his father, Josh Barnes, gave up the lead (for a quick bath)!

Let's take this opportunity to recognize Charlevoix Yacht Club's Unsung Hero of the Internet. Christy Rounds is the genius responsible for the Club's web site: www.charlevoixyachtclub.org. If you haven't yet visited, do so soon. You'll find everything about Charlevoix Yacht Club from Red Fox Regatta Results and photos to the current Charlevoix Yacht Club schedule of events. The Summer Series recap is still on-line and the Photo Gallery includes several shots taken during that series.

Mike Miller takes the time after every race to convey the final results. After correcting times and revising positions to break ties and recognize the effects of any protest, he either faxes or hand-delivers both finish positions and point standings. As a result, A. Nony Mouse always manages to avoid the missed deadline trap set by the Charlevoix Courier's mean old editor. Here's a squeaky-clean salute to Mike for all his hard work!

Speaking of hard work, this Saturday, Ron Plocki needs your help with the fix up project on the steep slope at the back of the Club. Bring gloves, shovel, rake and be prepared to move and set rail road ties, fill behind and grade. Three two-hour work shifts (between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m.) are available to fit your every need! He's at 547-3965 (home), 547-9971 extension 139 (work), e-mail rpllocki@freeway.net or just show up!

Rayders lose to Harbor in close 16-14 home game

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

The Charlevoix Rayders football team lost Sept. 15 in a close game against Harbor Springs, 16-14 at home.

According to Coach Todd Klinger, the game was tight to the end. But, in the final seven minutes, during a Rayder drive, Charlevoix fumbled the ball on Harbor Springs 28-yard line.

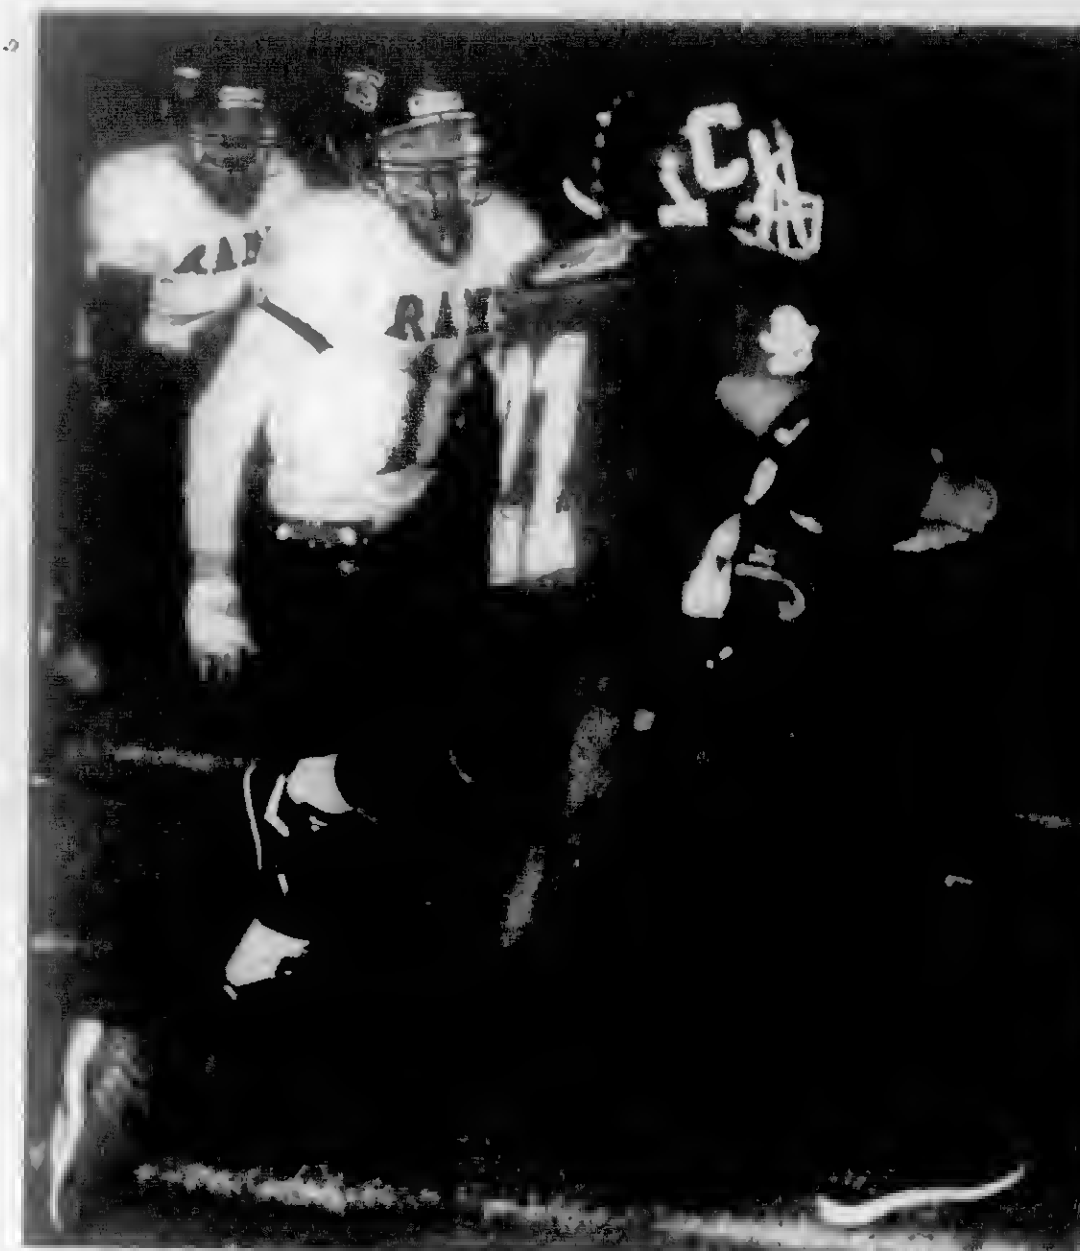

"We never had a chance after that," Klinger said.

Klinger said the first half of the game was very tough for Charlevoix, but things got better in the second half, allowing them to put some points on the board.

"The kids kept fighting, but that fumble clinched the game," Klinger said.

The first Rayder touchdown was a 20-yard run by Ryan Leitner. The second touchdown came in the third quarter, when quarterback Jeremiah Teuscher passed to receiver Ryan Racfacz on a fourth down play.

With a two-point conversion, the Rayders had 14 points to Harbor Springs 16. But, neither Charlevoix or Harbor Springs would score again that night thanks to some strong defensive play.

Considering Harbor Springs has scored around 40 points in each of its last two games, Klinger said he was very happy with Charlevoix's defensive performance.

The Rayders will be facing Traverse City St. Francis this Friday in Traverse City.

Soccer team loses match to combined Bellaire team

The Rayders dropped a tough match to the combined Bellaire-Central Lake-Mancelona Team Sept. 11 at home, 3-1.

Charlevoix mustered 12 shots to Bellaire's 14. The Rayders goal was scored by Roscoe Serrels off an assist by Jason Haas.

The match was even at 1-1 with 2 minutes left in the opening half when Bellaire scored on a penalty kick.

Bellaire's third goal was also scored off a penalty kick. Haas and Kiel Tilley stopped 6 shots each sharing keeper duties. Travis Smith played his strongest game to date for the young Rayders, now 1-5 on the season. Senior co-captain Tony Shearer played his usual strong game as sweeper.

The Charlevoix high school golf team racked up another win Sept. 12 against East Jordan at the Belvedere Golf Club, 173-179.

This win moves the golf team to a 4-0 record in the conference and 4-4 overall.

Fisheries station busy taking care of lake supply

Julie Musilek
'Stepping out'

As temperatures begin to drop, trees reveal their brilliant hues and the summer season draws to a close, Charlevoix anglers are gathering their rods and reels preparing for fall fishing excursions on local fresh waters.

It would seem that as our population climbs and word travels of the multitude of freshwater fish populating the waters of our cozy little town the threat of commercial and sport fishing depleting local fish populations grows. Have no fear the Department of Natural Resources (DNR) is here.

The DNR Great Lakes Fisheries Station located by Michigan Beach on Grant Street has taken great strides to ensure that a diverse, healthy fish population continues to thrive in our waters.

There is a delicate balance the fisheries station attempts to maintain and monitor. For example, too many alewives may reduce the number of perch and as alewives themselves die off in large numbers they litter area beaches. Just enough salmon will bring down the number of alewives to a level where perch, salmon and alewives harmoniously coexist.

In the late 1970s the DNR station conducted extensive fish plants of salmon from Washington and Oregon, brown and rainbow trout and steelhead. Area salmon fishing not only offers anglers multiple strikes during afternoon outings, but also brings a nice chunk of change to the local economy.

"Beginning in the late 1960s the state started a program managing Great Lakes salmon and trout populations for sport fishing more than for commercial fishing. In the 1960s there was a big predation issue as the lake trout were almost decimated by lamprey — a long, skinny, parasitic fish that attaches to fish and sucks their blood. Between commercial fishing and lampreys attacking lake trout they needed to be restocked. The 1970s marked the beginning of a salmon and trout program," said Charlevoix Fishery Station Biologist Jerry Rakoczy.

The present site of the Charlevoix Great Lakes Research Station was operated as a hatchery for over four decades. However, the ballast water of boats has unloaded some invaders. According to DNR officials, the sea lamprey, water fleas and zebra mussels are all non-native, unwanted aquatic wonders who can not be gotten rid of.

The harmful effects of the zebra mussel have been masked by the human misconception of "healthy."

According to Rakoczy, zebra mussels attach to surfaces and circulate water through their system, eating plankton in the process. Over their five-year stay in local waters they have made the water clearer, but in reality have negatively affected the ecosystem — less plankton means less food for other fish species.

As the fall months bring cooler water temperatures, we should be seeing lake trout making their way toward shallower water. According to DNR officials, the lake trout population is most often the prey of the blood thirsty lamprey. Anglers who hook a lake trout can look closely for scars on the body of the fish where the parasite once fed.

Statistics compiled for the 1999 season reveal 52 lamprey were found attached to Chinook salmon and 247 were found plaguing lake trout.

Guy Fleischer, Fisheries Biologist with the U.S. Department of the Interior, commented on the lamprey threat saying, "The salmon and trout can take some wounds and survive, but the whitefish can't sustain lamprey attacks at all. It is hard to monitor the breadth of the effects because we are not seeing wounds on those fish that don't survive."

During fall months, salmon who are in their fourth year of maturation head down to rivers to spawn. In some cases younger salmon, commonly referred to as "jacks," will also return to spawn. Salmon like their water a cool 55 degrees and feed heavily on alewives. So, where the water temperatures are low and alewives are swimming you'll find the silver sheen of the salmon.

Seasoned fishermen know where the best catch is but, behind the scenes sustaining the livelihood of the sport fishing industry are the DNR officials working hard to ensure each year's catch is as good, if not better, than the previous year.

The creel census, currently run by Rakoczy, was begun to obtain continuous records of catch rates on the Great Lakes and to help the DNR evaluate its Great Lakes fish stocking program. This analysis helps to clarify mystifying predator/prey relationships.

"The science is not precise enough to say exactly what to stock, so we have to watch the situation," said Rakoczy. According to Rakoczy, gathering information for the creel census is done through interviews conducted with anglers, who are asked where they made their catch, how long it took to make the catch and from where they caught the fish. Catch estimates are then compiled and used as the basis of comparison against numbers of stocking programs. The DNR can then monitor fish populations to make sure bites are not too few and far between.

Rakoczy also heads a program which tracks the bounty of commercial fishermen who are required to submit a monthly record of activity. Numbers from charter boats are calculated to form an index of species caught, the number of trips taken by the charter and the length of time between bites.

The quantity of fish is not the DNR's only concern, as the fishery station also monitors the health of fish. The steelhead survey vessel in conjunction with research specialists at the fishery started a program in the late 1980s to monitor the health of numerous species of fish.

This program afforded the fishery staff the opportunity to check what is in the bellies of fish to make sure they are ingesting nutrient rich meals.

According to Randy Claramunt of the Little Traverse Bay Band of Odawa Indians, "We know some fish species are eating zebra mussels, but we don't know how valuable or nutritious the mussel is. We need to open the fish to get this nutrition information."

To make sure there are various fish species in adequate numbers, a cooperative effort has been employed which includes input from the local DNR, the state and Indian tribes.

One such cooperative effort is the multi-agency sponsored acoustic sounders used to count fish. This program employs the "Steelhead," a survey vessel constructed in Escanaba in 1967. The Steelhead research boat is under the direction of captain, Jerry Meggison and skippers, Jim Harris and Jerry Ranville, both former commercial fishermen explore, create and implement new research techniques never before utilized. The ship is docked by the Coast Guard station off of Depot Beach and works only on Lake Michigan. However, their findings are used for statewide programs.

Fleischer commented on the importance of the work conducted at the

The history of the station
The station was operated as a hatchery from 1917 to 1933. The Depression and large egg loss caused the station to close from 1934-1938.
In 1938 the government authorized a $15,000 job producing project to remodel the building and make it a rearing station for already hatched fish.
In 1959 the station started receiving eyed eggs again for hatchery and rearing. The Jordan River Hatchery started in 1964 and the Charlevoix hatchery took a secondary seat and started experimenting with new methods of feeding.
In 1965, after a 50 year ownership of the Charlevoix hatchery by the government's Bureau of Sports Fisheries and Wildlife, the government abandoned the Charlevoix hatchery. The property was returned to the city from whom the government had leased the land. The city, who had always owned the land, then leased the land to the Michigan Department for its Great Lakes Fisheries Station.
In 1967 fish raising took a back-seat to the Fishery Station's primary gathering information on Great Lakes fish utilizing its survey boat.

Charlevoix station, saying "The Charlevoix station is one of the best in terms of developing salmon stocking programs and implementing breakthrough technology in tracking salmon. We are getting a good idea of the total food web in Lake Michigan."

The fishery is used as a central location where information is analyzed, nets are repaired and research is conducted. Staff biologists and Steelhead's survey crew are responsible for obtaining information from which they determine the location, growth rate, feeding habits and strengths and weaknesses found in major fish species.

YOUR HEALTH

Herbal medicine: is it fact or is it fiction?

F. James Stewart, M.D.

'To your health'

It takes just a few minutes of time in your neighborhood pharmacy to appreciate that herbal supplementation is an important factor in the health practices of a significant number of the general public.

The myriad of bottles of various herbs that greeted my eye left me in wonderment of which one? For what? And how much? A short primer might be helpful.

The more popular herbal medicines that we see are echinacea, ginkgo biloba, ginseng, and St. John's wort. Saw Palmetto and kava are also popular.

Echinacea is used as an "immune booster" to fight off infections, particularly those thought to be caused by viruses. Some research suggests that this idea may be valid, although other studies are more skeptical. No one suggests that echinacea should be used in the pediatric population. The herb appears to increase white blood cell and T-helper cell counts. Echinacea should not be used in pregnancy, autoimmune disorders or serious bacterial infections. Side effects include gastrointestinal upset and allergic reactions. The recommended maximum dosages of the tincture is 1.5-7.5 mL/day, and for tablets, 300 mg 3 times per day. For a common cold, one cup of fresh echinacea tea, two or three times a day could be a pleasant addition to our usual remedies.

Ginkgo biloba, which is derived from the ginkgo tree, and ginkgo leaf, is promoted to treat a variety of conditions, including dementia, dizziness, hearing loss, headache and peripheral vascular disease. Several studies have found that ginkgo improves pain-free walking distance for persons suffering claudication. Most marketing, however, has promoted ginkgo to improve memory and other cognitive skills. It seems to "awaken" functioning, but "sleepy," normal nerve cells and to rejuvenate deteriorating cells. This may be related to the increased blood flow to the brain or to a direct effect on the cell, itself. The effects, however, are marginal, and you probably won't notice the changes yourself. It won't improve your ACT scores or allow you to ace your algebra exam, but it might make for a little more conversation at the dinner table and allow you to stay up to watch Sports Center at 11 p.m. Dosage for circulator disorders is suggested at 120-160 mg/day, and treatment for dementia or memory related dysfunction is up to 240 mg/day. Ginkgo leaf appears to be safe, but the fresh seeds can be toxic to deadly. Use of ginkgo may produce palpitations and mild headache, and nose bleeds, so proceed with caution.

Ginseng, which has been used in medicine for more than 2000 years, is now being promoted to increase stamina, and resistance to stress. Much of the marketing is directed at men, in particular, but numerous studies have suggested similar performance improvement in women as well as men in physical endurance and mental alertness. Siberian ginseng differs slightly from the American and is probably superior in its benefits. Ginseng side effects are many and include insomnia, rapid heart beat, diarrhea, and elevations of your blood pressure. The dosages vary from 600 mg/day to 3000 mg/day. Better check with your doctor, as it may interfere with a medicine you are currently taking.

St. John's wort is a herbaceous perennial that grows here in the U.S. Mass advertising over the past few years has promoted it for its antidepressant and antibacterial activity. In Germany, the herb is licensed for treating anxiety, depression and insomnia. They also use it topically for burns and wounds. Is this too good to be true? Is this the new penicillin? Probably not. At least it hasn't caught on over on this side of the ocean. There is some recent evidence that it is equal to small doses of some of the more mild antidepressants that are in use in America. It can be expensive, so talk with your doctor or pharmacist first.

Saw palmetto is purported to allow older men to void more easily. This means that you don't get up three times every night to visit the bathroom. This can be good and user-friendly, but not everyone will experience the beneficial effects of a few and long-term use, is not known, so proceed with caution. Better yet, talk with your doctor.

Many medical schools are now including herbal remedies in alternative medicine programs in their curricula and young physicians are beginning to incorporate their use in the practice of medicine. Your physician probably has a copy of the Physicians' Desk Reference for Herbal Medicine on his/her desk and would be pleased to open discussion with you regarding their use. Just ask.

Dr. F. James Stewart can be contacted at the Pine River Medical Center located at 14734 Park Avenue in Charlevoix. His phone number is (231) 547-6554.

Area youngsters learn how to be safe when hunting

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Hunting in northern Michigan is viewed by many as somewhat of an art-form, a sporting legacy whose secrets are passed on from generation to generation.

But, this rite of passage requires that young perspective hunters attend a "Hunter's Safety Seminar" before being licensed.

Charlevoix County residents, ages 12 and up, gathered at the Charlevoix Rod and Gun Club Sept. 9. Kids packed the seating area of the rustic commons awaiting an afternoon where they would learn not only the basics of hunting but also approaches to the sport that will keep them safe.

Bill Sutton, President of the Charlevoix Rod and Gun Club, welcomed all participants and familiarized the students with the afternoon ahead.

"You will be breaking up into five groups or stations where demonstrations of muzzle loading, rifle and shotgun shooting, firearms demonstrations, bow hunting and first aid and survival will take place," explained Sutton.

The afternoon then proceeded with a video viewing, portraying the three most common hunting accidents. These include the victim being out of sight of the shooter, being careless with a loaded gun and frustrated/anxious hunting where the hunter swings out of the zone of fire.

The video urged the incorporation of three cardinal rules of hunting into the memory of students: treat every gun as if it were loaded, always point the muzzle in a safe direction and be sure of your target before pulling the trigger.

Conservation officer Tom Sweet followed up the video with some helpful hints as to how young hunters can ensure their run-ins with local DNR officials are amicable.

"When you have a gun in your hands act like an adult, regardless of your age," said Sweet.

There will also be a second special time allotted to kids, an early gun deer season, to take place Sept. 23 and 24 on private property only. Sweet warned that parents can accompany their protégés but cannot be armed and kids must be eligible to hunt with a gun.

Sweet also suggested getting a plat book so hunters would not violate trespassing laws.

"Farmland is private; you need permission. Where there is a fence around the property you will need permission and where you see signs that read no trespassing you will need the owner's permission," said Sweet.

Further private property restrictions apply to those who enjoy hunting on their own property with a firearm. Hunters looking to fire upon game on their own property must receive their neighbors' permission, if that neighbor is within 150 yards of where they plan to hunt.

Charlevoix's petunias still coloring Bridge Street

The summer may be winding down, but Charlevoix's petunias are still robust and colorful.

Many locals have remarked that this year's petunias may be the prettiest, most plentiful ever — and Keep Charlevoix Beautiful members say that's just what they planned for.

"Some of the changes we made this year have really made a difference in how well the petunias have fared," said Joanne Curtis, president of Keep Charlevoix Beautiful. "Plus, we've had lots of help in planting and maintaining the flowers. The results have been fabulous!"

The recipe for success? For starters, fresh soil, treated with weed retardant, was added to the roadway beds last spring. Operation Petunia coordinator, Dale Boss, searched throughout northern Michigan for the best petunia supplier before settling on a small, family-owned nursery in Posen.

Hundreds of citizens turned out to help plant petunias on May 25, completing the task in record time before they enjoyed the traditional community-sponsored picnic in East Park.

The Charlevoix Garden Club re-planted the triangle at the intersection of Michigan Avenue and Petoskey Street and the evening Garden Club maintained the flower beds at the north and south entrances to the town.

Once again, Dale and Marilyn Boss were up and out before the crack of dawn to take the petunia watering truck on its rounds. For the first time, the City of Charlevoix took over the task of weeding.

Curtis says that it takes a village to create the flower-lined streets, but the effect is well worth the effort.

"Visitors frequently comment on our petunias — so we know it makes a great impression. We're very grateful to all who contribute a help make Operation Petunia a success," she said.

Meanwhile, it's not too late to do your part for the petunia project. Keep Charlevoix Beautiful is still accepting donations to help cover the cost of this year's planting. Contributions may be sent to Keep Charlevoix Beautiful, Post Office Box 1, Charlevoix, MI 49720.

Safety is the lesson for young hunters in area SAFETY

Sweet also alluded to a private property restriction whereby if you shoot a deer and it crosses over onto private property the hunter has no right to pursue the animal. Sweet urged the attentive students to either speak with the landowner or to call the DNR. In order to alleviate this possible sticky situation the DNR also suggests keeping blinds away from property lines.

Blind regulations stipulate that you may do as you please on your own property, but on state land no screws or nails are to be put in the trees and tree stands on public land need to be portable, made of natural material and marked with the owner's name and address. The crowd was also informed that hunter orange needs to be worn when hunting with a gun in Michigan.

"I wear as much orange as I can put on. You want people to see you. Even in a blind deer hunting, you need to wear orange," said Sweet.

Some participants in the seminar then raised the question of local baiting regulations — in many cases their mentor hunters have employed baiting strategies.

According to Sweet, once archery season starts hunters in Charlevoix and Emmet counties are allowed to bait using two gallons as opposed to the five gallons permitted last year. Hunters in Antrim County are not permitted to bait.

Shining, like baiting is a topic which raises heated debate and was addressed by Sweet. The officer informed the kids that shining is permitted until 11 p.m. for the sole purpose of watching deer. However, shining is not allowed at all in the month of November and whenever you are shining a weapon cannot be in the car.

If found in violation of shining regulations and you are carrying a weapon the punishment carries a mandatory five day jail sentence and you would probably lose your weapon and the right to hunt for the next three years.

After discussing other legalities including: quantities of shells permitted, encasing and unloading your weapon whenever it is put away, weapons allowed during given seasons and dates during which hunting is permitted the kids were getting restless and excited to head out onto the course.

In groups, kids practiced and more importantly learned. Art Clute instructed the muzzle loading demonstration and taught the kids not only how to fire the weapon but both the skill involved and safe use strategies.

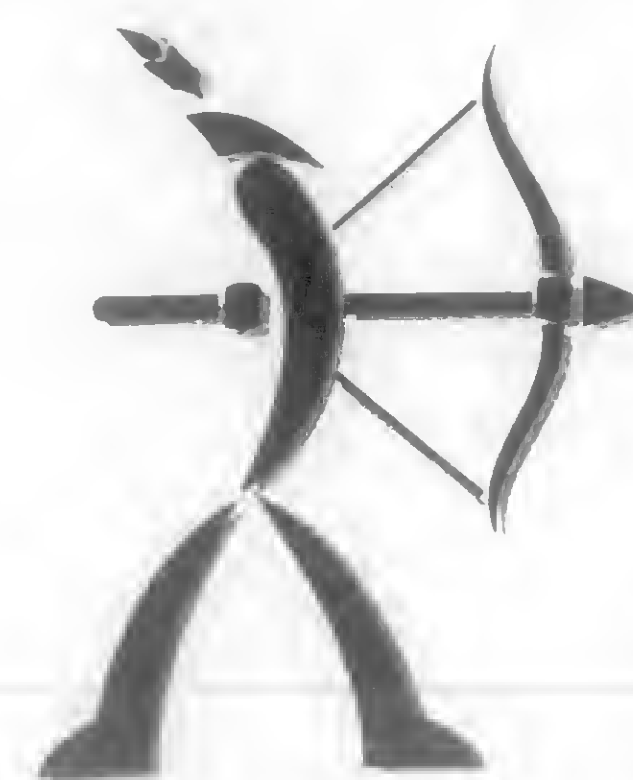

"Know where your partners are, never hand it barrel first to anybody, be conscious of what you are doing and stay accident free," said Clute.

At the firearms station kids viewed appropriate clothing to be worn, ammunition options and weapon variations as demonstrated by volunteer station directors, Don Lockman and Steve Ryder both of Boyne City.

"A gun used correctly is not a dangerous weapon. Hunting is more than shooting animals. It's watching the sun come up, learning how to blow a goose call and learning to rattle a buck. That is the fun part," said Lockman.

Newspapers deliver an involved, dedicated audience. An electronic media buy often contains a lot of waste — people who are just too far away to be your prime prospects — while newspapers deliver the people most likely to do business with you, right where they live and work.

A Record Storm

The record nor'wester of the year cut loose on us Tuesday afternoon. It was a forty-mile breeze and it stirred Lake Michigan to its uttermost depths. The steamer Beaver came in from the Island when the gale was at its height and the swells were throwing clouds of spray over the piers. Many resorters watched the brave little boat from the bluffs, as she mounted the waves and entered the harbor as if it were an everyday affair.

The steamship Manitou came in soon after, bound south, with a large number of Mackinac and Harbor Springs passengers, many of whom left the boat here to continue their journey by rail.

Two accidents occurred on the Manitou during her passage to this port. A big trunk got loose and ran amuck on the main deck, knocking down an employee named Sowerly, badly injuring his back, legs and face. He was taken ashore here unconscious. A lady passenger, name unknown, had her wrist broken in the shake-up.

It was a nasty bluster of wind, and a boisterous and ill-mannered way of bidding farewell to August. But with the first September sunshine, Tuesday morning, Nature smiled, and we have summer again at the threshold of autumn.

Siren screeches at high noon

New electric alarm calls town to eat

Toot, Toot — not ding-dong, will be the new tocsin when fire breaks out

Residents of Charlevoix and some of the fleeing resorters were possibly alarmed and puzzled last Friday morning and again Saturday noon when the new fire siren on the court house sounded its banshee note. As this performance will be repeated each day at twelve noon for a week or so, some explanation is necessary.

The whistle in question is about to be put in use and for the period mentioned above will be used as a midday signal, repeated at intervals. For Ward numbers over one, the highest and lowest of the register of the whistle will be combined with blasts of intermediate length and intensity of pitch until the full count for the indicated ward is blown. For instance, the signal for Ward One, graphically expressed, will be-highest pitch, lowest pitch, highest pitch, lowest pitch and repeat. For Ward Two-highest, lowest; high, low; high, low; each up and down

The new whistle is a double-head, Sterling Siren Electric fire alarm. Model M, manufactured by the Inter-State Machine Products Co., Inc., of Rochester, N.Y. It works on the turbine principle, the rapid revolution of blades sucking the air with varying velocity, controlled by a switch located on the second floor of the fire house in the chief's quarters, regulating the speed of the three H.P. motor that drives it. A similar whistle, of smaller size, installed on the fire tower in Boyne City, has been plainly heard here when the wind was in the right direction, so there is little doubt but that Charlevoix's siren will fulfill its purpose.

This whistle was purchased from a fund raised by the firemen through their dances and other entertainments and congratulations on the acquisition of a first class piece of equipment are certainly in order.

swing of the siren's note making one count, following the first blow or general alarm, the tone not rising as high or falling as low in scale as on the first or alarm signal. It is not yet decided whether or not the use of the bell will be discontinued, but it is probable that it will be used only in case of something happening to disable the siren, as it cannot be heard at all while the later is blowing.

The old tower, 41 feet above low water, is equipped with a red light which can be seen for 13 miles, a diaphone or foghorn which sounds for two seconds and is silent for 18 seconds and a fog bell for emergencies. The modern foghorn familiarly known as Ferdinand, was installed in 1937. Prior to that time a bell was always used.

The old lighthouse, which is literally a part of Charlevoix's history, has marked the entrance to Pine River and the harbor proper, Round Lake, since the days of the sailing vessels when northern Michigan was a logging area and hundreds of sailing craft were towed into the harbor by small tugs to take on cargo of lumber, tan-bark and logs. It has seen the change from sailing vessels to steam and other modern means of navigation. It has been a beacon in many storms and guided vessels to the safety of Charlevoix's land-locked harbor. It has been a trysting place for lovers and probably one of the most photographed spots in this area. Even though the new steel structure will hold the same facilities to navigation, the old lighthouse will hold many nostalgic memories for Charlevoix residents and many visitors.

The new lighthouse, which was built in Milwaukee and brought here, will be approximately the same size as the old structure. It is being erected under the supervision of the district U.S. Coast Guard Engineers with the assistance of the C.G. Cutter Woodbine of Grand Haven.

New steel lighthouse is replacing famous old fog horn structure

The familiar old red wooden lighthouse on the south pier, which has guarded the entrance to the harbor since 1885, will be dismantled to make way for a modern steel structure.

Located near the end of the concrete and steel pier about 500 feet out from the mouth of Pine River, the old lighthouse was formerly located on the north pier. In 1914 it was moved to its present location when a 61-foot pyramidal skeleton tower with a blinker light was built on the north side.

The old tower, 41 feet above low water, is equipped with a red light which can be seen for 13 miles, a diaphone or foghorn which sounds for two seconds and is silent for 18 seconds and a fog bell for emergencies. The modern foghorn familiarly known as Ferdinand, was installed in 1937. Prior to that time a bell was always used.

PACE to be in Charlevoix by the end of this year

PACE

The City of Novi, in metro Detroit, currently has a similar program in operation whereby meetings of public officials, like city council, are locally televised as are school related happenings.

"We have AV equipment at the council meeting room and we run our sessions live. People sit at home and watch. We've had concerned citizens run down during audience participation. We have had a fantastic amount of community support and viewership. This is a wonderful way for area residents to find out what is going on — it is highly watched. I would highly recommend it being integrated into all communities," said Maureen Malone, communications relations manager for Novi.

As self-proclaimed promoters of education, Charter has a vested interest in linking the north to south stretch of wire and aiding residents in accessing information of local issues and events.

"We are upgrading in Charlevoix this year and will be launching additional channels. People will be getting the services they have been looking for, for a long time. We are in the process of making the changes now, they (Charlevoix subscribers) will be seeing these services in the future," Robinson said.

6. Is the only newspaper devoted to the interests of the Charlevoix community?

8. Has served the community for over 110 years?

If you answered "Charlevoix Courier" to all eight questions you scored 100%. The Charlevoix Courier does all of these and is proud of its tradition of service to the community. We, at the Courier, know the importance of a community having its own newspaper and we will continue to serve the area.

High school celebrating homecoming this week

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Homecoming 2000, a community celebration, is underway in Charlevoix which means pep rallies, football games and parades are living up town.

"The students have worked hard to make homecoming a great production. I am encouraged by their hard work and this event will be wonderful for everyone involved," said Career Prep Coordinator Gail Cherry. "There are 31 students on the student government who are divided into different committees. Right now (Sept. 20) a student is getting convertibles lined up for the half-time parade."

Convertibles will be filled with 14 accomplished seniors looking to be crowned king and queen of Charlevoix High School for 2000. The court generally consists of 10 students, but a three way tie this year boosted participant numbers to 14.

They, and their plans after high school, are:

•Melissa McDonough, age 17. "I will plan to attend college, probably at Michigan State, going into education or business," McDonough said.

•Jeremiah Teuscher, age 18. "After graduation I plan to be a white-water rafting instructor," Teuscher •Lisa Miller, age 17. "I will attend either U of M or MSU where I will major in Spanish and some sort of international business," Miller said.

•Ben VanGuilder, age 18. "I plan on attending Calvin College. I will most likely major in sports medicine or business," VanGuilder said.

•Sabrina Wynkoop, age 17. "After graduation I will be attending Michigan State University to study veterinary medicine," Wynkoop said.

•Ben Macks, age 17. "I plan to attend college and major in theater," Macks said.

Businesses say summer was a success

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

The summer season has drawn to a close and Charlevoix's downtown district will soon look like a scene in an old western movie, where snow flurries resembling tumbleweed will dance down Bridge Street.

Some merchants will be closing their doors while others will revise their hours to a more economically viable schedule. But, before order is restored to our quaint town and summer residents fly south, a glance at local merchants shows Charlevoix had a great summer.

"It was a good steady summer."

Mike Holmes,
Owner of the Appletree

"This summer was excellent and actually as of today (Sept. 20) I am up," Mike Holmes, owner of the Appletree said.

According to Holmes, the Appletree, located on Bridge Street, may have seen an influx in profit for the season because each year he offers consumers fresh artists who configure unique home accent pieces.

"It was a good steady summer. One-hundred percent of the store is filled with new products, from new artists every year — they (the artists) are always coming up with something new," Holmes said.

The Appletree will be open for winter shoppers, but will be modifying store hours as things begin to slow down.

The T-shirt businesses in town also saw greater sales this summer and they, like Holmes, also offered shoppers a more polished product.

"We've (Harborwear) done better this year as compared with last year; July was the busiest. We have changed everything this year. We have a whole new look. All three of our stores (Charlevoix Wear, Color Wear and Harborwear) are up this year," Debbie Angermuller, Harborwear store manager, said.

According to Angermuller, Harborwear will be closing its doors the first week in October, Color Wear will soon follow, closing the end of October and Charlevoix Wear, for their third time, will be staying open all year.

Flanders, Neumann discuss high gas prices in Michigan

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Andy Neumann and Francis "Brownie" Flanders are running for State Representative and as they scamper across the district gathering votes each is spending some serious time at the pump.

"I drive 3,000-4,000 miles-per-month so I'm buying gas every couple of days and I watch gas prices," Flanders said.

In fact northern Michigan residents, politicians and visitors are all feeling the hike in gas prices.

"Maybe in a big city, high gas prices and levels of smog would encourage use of mass transit, but in northern Michigan we travel all over the place. We live in a rural area and rely heavily on our cars," said Neumann. "If prices continue where they are or rise, people will be hesitant to do weekend trips, which will negatively effect the economy in northern Michigan."

The wide-reaching impact of high gasoline prices makes our elected Representative's plan of attack an important focus in the upcoming November general election.

Local Republican candidate for representative, Francis Flanders looks to redistribute federal, state and sales taxes as a means by which consumers can benefit from higher gasoline prices.

"The six percent sales tax is a charge based on the price of gas. But, the formula for redistribution is not really fair. We know exactly where gas tax comes from and that money should come back at a proportion of gas dollars sold rather than based on population."

He said the extra money could be used to improve roads or plow snow.

"We get a huge influx in our population from visitors using our roads. My issue is to make sure we get our fair share maybe by reorganizing the way our "fair share" is distributed to take into consideration the large influx of people into this area who don't live here," Flanders added.

Neumann also commented on the sales tax, but focused on avenues through which to alleviate the immediate financial burden felt by consumers. In Neumann's plan, he looks for legislative measures to be taken in order to regulate the "monopolistic tendencies" of big oil companies.

Gas prices create debate over who is to blame

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Charlevoix is a rural community where residents typically have a long commute to numerous destinations including work, the grocery store and even the nearest gas station, so unusually high fuel prices have raised consumer concern.

Where our political representatives stand on the issue of fuel may reflect future price stabilization and the way in which northern Michigan needs will be handled.

Jim Rink of AAA Michigan commented on the Republican/Democratic split in addressing the issue of high gasoline prices.

"The Democrats are blaming big oil while the Republicans are blaming regulations. Essentially what the Federal Trade Commission has found is that previous reports suggest no price fixing or collusion is going on. Rather, it is a combination of supply and demand (high consumer demand) and high oil prices creating supply issues. There was also a pipeline disruption in Michigan, the Wolverine Pipeline," said Rink.

Regardless of who is to blame for skyrocketing prices at the pump residents of Charlevoix — a tourist destination — fear the added cost will act as a deterrent to prospective visitors.

In July, motorists saw fuel prices average $1.67 per gallon. These figures reveal a $0.48 increase from the previous year.

However, Rink assures consumers that the trend toward increased gas prices did not equate to a stale tourist season in Michigan during the summer season although somewhat of a reduction was seen.

"We have found a couple of effects. Some people put off summer travel but Labor Day, when gas prices were lower, showed record numbers of travelers," said Rink.

According to Rink, and recent conversations with area merchants, high gas prices did not negatively alter the local economy in terms of revenue brought in, but out of pocket cost to local consumers has certainly hit hard. Many locals own four wheel drive trucks, notorious gas guzzlers, and they have not had any relief at the pump. Rink advises that technological advancements in the automotive industry may provide just the relief needed and at an affordable price.

"There are some alternatives; Toyota and Honda have come out with hybrid cars who motors are both gas and electric. They get good mileage and are affordable," said Rink.

AAA also encourages other ways of conserving gas:

Slow down, keep your tires properly inflated, give your car a full tune-up, do not purchase mid-grade or premium gas unless required by the car's manufacturer, don't let the car idle for more than a minute, accelerate gently and brake gradually, consolidate errands, avoid excess weight in the car when traveling, car pool and check your oil.

Another interesting fact: those who own a 40 mile per gallon ride will spend $450 less each year on gas than those who own a 20 mile per gallon vehicle. A savings of $2,250 over a five year period.

Man arrested for alleged Charlevoix thefts

A 22-year-old Hayes Township man was arrested Sept. 16 for several alleged breaking and entering at local businesses in Charlevoix and Emmet counties.

Dwight David Carson was stopped Sept. 16 by Michigan State

Police troopers allegedly leaving the scene of several breaking and enterings in Petoskey.

According to Charlevoix County Sheriff George T. Lasater, Carson and a 16-year-old alleged accomplice from Emmet County, allegedly confessed to troopers and a Charlevoix County detective to being involved in approximately 20 breaking and enterings since May. Carson is being held in the Emmet County jail.

He allegedly broke into the following businesses in the Charlevoix area: Subaru by the Bay in Hayes Township, Veteran of Foreign Wars Post 1153 in Charlevoix Township and Haggard's Plumbing and Heating in Charlevoix Township.

Lasater said an investigation into other related breaking and enterings in a three county area is continuing.

Clarification

In a story in last week's Charlevoix Courier about the formation of the Friends of Stover Creek, page 6, a clarification needs to be made. The story should have said certain parts of Stover Creek does not have water, not all of Stover Creek.

OPINIONS

Do not feed animals around Charlevoix

When the story was first proposed to me, it sounded like a cute feature on feeding ducks and the large population it has created in East Park.

Who couldn't feel a little warm with thoughts of a kind individual taking time out of their day to throw some corn on the ground to the needy waterfowl of Charlevoix. But, once I started reading the story on page 9, that thought started to change.

It became increasingly apparent that this person or persons, while being very nice, are actually doing a disservice to these ducks. By feeding these wild creatures, they have created a dangerous situation for these waterfowl and a mess for the city.

As Wildlife Specialist Greg Schumaker put it, "These individuals are putting human emotion in front of the animals welfare...."

First of all, the place where these ducks are congregating is not the safest of locations. It is right near a busy downtown intersection and many times vehicles traveling near this intersection must stop for the ducks to cross.

Someday some poor duck is going to meet a driver who refuses to stop.

Additionally, the amount of ducks in this one area is creating a cleaning problem. That many animals in one spot for an extended period of time, creates quite a mess on the ground.

But the biggest problem comes with feeding them. According to Schumaker, by feeding these wild animals, you are keeping them from their normal migratory habits and making them dependent on you for food.

This creates a situation where, if for some reason the human food supply for these ducks were to stop during the winter, these ducks — who normally fly to the food-rich south — could starve to death.

But, there is a catch. This duck feeding in East Park has been going on for so long now, there is a possibility that these animals are so dependent on humans that they have lost the ability to find their own food. This means if the feeding stops, these ducks could die.

So, in the East Park case, the feeding must go on.

This leaves a lesson: While we cannot help what has happened to these animals, we can make sure it doesn't happen in other areas of Charlevoix. You may think you are being kind to the wild animals around Charlevoix by feeding them; you are actually being more humane by leaving them alone.

Writer taking sabbatical to make revisions on books

Edith Gilbert

'Behind the news'

To my faithful readers! After 15 years of writing this column I am taking a brief sabbatical this winter in order to work on revisions of two of my books, "The Complete Wedding Planner" and "All About Parties."

My publisher wants this job done by January! Of course I am delighted at the prospect, and it couldn't happen in so short a time without using disks of the books on my computer.

The idea is for me to edit the copy from the disk, print it out page by page and note the changes in red on the print-out for the editor. Sounds simple.

What isn't simple is when I inadvertently pressed "ALL" pages instead of "CURRENT" page, so my Hewlett Packard printer wanted to spit out all 200 pages of the book and I didn't know how to stop it, unless I removed the paper from the printer. This is no solution! It is now 10 a.m.

Fortunately, I had a number to call for Hewlett Packard, but unfortunately I didn't know whether to press one, two or three. I tried them all in rotation and listened to a lot of music. At last, to the tune of $25-an-hour, a real live person answered and we spent 20 minutes running through the process. I did learn something. Finally, he said regretfully that the problem was not with the computer but with Microsoft.

"Do you have a number I can call?" I asked. He gave me a number but wasn't very hopeful. He was right. Another session of "Welcome to Microsoft. We are here to help you! Please press one, two, three" and no holding for the operator. I listened to more music, pressed each button getting nowhere. It is now noon.

I decided to call the Learning Center in Petoskey, and by golly, they gave me a Microsoft number that worked! After a warm welcome, listening to more music, pressing several numbers, "our technicians are helping other customers," re-dialing and repeating the procedure, a helpful lady answered the phone. I could have kissed her! She again helped me through the process on my computer — don't ask me how — and finally, thank the Lord, my printer began printing "current page"! It is now 3 p.m.

Benjamin Franklin, writer, printer and publisher, never had such a day as I had!

The next problem was to find someone to scan the "All About Parties" book which was written B.C. (Before Computers) so it could be put on a disk. I called every printer and graphic designer in northern Michigan and they said they could scan (photograph) the page, but that I would not be able to edit it. There were many reasons which I won't go into. I called my sister, Margot, in Berkeley, Calif. and she told me to look up the instructions in "Windows '95 for Dummies." Well, I guess I am not dumb enough to follow these directions! Besides I was a nervous wreck by this time.

Finally, through a friend, I found a young lady who promises to scan Microsoft Word '95 so that I can edit it quickly and easily. Keep your fingers crossed!

God willing the books will be at the Bridge Street Book Store next spring.

Bear situation a disappointment

Editor:
It is with disappointment that I read your account of the bear that was shot to death by the Department of Natural Resources.

It is my belief that this young animal posed no threat to anyone and was attempting only to find his way back out of the city and into the woods when the DNR intervened by bringing in a bear-hunting dog which caused the animal to flee up a tree. That no sedative was immediately available was no excuse for the official decision to attempt to bring the animal down with a shotgun. The DNR's explanation that the proximity of the Charlevoix Middle School weighed heavily in their thoughts is sophomoric. Had the DNR consulted any of the middle schoolers, they might have learned this young bear was frightened, hungry and just trying to get back home to his South Point woods. He sought refuge in a tree because of the barking dog and then the shotgun.

Our DNR really taught those kids in the middle school and the rest of us that morning. We won't be calling them again for an eagle sighting.

Thank you

Editor:
If many of you have noticed a nice bench and bucket of flowers at the corner of Burns Street and Dixon Avenue, it was the kind and caring art of neighbors, Nancy and David Fowler. For we of the older generation, it gives a nice place to stop and rest on our daily walks. I use it so often.

Good job

Editor:
On behalf of the 1.5 million members of Michigan AARP, I want to publicly acknowledge Michigan Governor John Engler and State Representative Andy Neumann, for the leadership and political courage they demonstrated in fighting for meaningful consumer protections in Michigan's recently enacted Telecommunications Act.

AARP strongly believes that consumers are best served and protected by a telecommunications industry that is truly competitive — and the rewrite of Michigan's Telecommunications Act does much to promote a truly competitive marketplace.

By strengthening the oversight of the Michigan Public Service Commission, the act establishes a process by which rate-setting will be just, reasonable and affordable.

The act eliminates the end-user carrier line access fee, a $3.28 surcharge added to the monthly bill of every residential rate-payer by their local service provider which will collectively save the members of AARP at least $35 million every year. Because most older people live on fixed incomes, the household savings of nearly $40 a year are significant. Michigan consumers will save a total of $270 million annually as a result of this provision.

Deep pockets lined up to kill this consumer-oriented legislation. Some proponents of reform were threatened with political extinction by the companies and corporations whose monopolistic powers are now constrained. The state elected officials who kept faith with AARP and Michigan consumers by supporting the Telecommunications Rewrite deserve our acknowledgment and applause.

Repeal the Estate Tax

Editor:
The current administration is continuing on with their love of big taxes. Americans are overtaxed and the administration doesn't want to let you die without some extra penalty. President Bill Clinton's latest move to veto the bill that would have repealed the Estate Tax keeps the two inevitable things in life — death and taxes — joined at the hip.

Letters to the editor

The latest over-taxation move came with President Clinton's veto of a bill that would have repealed the Estate or "Death" Tax. The Clinton-Gore Administration wants to continue their trend of taxation without respite.

The "Death Tax" is flawed in principle; the government takes the death of a loved one and turns it into a taxable event. Family members must burden themselves with tax compliance as well as personal matters, like funeral arrangements.

The National Federation of Independent Businesses (NFIB) estimates that one-third of small-business owners today will have to sell all or part of their firm to pay death taxes. With the current tax structure family futures are in jeopardy.

The "Death Tax" is also a burden on farmers. When the head of the farm dies his children are forced to sell off part, and sometimes all, of their farm to cover death tax expenses.

It is distressing to watch farmers work so hard all day knowing that their entire legacy will likely die with them.

We must defend our businesses and farms for future generations and our right to a fairer, simpler tax code. It's wrong to see families selling off their way of life to pay the death tax. It is time for a change and time to send the death tax to its grave.

Wedding

Gennett—Spaulding

Melinda Ann Gennett and Matthew Glenn Spaulding, both of Lansing, were married in front of 300 guests Aug. 5 at St. John's Student Parish in East Lansing.

Gennett is the daughter of Lyle and Gayle Gennett of Charlevoix. Spaulding is the son of Norm and Saragen Spaulding of Lansing.

Father Mark Ingrott performed the full Catholic mass. The bride, wearing a white gown and carrying mixed flowers, was given in marriage by her father.

The maid of honor was Jennifer Stambaugh, a friend of the bride. Bridesmaids were: sisters of the bride, Christie Kaczynski and Holly Wiefelich; friends of the bride, Danielle Bongard and Amber Conklin. They wore hunter green Alfred Angelo dresses and carried mixed bouquets. Elizabeth Staples and Elyn Nedwicki, cousins of the bride, were flower girls.

The best men were Nick and Mike Spaulding, brothers of the groom. Groomsmen were: Jon Spaulding, cousin of the groom, and Adam Droste and Paul Coonrod, friends of the groom.

Luke Bailey, a friend of the groom, was the usher.

A reception was given at Hawk Hollow Golf Course. A rehearsal dinner was given at Guerrazzi's Restaurant in Lansing.

The couple went on a cruise in the Caribbean as a wedding trip. They plan on living in Lansing.

The bride is a graduate of Michigan State University and the groom is employed by Consumer's Energy and the Dewitt Township Fire Department and attends Lansing Community College.

New utility billing for the month of September

Residents in the city of Charlevoix will be seeing their utility bills this week, with a due date of Oct. 18, rather than throughout the month of September as has been policy in the past.

Future months will follow a similar pattern with all bills being sent out approximately two days prior to the end of the month and due date of the eighteenth. If the 18 falls on a weekend or a holiday, bills will be due the next business day at city hall.

The city has also recently installed a new billing software known for its excellent reporting capabilities and flexible billing characteristics. The city is planning on implementing a new program that will allow customers to pay bills directly from their checking accounts starting next spring.

For more information on the new billing dates and the new software, call the Charlevoix city offices at 547-3259.

MDEQ to have hearing for Southdown

A public hearing will be given at 7 p.m. today in the cafeteria of the Charlevoix Middle School over a new cooling system Southdown cement company is proposing to install in its Charlevoix Township plant.

According to Dave Ferrier of the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality, the cooling system, called a clinker cooler, is a modification over the plant's old system of cooling hot materials from a kiln at the plant.

Currently, kiln materials are exposed to the air during the cooling process, creating dust in the air. Ferrier said the new system recirculates the material and eliminates discharge creating a reduction in dust emissions from the plant.

"That means there will be less dust on cars," he said.

Michelle Buckler, environmental manager at Southdown, said of the new system, "Any improvements we can make to air quality is a positive thing."

As is required by law, Southdown must undergo a 30-day public comment period before the Department of Environmental Quality rules on this proposal.

Chicago Club establishes fund for children's health

A new Chicago Club Fund, Quick Action for Kids (Q-A-K), created recently by club members and established with the Charlevoix County Community Foundation, will be used to meet modest and unexpected healthcare expenses of Charlevoix Public School children.

After looking at community needs, Chicago Club members decided their fund could make a big impact by working in small ways to improve life for individual Charlevoix Public School children, helping to keep them healthy, fit and able to learn.

"Area families may work seasonally, lack health insurance or have few financial resources to deal with their children's health or dental care," says Virginia Cash, president of the Chicago Club. "Our fund isn't designed to supplant coverage available from other sources — but to provide immediate assistance for a variety of minor medical needs that otherwise would go unmet."

The Chicago Club Fund will focus on prevention, correction and rehabilitation, where often a one-time expenditure can make an enormous positive difference for a child. In addition to traditional medical or dental care, the fund might help cover expenses related to speech therapy, hearing or vision aids, or personal hygiene, for example. Priority will be given to elementary school students.

Requests for assistance will be handled by school personnel and, if approved by the Community Foundation, the expenditure of funds will be immediate.

Bob Tambellini, president of the Charlevoix County Community Foundation, said although its resources are limited, the fund will help fill a healthcare gap in the area and is an excellent expression of the Chicago Club's long history in Charlevoix.

The Chicago Club Fund is one of 110 funds currently managed by the Charlevoix County Community Foundation. A charitable organization serving all of Charlevoix County, the foundation was established in 1992 by a group of local citizens. Donations from individuals, families, and organizations are accepted by the Community Foundation and professionally invested in a permanent endowment. Income earned on the endowment is then used to make grants in support of local programs and projects. Since it began, the Community Foundation's assets have grown to more than $7 million, and grants totaling more than $2 million have been distributed throughout the county.

More information about the Chicago Club Fund, or any of the other funds held by the Charlevoix County Community Foundation, is available by calling the foundation office at (231) 536-2440 or by writing PO Box 718, East Jordan, MI 49727.

By FR. JIM GUNN

Christ Episcopal Church

Recently I was sharing a very important distinction with my congregation. It is a distinction that every Christian should have clear in this day and age — the distinction between Worldly wisdom and Godly wisdom.

A very obvious but significant thing to say about Godly wisdom is that it starts with God! Look at Proverbs 9:10 — "The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom, and knowledge of the Holy One is understanding."

We also need to realize that Godly wisdom is often not recognized or understood by those who are of the world. Let me just list a few Scriptures that you might look at: 1 Corinthians 1:17-25; John 3:3; Ephesians 1:18-19 and 1 Corinthians 2:11-14.

The summary of what all of those passages are saying is that you must have the Spirit of God in order to understand the things of God. With Godly wisdom, it is not a question of "seeing is believing" so much as it is a question of "believing is seeing."

In other words, you cannot see the hand of God at work around you if the hand of God is not at work in you.

How then can you share the things of God with those around you? It is especially difficult with those who have little knowledge of or belief in the words of Holy Scripture. We start by asking God for the wisdom to know what to say.

Worldly wisdom says, "Show me!"

Godly wisdom says, "Teach me."

OF BLESSINGS

Worldly wisdom says, "I hesitate."

Godly wisdom says, "I trust."

Worldly wisdom says, "I doubt."

Godly wisdom says, "I believe."

Worldly wisdom says, "Make me powerful!"

Godly wisdom says, "Make me holy."

Worldly wisdom says, "Make me god!"

Godly wisdom says, "Make me... God."

Let us always seek to have our lives filled with Godly wisdom. The apostle Paul put it well in Ephesians 5:15-17, when he said, "Be very careful, then, how you live — not as unwise but as wise, making the most of every opportunity, because the days are evil. Therefore do not be foolish, but understand what the Lord's will is."

CROP walk Saturday hopes to raise $17,500 for hunger

Many walkers will be taking part in a 6-mile hike to the Ironton Congregational Church for this year's CROP Walk Saturday.

Money raised from pledges for this event will go to help fight hunger throughout the world, as well as in the United States. The day has also been declared "CROP Walk Day" by Charlevoix Mayor Alvin Russell and Boyne City Mayor Eleanor Stackus.

This is the seventeenth annual CROP Walk for Charlevoix County and organizers hope to see at least 150 walkers bring in a total of $17,500. This would surpass last year's total of $17,210 earned by 136 people who made the walk last year. Local food pantries in these three communities will keep 25 percent of the money pledged.

Each route is different at the CROP Walk, but walkers from all three locations will end up at the Ironton Congregational Church, where this year the Boyne Valley Lions Club will serve a luncheon to participants. Drivers will be available at Ironton after the lunch to return walkers to their communities.

Boyer City walkers will begin at Whiting Park and walk to the Ironton Ferry, where they will cross over and finish the walk to the church. East Jordan hikers will start at Elm Pointe and walk along M-66 to Ironton, while Charlevoix participants will begin from the May Street door of the high school, walk down May Street to Stover Road and proceed on M-66 to Ironton.

There will be a rest stop along the way, if needed, and drivers will patrol the routes to pick up any person who feels they cannot complete the walk.

The walk will begin in all areas at 9 a.m., but it is suggested that those planning to walk come at 8:30 a.m. to register, turn in their walk money and obtain an orange vest to wear — this is necessary for all walkers for safety's sake.

This is a walk, so bicycles, skateboards and inline skates are not allowed. Parents, however, may push children in strollers or pull them in wagons. Wheelchairs are also allowed.

To obtain a sponsor form, contact your local church or Kay Smith at 547-2920 in Charlevoix, Marge Teske at 536-3128 in East Jordan or Diana Walls at 582-6485 in Boyne City.

Harbor, United Way team up

Harbor Industries of Charlevoix and The CharEm United Way teamed up Sept. 20 for a Day of Caring.

The Day of Caring is usually at the beginning of a United Way Campaign, in which volunteers take on projects in the community.

"Small projects within the community are sought out and matched with volunteers willing to complete them. The small projects can be anything that takes less than four hours to complete such as yard cleanup, painting or wallpapering," said Brynne Klawuhn, executive director for the CharEm United Way.

United Way was contacted by Jennifer Archambault of Harbor Industries, who was interested in participating in this program. Harbor Industries was assigned to the Bergmann Center in Charlevoix to help it get ready for an open house that week and the Women's Resource Center in Charlevoix needed some small projects done at its safe house.

Harbor Industries employees then signed up for the projects that interested them.

"This speaks volumes about a company's commitment to the community when they release employees to be involved with projects such as this," Klawuhn said.

This was the first year of the program, so it was intentionally kept small, Klawuhn added.

"In other communities with more established Day of Caring projects, the whole community gets together and volunteers. Some have as much as 10,000 people participating. I'd like to see this project grow and become more established in the coming years," Klawuhn said.

Charlevoix's ducks do not have to fly south in winter

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

A quick glance to the sky during fall months generally will reveal an entourage of ducks migrating south for some fun in the sun, but a flock of feathered friends has stayed behind and currently is spending their mornings congregating in East Park.

"The ducks are fed all winter starting now. Gary at the fudge shop (Murdick's) buys corn for them and takes them the store's leftovers all season. Bill Shuler also came by last year and fed them corn. They stay all winter and even came to recognize his car. They hang around until they get fed and then they take off," said Ed Amick co-owner of Amick Lakeside Realtors which borders East Park. "The city doesn't like the stuff on the sidewalks, but I just don't walk over there. In the winter time it is nice to see the ducks."

Amick estimates there are about 200 ducks there.

Some argue it is nice to see the ducks friendly faces during fall and winter months while others claim wild animals should not receive human handouts due to potential negative effects.

Wildlife Control specialist, Greg Shumaker views winter feeding of the ducks as a problem which needs to be addressed legislatively.

"These individuals are putting human emotion in front of the animals welfare, keeping the ducks around for their own enjoyment. This is a problem, people should not be feeding the ducks," he said. "A local ordinance should be passed which prohibits the feeding of water fowl. It's not good for them, it's not good for any animal. You'll turn them into addicts as those ducks become acclimated to people, you're domesticating a wild animal."

He added he believes it is not good to create non-migratory wild fowl and the food being feed to these ducks is bad for their system. "Bread is a processed food which is not good for the duck. They then stick around when they should be migrating south," Shumaker said.

According to City Manager Mike Weisner feeding the ducks is currently within the rights of residents and visitors of the City of Charlevoix. There are no regulations against feeding the ducks.

"They do make messes on our docks. They are kind of like geese in that way," said Weisner.

Recreation Director Ike Boss, said there are beach regulations posted which discourage the feeding of seagulls at area beaches because they tend to get a little too comfortable with humans.

"They (seagulls) steal hot-dogs and crap on people's heads. The ducks stay here all winter long and are fed by Murdick's Fudge Factory," said Boss.

Gary Murdick has found his encounters with the ducks in East Park to be amicable, but does realize both the city and others would prefer that he not.

"I feed them cracked corn from the County Post. We've been feeding them for over 10 years. I do it in the winter and another guy comes and feeds them also. I feed them on a regular basis," said Murdick.

A second issue raised by wildlife specialist Shumaker surrounds the length of time this has been going on. If an ordinance were to be passed and the feeding were to cease, these ducks no longer have instinctual ways of finding food and could quite possibly die. "A number of these ducks haven't migrated for a number of years. If the food stopped they would stay. They don't know how to get their natural food source anymore, they may lose those instincts," Shumaker said.

He started skiing when he was 6 years old and began competitive skiing at age 8.

Freidinger also is an avid mountain biker and racer. He began mountain biking when he was 15 and captured the Expert 24-under Division State and Michigan Cup Series championships. Prior to that he was the Iceman Champion in the Expert 18-and-under Division.

Northwest Academy adds two more teachers

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Local charter school, Northwest Academy, has welcomed two new instructors to its staff for the 2000-2001 school year.

Kim VanderArk

Steve Geobel

The teachers here have very positive attitudes towards the kids. It is also a young staff which can be a great asset," said VanderArk.

VanderArk hails from Clarkston and relocated to northern Michigan six years ago. She currently commutes to school each day from her home in Ellsworth where she, her husband and son live.

VanderArk has an extensive educational background. She received two degrees from Michigan State University one in advertising and the other in language arts. She then accepted her teaching certificate from Grand Valley State University.

"I am hoping by the next marking period to have a better idea of where students are at and where they can go. I didn't have much time to prepare. Once I can evaluate the situation I can start expanding," VanderArk said.

East Jordan resident Steve Geobel also joined the Northwest team. Geobel currently teaches sixth and seventh grade geography, eighth grade history, eleventh and twelfth grade government, physical education classes and a business marketing class open to high school students.

"Probably the most challenging will be fitness class. We will be utilizing the gym (Harbor Health and Fitness) it will work out really well. It is a combination fitness/health class that focuses on exercise and what goes into their bodies and the importance of that. We (Northwest Academy) will be adding a gym with a basketball court. But right now we are limited. We play outside, but as it gets colder there are less options. The new facility for indoor sports will be nice.

With the business marketing class we are taking the opportunity to have a yard sale as a fundraiser for the students. They will be writing the advertising as a class project. What they will learn is personal marketing, the basics of what a student needs; personal economics, marketing and business," said Geobel of some of the projects he has initiated at Northwest.

According to Geobel, he retired from the military a little over a year ago and the position with Northwest marks his first year in a full-time teaching position. He has substitute taught in the area and finished his teaching requirements last December. He received dual concentration status from Ferris State University where he focused on both business/marketing in education and social studies.

Geobel is married and a father of three himself, so interacting with the youth at Northwest Academy is no new challenge to him. Geobel holds a unique approach to teaching whose cornerstone is trust.

"I think it is important to gain a trust with the students. Once a trust is gained they are in a position to listen and learn. I give all my students my policy called 'the three Fs.' I will be firm, fair and we'll have fun and they understand that."

Geobel added, "I have 25 years of experience in the business world that most recent college grads don't offer. In my social studies classes I can integrate knowledge I gained while traveling in the military and touring Europe. When I talk about geography my personal experiences open the kids up and help them to understand and relate better."

Summer was good for many merchants

SUMMER

Charlevoix's out-of-town summer shoppers snatching up local commodities have locally been dubbed "Fudgies" — a clear indicator of how the season went can be achieved by gauging fudge sales.

According to Kay Rewald, Kilwin's owner, cold weather conditions may have affected sales in August but overall fudge was still a hot commodity.

"July was up and August was OK. I think it was the weather. I don't feel gas prices affected us too much. I am happy the Charlevoix Chamber is pushing more business coming into town encouraging more groups to come. I wish Charlevoix could be a winter town so we could be open year-round. We will be open 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. and will close in December," said Rewald.

Executive Director of the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce, Jackie Merta, commented on the enormous number of calls filtering into the chamber office each day as both an indicator of interest in the town of Charlevoix and the high number of area visitors.

"We've been very busy with inquiries, our events and projects. We have been quickly responding to inquiries. The chamber has also redesigned our web site (www.charlevoix.org) to promote chamber businesses," she said.

Tom Pfeifle, manager of the Weatheravane Terrace Inn and Suites saw a couple of stale periods when weather conditions were fair.

"We had a flat summer; it wasn't terrible but June was cold and I think that slowed people down. I don't believe high gas prices were an economic factor, but were a psychological factor. The primary attraction to the area is the weather and we can't control that. Overall, as a whole this season, we came out about same as last year," said Tom Pfeifle.

After everyone shopped 'til they dropped downtown, it seems that visitors and residents treated themselves to meals out on the town.

For Giuseppe's owner Robin Moffat, residents and visitors eating out equated to a higher profit margin over last year's figures.

"This was our second summer at the Giuseppe's location; we had a great summer. July and August were the busiest. The water resources in this area and the downtown make for a really nice town (Charlevoix). Our summer was great and I have no complaints; hopefully winter will still be busy," Moffat said. "We may close Sundays but we will be deciding that weekly. If we are busy and still doing well we may stay open throughout the week through November."

After talking with local merchants, it looks as though Charlevoix will continue to be characterized as tourists' destination of choice.

"People just love Charlevoix. Once they have been here, they always come back. There are even some people who are still discovering Charlevoix," said Appletree owner Holmes.

BUSINESS

New business going in old Mettler's location

By JEREMY MCBAIN
 Editor

A new business is already going into the old Mettler's location on Bridge Street.

Audrie, 25, and David, 29, Michael, current owners of the Bridge Street Troll on Bridge Street, are opening up a new clothing store that they say will sell name-brand merchandise at half-price.

"Everything will be discounted. There will be tons of different clothing," Audrie said. She added there will not be any garments — such as T-shirts — with the word "Charlevoix" on it.

The new business will be open throughout the year to meet the clothing needs of locals, so they do not have to drive out-of-town for low-cost clothing, she said. Additionally, the downstairs portion of the store will be used as an art studio to showcase some of the artwork Audrie has created in her spare time.

"Everyone is excited about it. They think it is great," Audrie said of the reaction she has been getting from locals in Charlevoix.

To help them out during the winter, a time when employees are a rare commodity, Audrie said many of her and her husband's friends have agreed to help work the stores.

Audrie and her husband David, are recent graduates of Nova University in Fort Lauderdale, Fla. They have been running the Bridge Street Troll in Charlevoix for the last four summers.

Now that they will have another business in Charlevoix, they are planning on living here year-round. In addition to the new business being open all year, the Michael's first store — the Bridge Street Troll — will also remain open all year.

While the couple are already in the process of moving items into the old Mettler's location and are going to be open for a couple of hours each day, they are still unsure when they will have a grand opening or even the name of the store.

To help them make at least one of these decisions, they are asking the community to help them come up with a name for the store.

If you think you have a great name for the Michael's new store in the old Mettler's location, call them at 547-7362.

Fall series continues with erratic breezes, dreary skies

A. Nony Mouse

'Yachting notes'

Both GOTCHA and ORIGINAL SIN lead their respective classes (Division 1 and the P-26 Fleet, respectively) with First Place finishes in both of the first two races.

While the first was sailed in erratic breezes, this Sept. 20 offered a relatively strong and steady 13-knot wind. Dreary skies were sufficiently threatening to cut down on the number of contestants; M3's early retirement left Division 2 with no finishers!

Following GOTCHA in the big boats were KAMIKAZE, correcting out about 3 minutes later and BLASEN IV, lagging by a dozen.

Behind ORIGINAL SIN in the

P-26 Fleet were JESSE, less than a minute back, and CYGNUS, trailing by three.

FLASH crossed the line well ahead of the rest of the JAM Fleet but saved her time over BALD EAGLE by only two minutes. HIGH SEAS retired.

Fourteen J-22 skippers crossed the starting line but two of them, HABANERO and FIRST DATE, crossed the line early, failed to return and were, therefore, scored PMS. (Seems like an appropriate acronym although here it is supposed to stand for "Premature Starter." Because of today's need for political correctness, it has officially been changed to OCS — "On Course Side" seems to us to be less descriptive as 99.44/100 percent of the typical early starter is NOT on the course side — but we'll start using it anyway, now that we all know what it means.) THUNDERSTRUCK retired so we had just 11 finishers.

First Place went to TOO RECKLESS who lead all fleets to the finish line and had almost a 1 minute edge over Second Place SWINE FLEW. HUSSY crossed 20 seconds later for Third Place Honors. SUPER-FLUOUS and HIGH MAINTENANCE rounded out the top five. Just 5 seconds later CRAZY HORSE led the stampede of the rest of the fleet with PALEFACE LITE right on her tail. ROCK STEADY, JUBBLIES and GECKO were all close behind but HOG-TIDE must have had a knot in the lasso, as she crossed 10 minutes later.

Line up Lady Luck to be your date for the Charlevoix Yacht Club Mini-Vegas Party! It will be at the club Saturday. Our Social Committee Chair, Gloria Barnes (547-4872) still needs volunteers for various tasks, including the fun job of being a dealer or croupier for an hour or two. You'll need that training on your resume when the only businesses in the north are the casinos! See you there...

The Charlevoix Rayders varsity football team bagged a tremendous win Sept. 22 against former state champion Traverse City St. Francis in Traverse City, 34-33.

The game was back-and-forth between the two teams most of the night, but a key play occurred for Charlevoix after the Rayders got a touchdown making the score 27-26 in Traverse City's favor. But, instead of going for a field goal, which would have tied the game at 27, Charlevoix faked and completed a successful two-point conversion, leaving the score 28-27 in Charlevoix's favor.

"The was a very big game. The kids are real excited and feel good about it," said Coach Todd Klinger. "This was a tremendous victory for the team and a reward for all the hard work these young men have done all year. They should be very proud."

Charlevoix sealed the game in a stress-inducing fumble recovery with only 50 seconds to go in the fourth quarter. Traverse City had passed the ball 25 yards to an open receiver, but before the receiver could make it down the field, he was tackled by a host of Charlevoix defenders and he fumbled the ball.

Offensively, the Rayders played real well and racked up over 430 yards, Klinger added. "We had an excellent night throwing the football," he said.

Klinger added he was very happy with the offensive line.

"Anytime you get that many yards, the offensive line is the key for pass protection and run blocking," he said.

Ryan Leitner led in rushing, gaining 91 yards and scoring two touchdowns. Ryan Rafacz was the leading receiver with six receptions for 135 yards and scored two touchdowns. Quarterback Jeremiah Teuscher had 13 completions in 21 throws for 257 yards.

Klinger was also very pleased with the Rayders defensive game.

"Traverse City has been a team that averages 40 points a game and they are a very physical offense. We gave up a lot of points, but we were able to make some key stops and interceptions," he said.

The Rayders are currently 3-2 overall and 2-1 in the league. To keep this winning record, they will need those skills they possessed against Traverse City, as they go into this Friday's homecoming game against Kalkaska.

"Kalkaska is going to be another team that is real physical. We are going to have to make sure we are ready to play," Klinger said.

Charlevoix varsity golfers swing for successful season

By JEREMY MCBAIN

The Charlevoix varsity golf team kept its winning season alive last week with two back-to-back wins Sept. 18 and 19 at the Belvedere golf course.

Charlevoix met Petoskey and Mancelona on the fairway Sept. 18, and outshot these two teams 163 to 171 and 233, respectively. Three Charlevoix players tied for the low score of 40. They were: David Shearer, Allen Brooks and Nick Cole.

Charlevoix was back at it again against Harbor Springs on Sept. 19, outshooting them 168-171. Shearer took the low score with a 39.

Several scores in the 40s were also recorded that day. They were: Chris Smith with 40, Craig Siwaga with 44 and Brooks with 45.

"If we all get at the same time, we can be pretty unstoppable," said Coach Jim Glynn. "The scores are looking better, but there is still hard work ahead."

He added the key is: both he and the players are having a great time on the course, making for a truly successful season.

The Rayders are 5-0 in the conference.

To further its success with its record, Charlevoix met Kalkaska last night in an important game. If they beat the team, Charlevoix will be undefeated in the conference, Glynn said.

Results of that match were unavailable before press-time.

CELEBRATE

*Katie Yager, age 18. "I plan to attend Michigan State University to study veterinary medicine," Yager said.

*Ryan Leimer, age 17. "I plan to go to college," Leimer said.

*Emily Hughes, age 17. "I will attend MSU to study Endocrinology," Hughes said.

*Chad Mackowiak, age 18. "After graduation I plan to pursue a career in Biology," Mackowiak said.

*Amber Parsons, age 18. "I plan to pursue my interest in the arts, attend an art college," Parsons said.

*Ben Coen, age 18. "I plan to go to a community college for the basics," Coen said.

*Kelly Dreyer, age 17. "I plan to go to college and study Architecture," Dreyer said.

*Hal Evans, age 18. "I plan to attend MSU or the University of Central Florida for public relations," Evans said.

Festivities kicked off Sept. 21 when court members, class presidents and vice presidents, were auctioned off in the gym to raise money for next year's homecoming.

These indentured servants will be fulfilling the orders (within reason) of their purchasers today.

"The service auction raised $544 for homecoming expenses like crowns, sashes and flowers," Cherry said.

The 2000 homecoming theme is "Movies." Each class chose a film ry said.

Today, before court members are condemned to an afternoon of servitude, the court and senior class advisors will receive royal treatment at a feast sponsored by the senior class at the Grey Gables.

Friday, as excitement mounts for the big game students will have the opportunity to show their school spirit at a pep assembly beginning at 1 p.m. Spirited students will fill the gym cheering Rayder football players to victory. The pep rally will include a musical tribute to homecoming events played by the band, a presentation of the court, a teacher vs. students game, two competitive class games, a lip sync competition, a tug of war and a performance by the cheerleading squad.

"The primary purpose of the pep rally is to encourage football players — to get them jazzed up for the game. Students enjoy demonstrating their theatrical abilities in competition," Cherry said.

Friday's pep rally is only the start of the day's schedule of events marking Rayder homecoming madness. Floats prepared (Sept. 24 from 1-5 p.m., Sept. 25-28 from 5-8 p.m.) by all four classes will be rolling through town at 5:30 p.m. Friday. The parade will begin at the middle school and will make its way to the high school.

The 2000 homecoming theme is "Movies." Each class chose a film they will in some way depict both in their float and in their lip sync presentation at Friday's pep rally. The senior class chose "Sister Act," the junior class chose "Top Gun," the sophomores will be revealing their rendition of "Ghostbusters" and the freshmen will be depicting "Water Boy."

The parade will be lead by the Vogelheims and the Charlevoix Police Department. Bringing up the rear will be the Fire Department.

"The student council gets together at the end of the summer to talk about their goals for the year and for homecoming. They chose the theme, the individual or couple who are to be the grand marshals leading the parade and week-long events. Joe, who does a lot for the school and sports boosters and Christie, who helps out a lot, Vogelheim will lead the parade," Cherry said.

Those who have worked up a hunger for a hot dog during the parade are invited to a tailgate party to take place behind the weight room at the high school at 6 p.m. Proceeds from the cookout will go to the junior class prom committee.

After you've stuffed yourselves full of hot dogs and witnessed the fine craftsmanship characteristic of Charlevoix High School students' floats it is almost time for kick off.

At 7:30 p.m. the Rayder football team will kick off their homecoming game in front of a crowd of fans hungry for a win. Fans packing the stands of Kipke Field will be checking out a showdown between our Charlevoix Rayders and the Kalkaska Blazers.

At the half, 1999 homecoming king, Brian Cornett, currently attending school in Minnesota, and his queen, Erika Kammermann, currently attending Aquinas College, will step down and the 2000 homecoming king and queen will be crowned. Homecoming competition results will also be announced.

Win or lose, a celebration will follow the game. At around 9:45 p.m. the Student Council sponsored pizza party and bonfire will begin.

"A long time ago this (the bonfire) was done prior to the game as part of the pep rally to encourage the team. This is still a community celebration, but it encourages more community participation than when it took place before the game," Cherry said.

Saturday evening, Charlevoix High School seniors will prepare for their final homecoming dance. The dance, sponsored by the junior class, will take place at the Charlevoix Elementary School beginning at 8:30 p.m. and concluding at 11:30 p.m.

Students who attend will be entertained by DJ Pink Noise.

Charlevoix Cross country teams making strides

The Charlevoix boys' and girls' cross country teams are showing great improvement as they racked up medals at the Petoskey Invitational Sept. 23 at Boyne Falls.

The boys' cross country team, eleventh and twelfth-graders, won the meet by beating East Jordan and Benzie in a very close race. The ninth and tenth-grade boys finished second. The eleventh and twelfth-grade girls on the varsity team also took second, while some ninth and tenth grade girls showed some great scores.

"The guys are really excited because we closed the gap on (East Jordan and Benzie)," Coach Ken Plude said. Before this meet, several of the East Jordan and Benzie runners were ranked higher than Charlevoix's best runner. Now several Charlevoix runners are ranked just as high.

Taking fourth for the eleventh and twelfth-grade boys was Tim Daining with 17 minutes, 17 seconds and taking eighth was Gordie Selph with a time of 17 minutes, 43 seconds.

"The team is running really well and times are dropping," Ken said.

Ken added, Zack Dennis had an "awesome" race and improved his time by 30 seconds and Cody McCarey showed his best finish all season with a time of 19 minutes, 11 seconds compared to his previous low time of 21 minutes, 21 seconds.

McCarey took eighth in the ninth and tenth-grade boys' division.

On the girls' team, Katie Swenor took second in the eleventh and twelfth grade girls' division with a time of 20 minutes, 43 seconds. Liz Ulrich took second in the ninth and tenth-grade girls' division with her time of 21 minutes, 19 seconds.

"They are improving," Coach Mary Plude said. She added she is very pleased with the time improvements being made by her "pack" — generally a grouping of Charlevoix runners usually found running together in the middle of a race.

Overall, she said, times are getting better for the team, thus giving her hope for a strong showing at the regionals in five weeks.

Soccer team takes two losses

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

The Charlevoix Rayders varsity soccer team may be losing on the field, but according to Coach Tom Conlan, they are still playing with everything they have.

The Rayders met Northern Michigan Christian Sept. 19, losing to them 4-0. In the process, the team lost both goalies and one of the starting players to injury and a red card.

Conlan said the team played a pretty good game, especially during the first half leaving the game scoreless. But, Charlevoix lost its goalies in the second half and Northern Michigan Christian jumped at this opportunity.

The Rayders were on the road again Sept. 21 at Houghton Lake, where they were beaten 8-0.

"The guys played hard, but they were outmatched," Conlan said. Houghton Lake was able to start five seniors against Charlevoix's five starting freshmen, added to the fact that the Rayders were still down two goalies.

But, Conlan is not discouraged, even as he prepared to face the tough Harbor Springs last night at home.

"We continue to make progress," he said.

The results of that game were unavailable before press time.

Candidates talk about their plans to reduce gas prices

GAS

"What we should have done is taken sales tax off for the summer.... We could also put excess profit tax on oil companies to discourage price gouging and profiteering. We could set up legislation that prohibits big oil from getting into exclusive purchasing agreements with independent stations — this could improve the market for selling gas...." Neumann said.

Differing points of view as to how the current crisis in gasoline is to be handled stem from opposite sites of blame pointed to by both candidates.

"Big oil companies don't have the reserves they normally have. They can create a shortage and charge whatever they want," Neumann said.

"We've got big oil companies who basically have a monopoly. We criticize Microsoft but take a look at big oil companies — they own from the drill bit that goes into the ground to the wells and refineries and gas stations. If they don't own the station they set the price for independent gas station owners. The finger of blame should be pointed at big gas companies."

Rather than focusing on possible monopolistic practices by big oil companies, Flanders looks to local issues which may be directly impacting current gasoline prices.

"There are a couple factors affecting the current price of gasoline in Michigan," Flanders said.

"One was kicked in early on when a pipeline ruptured down near Jackson — a significant amount of fuel in Michigan came up that pipeline. When wholesalers had to go to Chicago to get fuel they found it was a more highly refined gasoline. The fuel from Chicago was a cleaner burning reformulated gas — RFG; it costs more and that is what they were bringing in because that is what they could get. Then, in December of 1999 a refinery in Alma closed; they produced 52,000 barrels per day. All of this put the pinch on — as supply decreased and demand increased over the summer because we drive more."

He added, "That is on the domestic side; on the other hand OPEC held the line and were not giving us what we needed. Iraq stopped selling to OPEC and no one else picked up the slack."

High gas prices are a financial burden in northern Michigan; purchasing gasoline is directly dipping deeper into local pockets and is also threatening commerce, as it may deter visitors from making the trip north.

"People don't like to buy as much fuel when the price is high. The effect is that some people don't take a vacation or visit some places because of the additional expense of gasoline. The price of gasoline last year from Detroit to Traverse City round-trip was $29.12. In June of 2000 it was $50, almost twice as much," Flanders said.

Island hosts health fair

The Beaver Island Community School was visited by several hundred people Sept. 16.

A community health and safety fair was given at the school, with free and low-cost health screenings and tests for all participants.

Testing and information was provided by Charlevoix Area Hospital, which offered free PSA blood tests to check for the risk of prostate cancer in men, and heel scans to test bone density. Northern Michigan Hospital Foundation and Community Health Education Center offered Cholesterol screenings, body fat count tests and blood pressure checks.

Snacks were provided and activities were planned for children and adults. A pet photo contest was given, as were crafts and games.

The Beaver Island Rural Health center was kicking off the senior services program and telehealth technology. The health center, the community school and the Beaver Island Hospice were sponsors of the event.

County loses whistleblower lawsuit

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

A jury has ruled Charlevoix County violated the Whistleblowers Protection Act, a ruling that will cost the county $150,000.

The jury awarded the money to East Jordan resident Margaret "Beth" Inman, formerly a secretary in the county building department. Friday, after about two hours of deliberation, Inman filed a civil lawsuit under the act against the county and her former supervisor, Ken Doty, building department official, after being fired from her job in December 1998.

Inman claimed she was fired because she had reported building code violations committed by the county to state authorities in November 1998. Doty claims she was fired due to a restructuring of his office.

"I am so glad this is over. Maybe now when people talk about me, they will say I was the woman who saw an unfair system at work and was willing to go against the corrupt 'good ol' boys' to see that it was stopped. People can see the facts now and know I was not an 'insubordinate liar' as the county said," Inman said in a written statement. "The jury heard all the facts and unanimously cast their votes for the truth and for this I thank them from the bottom of my heart."

Inman added, "I must admit I was very concerned having this trial in the Charlevoix County court. I have been through the 'boys' club system' all the way to the state code office and have been trampled on.

Things have been brushed under the carpet that other contractors and homeowners would not get away with. I was afraid this court would be more of the same, but my experience with Judge (Richard) Pajtas and this jury was not like that at all. It was very clear that (Pajtas) didn't entertain the 'good ol' boys' club' in his courtroom. He stuck to the law. My jury was made up of six people who listened very closely and made a unanimous decision in my favor based on the truth."

Marion planning commission may have plan to curb urban sprawl

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

At a recent meeting of the Marion Township Planning Commission a resolution was passed to adopt, in theory, the purchasing of property development rights.

Following a full year of heated debate over possible development repercussions that could result from building a new high school in Marion Township, the township planning commission may have pinpointed an avenue through which to forever preserve the township's rural character.

"The Planning Commission supports the idea of buying development rights, but we can't force it on anyone. It's a way of possibly conserving the rural character of Marion Township important to residents — evidenced in a survey taken of Marion Township residents and as part of our master plan. This is one more possible tool to use," said Marion Township Planning Commission Member John Ochs.

According to statistics offered by the Farmland and Open Space Preservation Environmental Stewardship Division of Michigan's Department of Agriculture, between 1982 and 1992 Michigan lost approximately 854,000 acres of farmland. If this pattern continues it could be argued that Michigan's rural character is being threatened.

Farmland Protection Specialist, Rick Wilson of the Grand Traverse Land Conservancy sees a bright future for a development rights purchasing program in Charlevoix. "In Charlevoix (Marion Township) this could be used as a responsible tool that could alleviate issues of impending expansion caused by the construction of a new school into that rural area. It doesn't take a rocket scientist to understand the types of development that follow schools.

Charlevoix's annual Apple Festival to be Oct. 13-15

Charlevoix's Twenty-first Annual Apple Festival provides an opportunity for visitors to see, to sample and to purchase apples, crafts and fall produce from area orchards and farmers.

This year's Apple Festival will be October 13-15.

The Applefest, started in 1980, originated to bring attention to the agricultural community in Charlevoix, Antrim and Emmet counties.

Residents and visitors alike often ask what is being grown locally and how to find area orchards and farm markets. Therefore, the Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce decided that at least once a year they would bring the harvest to the people.

So, each year on the second weekend in October the Apple Festival takes place in downtown Charlevoix.

The park is lined with farm market booths selling over 30 different types of apples including the hard to find "antique varieties." The ever-popular eating apples will be plentiful. Also available will be MacIntosh, Spartan, Cortland and Jonathan, all excellent for pie baking. For perfect stuffed baked apples, remember to take home some Red Rome Apples and the crunchy Northern Spy is ideally suited for strudel, pie or cobbler. Other fall harvest items will be available. For example, there will be pumpkin, squash, tomatoes, broccoli, apple butter, jam, honey and cider.

Service clubs and other local organizations also man booths along the park to sell apple delicacies.

Of special interest is the Apple Festival Craft Show, comprised of outstanding craftspeople. This is a high quality show featuring unique items and special "holiday gifts."

Throughout the weekend, music and other events provide fun for the whole family.

On Saturday, there will be a petting farm with a wide variety of farm animals and pony rides will be available.

"Free" horse drawn carriage rides will be offered for the whole family on Friday and Saturday from 2 until 8 p.m. The rides will be provided by Cedar Valley Farms and will leave from Park Avenue in downtown Charlevoix.

Further information may be obtained by calling the Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce at 547-2101, visiting its website at www.charlevoix.org, e-mailing, info@charlevoix.org or faxing 547-6633.

Southdown, Cemex annouced merger Friday

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

A merger between the Southdown, Inc. cement company and Cemex, a Mexican-based cement company, was announced Friday.

According to John Laney, plant manager for Southdown, this move does not mean there will be any personnel changes at the Charlevoix plant.

"It will be business as usual," he said.

What it will mean for the Charlevoix plant is its employees will have access to some of the best equipment and resources in the world, Laney said. Cemex is the third largest cement company in the world, while Southdown is the second largest in the United States.

"This is a positive move for the Charlevoix plant," Laney added.

According to a Cemex press release, the move was also positive for investors in both of the cement companies, as the merger creates combined sales in excess of $6.3 billion as of June 30, 2000.

"Southdown is an excellent fit for Cemex," said Lorenzo H. Zambrano, chairman and CEO of Cemex in the release. "The company's management and facilities are world class and, I believe, will mesh well with our global network. This combination will not only expand our presence in the United States, but help us compete more effectively in all our markets."

Southdown, headquartered in Houston, Texas, has 12 cement manufacturing plants and 45 cement distribution terminals serving 27 states. Southdown also mines, processes and sells construction aggregates and specialty mineral products in the eastern half of the United States and in California. Additionally, the company produces and distributes ready-mixed concrete products in California and Florida.

The company acquired the plant in Charlevoix after it merged with the Medusa cement company in July 1998. The Charlevoix plant has about 140 employees.

OPINIONS

Base your votes on more than a party

Are political parties really that important?

As another election year rages in full-force, we find ourselves continually bombarded by advertisements saying, "Our party is the better than theirs. That is why you should vote for us."

This does not just go for national elections. Charlevoix residents also witness political party battles taking place for some local offices.

Now, the debate between political parties is understandable when it comes to national or state government. In these areas of government, many times the persons political party dictates how they will vote on policy.

But, does one person's political party really matter when it comes to local races? Unlike what the political spin-makers of the Democratic and Republican party say, it really doesn't matter in most cases.

Being a good sheriff, county clerk, treasurer or prosecutor is really dependent on how well the candidate can do the job at hand, not if they agree with any political party rhetoric.

Just being a member of any certain political party does not mean a candidate is good for the job. For example: Does it really seem logical to vote for a person with no experience in law for the county prosecutors position, just because they belong to the same political party as you?

Taking it one step further, political parties are so important in some Michigan cities that candidates for city council are not allowed to declare a party on the ballot.

Are party politics really so important in Charlevoix that they determine how well a local public servant will do their job? We don't think so.

We apologize to people pushing one political party over another, but when we vote, we prefer to pick someone we think is best suited for the job when it comes to local elections.

What party they tend to follow is meaningless to us.

Thank you

Editor:
I wish to extend our family's heartfelt thankfulness for all of the numerous acts of generosity and kindness to us.

For those who have hugged us, for those who have given of their time, for those who have spoken kind words, for those who have brought us food, for those who have sent cards, for those who sent flowers, for those football players who have played with the love and spirit that Jigs has for the game, for the young people who have spoken their concern and dared to speak with hearts open, for all those who have come together and have let us feel all the warmth and love sent from God above.

We love all of you and are so moved by the people of this place! Your acts have proven that we are so capable of pulling together for the benefit of our fellow man! Our neighbors and friends have all come together this day, and in just a few hours time, have sawed, split and stacked enough wood to more than carry us over for the winter months ahead.

Jigs and our whole family are deeply moved, it is so wonderful to witness this love for others in action. Jigs is receiving so much love from everywhere! Our family is deeply touched by all of you. We feel each and every prayer and hug out there! I leave you with a little quote that was enclosed in a card Jigs received:

Know in your hearts that all things are possible. We couldn't conceive of a miracle if none had ever happened.

Keep those prayers coming! We love you Charlevoix!

Support Wagbo

Editor:
The Wagbo Peace Center is a not for profit 212-acre organic, working farm and experiential educational center teaching nonviolence and sustainable agriculture. Our agricultural mission is to model whole farm resource stewardship and to teach methods that enhance the environmental quality and economic viability of family farming.

Community Supported Agriculture, or CSA's are partnerships between local people concerned about eating fresh, healthy food and local producers practicing sustainable forms of agriculture. This concept brings together community members, farmers and agricultural land in a relationship of mutual support based on an annual commitment to one another. In other words, a CSA provides a farmer with guaranteed income for his/her labors, and the community members with healthy foods for their investment. This helps small family farmers survive amidst growing industrialization of agriculture, and helps to reinvest and re-equate the community to the land and farmers who provide their foods.

How does it work? Just like a magazine subscription, a "share holder" pays for a share in the farm's harvest in advance. Each week share holders come to the farm and pick up their portion of the harvest. Advance payments allow the farm to purchase seeds and other supplies when needed, eliminating the need for loans. This commitment from the share holder also implies a willingness to share with the farmer both the bounty from the land and at least some of the risk of its production. The local farmer receives fair and guaranteed compensation and in return share holders receive a variety of fresh, organically grown vegetables, meats, and other farm products.

The Wagbo Peace Center has been operating a successful CSA for three years, providing organically grown vegetables, herbs, maple syrup and chickens. We are now looking for other farms, producing organically, to expand our CSA into a "Multi-Farm CSA." We need products such as Eggs, Breads, Dairy, Meats, Honey, Cut Flowers and others.

The Wagbo Peace Center provides the coordination and clearing house location for products to be distributed to the share holders. Share holders pick up their food once each week at a pre-designated time. Each farmer would bring his/her product to Wagbo to correspond with these designated times. Products would be sold in "shares," or pre-determined quantities, so that share holders could pay for them in advance of the season.

We want to provide the best locally grown foods for our community, and support local sustainable farmers.

Other reasons for participating in Wagbo Peace Center's Multi-Farm CSA: Preserves and supports local family farms, provides the farmer with guaranteed outlet and a fair return, keeps food dollars in the community, supports farmers in transition towards low or no chemical inputs, offers opportunity to celebrate nature and community for all, provides fresher, more nutritious foods, creates a stronger local economy, consumers know where, how and by whom the food is grown, conserves the natural resources.

If you have any question or would like to discuss the possibilities of involvement with this project, please feel free to call us! Scott MacKenzie is the coordinator for this project and can be reached from 1-5 p.m., Monday - Friday, at (231) 536-0333.

Thank you

Editor:
On behalf of the Norwood Historical Society, I would like to extend a heartfelt thank you to all those who participated in our annual Norwood Community Picnic and Quilt Raffle held over the Labor Day weekend.

To those who donated items to the auction, to those who contributed their time and expertise to the auction and picnic, and to those who participated in our parade, we thank you. Once again, thank you to Sheriff George T. Lasater and the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department for their participation. Also, the help of auctioning team Mike and Claudia Bost was again invaluable. A special thanks goes to Jo Moffit, whom we are proud to claim as one of our own home-grown artists, for her kindness in underwriting the cost of the quilt raffle tickets.

And of course, a special thanks to all those who worked long and hard to once again create a future heirloom to treasure, that being the quilt itself. I have been informed that the person who was fortunate enough to win the quilt will treasure it forever.

The auction and quilt raffle, in conjunction with the picnic, is the major annual fund-raising event for the Norwood Historical Society. We are proud of our efforts to preserve the history and character of our village. We react with pride at the many compliments we receive from visitors, who comment on the beauty and character of our little jewel of a village.

I can only urge those of you who have not yet experienced Norwood to do so — either through participation in our annual ice cream social, in July, or in our quilt raffle and community picnic, held over Labor Day weekend.

We are also proud of our upcoming book, as yet untitled, on the history of Norwood. This book, compiled by longtime Courier contributor Nancy Ritsema, is being underwritten by the Norwood Historical Society. Copies of the book will be available in the near future.

A final thanks to all of those many unnamed people who made our event a fun reality for all those who participated. We look forward to another successful quilt raffle and picnic next year.

Republicans support Margo Johnson

Editor:
The Charlevoix County Republican Committee is proud to endorse Margo A. Johnson as a candidate for Charlevoix Township Treasurer. Margo is a life-long conservative who has consistently shared the views of the Republican Party and is committed to her core values of personal responsibility, community involvement and conservative government.

Margo has a business education and extensive experience in industry in the U.S. and overseas. Her management responsibilities included leadership team roles in product development, marketing, sales, finance and human resources. This diverse background will be an asset to the Charlevoix Township Board.

Margo has shown commitment to the Charlevoix community through volunteer work with the Service Corps of Retired Executives and the American Red Cross blood services.

Her beliefs in strong local control and less "big government" at the state and national levels are an asset to the Republican Party and the entire Charlevoix community. Her candidacy as a Republican for public office is the ultimate demonstration of commitment to her beliefs and those of the Party.

The Charlevoix County Republican Committee values her willingness to stand up for her views and looks forward to working with her during her candidacy as the Charlevoix Township Treasurer.

Don't support Republicans

Editor:
I started my adult political life as a Republican and actually ran for office as one. In spite of leaving the party there were many Republicans I contributed to, supported and voted for.

Now I look at some of the things the Republicans have done while in office: Voted 100 percent against the first deficit reduction budget proposed in over a decade because it was proposed by President Bill Clinton. Promoted the expensive, protracted and unfruitful investigation of the totally irrelevant "Whitewater Affair" by a so-called independent counsel as a means of harassing Clinton. Caused the shutdown of the US government for the only time in history in an attempt to embarrass Clinton into adopting a budget which was contrary to the best interest of the country. Pried into the personal affairs of Clinton, and others, for the purpose of embarrassing them and then distributed the sordid story to fellow citizens of all ages and to the world at large.

Then on December 19, 1998, another day that will live in infamy, the Republican dominated House of Representatives, fraught with admitted adulterers and adulteresses, and containing numerous "lame ducks" in a petty partisan vitriolic act, contrary to the will of the people, voted to impeach President Clinton!

It is obvious that the Republicans put the welfare of their party ahead of the welfare of the country. It is time for that party to join its progenitor, the Whigs, so that a public spirited successor party can move into the role of service to our country and citizens. In order to encourage them to do so I have resolved to never contribute to, support or vote for another Republican so long as there is an "Impeachment Republican" in Congress!

Oleson's Market to expand its Charlevoix store in Jan.

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Oleson's Market has been a fixture in the Charlevoix community for some time, but longevity is not the only source of quality.

To give customers more quality, owner D. J. Oleson sees a need for updating at the Charlevoix location and will be expanding the store.

"Oleson's is a neighborhood store, it's close to everybody. The customers will have everything they need. Before, store items were hard to get to and tough to find, we were tight in some sections. Now they will have the opportunity to find everything they want," Oleson said.

"We are going to double the frozen food section, which we really need. We will also be expanding the deli/meat section, the produce and grocery space."

The existing building at the corner of Antrim and State streets is 29,880 square feet. Renovations to the store will offer shoppers an additional 1,470 square feet of retail space as well as some cosmetic changes.

"We plan to remodel the front end of the store and are doing some other general updating. We have done some small updates in the past, most recently four years ago in the dairy section," Oleson said.

In serving the needs of surrounding residents and visitors of Charlevoix, Oleson's has provided shoppers with comfortable, user friendly parking accommodations, he said. According to Oleson, these shoppers will continue to enjoy 86 "gracious" parking spaces.

"The parking lot will change in appearance, but the same amount of parking that exists now will remain. We are just reconfiguring the layout, adding landscape but not taking away spaces," Oleson said.

The proposed changes may alter the use of the facility somewhat as the store may no longer be used for residential purposes. Fire code requirements threaten to force Oleson to close the portion of the building currently being used for housing.

The fire code requires that a fire wall be constructed between the store room and the apartments.

"Those tenants will hopefully be able to remain. We are planning to present to the Fire Marshall plans for a sprinkling system in the back room to update fire safety," said Oleson.

According to Oleson construction which will bring about these additions may begin as early as January of 2001.

"We are hoping to do the project in two phases. This winter we will be starting phase one which included interior remodeling to start around January 1.

We will then take the summer off and will start phase two next fall by knocking down the front walls. We will hopefully not have to close the store down during either phase," Oleson said.

Doing business without promoting is like working in the dark — nobody knows how to find you when they need you.

Courier honored with five state press awards

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

The 2000 Michigan Press Association Better Newspaper Contest proved the Charlevoix Courier is a competitor among quality weekly news sources in various areas of coverage by honoring the paper with five awards recently.

"I think it (the contest) is a valuable resource for newspapers who want to improve their product," Courier Editor Jeremy McBain said.

The contest was split into four classes, each representing a given circulation range. The Courier falls into the class D category (circulation between 2,001 and 5,000) printing 2,700 papers each week. A second division distinguishes between a weekly news source, like the Courier, and daily newspapers.

According to the Michigan Press Association, when McBain captured the coronation moment of Charlevoix's Winterfest Queen he captured "great emotion." This photo to awarded him first place in the category of spot news picture.

B. J. Hetler, former Courier staff writer, also was recognized by the association for her handy work with a lens. B. J. took first place in the competition for best sports photo entitled "Rayders Repeat." The judges praised B. J.'s keen eye stating, "Great emotional moments — reader didn't need to be there to feel it thanks to this shot."

The Courier was not only honored for its camera-work, but its opinion pieces which fill the editorial section. Out of 17 entrants, McBain placed third with his award winning topic, "Chefs in the school kitchen" about the Charlevoix high school controversy. According to the judges, this editorial "tipped the scales."

The Courier's new look was also recognized by the judges. Of 21 entrants in the Class D Weekly grouping, the Courier took honorable mention in the prestigious category of General Excellence and second place in the category of design, where 10 other weeklies competed.

"I think this goes to show we are doing some great things at the Charlevoix Courier and providing a wonderful newspaper for the community," McBain said.

Courier General Manager Ken Winter added, "I'm real pleased with what (the Courier staff) have been able to do in just a short time. It says a lot for the staff and the community as well."

Beaver Island gets a visit from the Wellness Wagon

The Wellness Wagon, a mobile health outreach unit sponsored by the Northern Michigan Hospital Foundation, took to the waves recently on its first-ever trip to Beaver Island.

The wagon was transported to Beaver Island to be on hand for the Beaver Island Community Health and Safety Fair. The wagon also visited the Beaver Island Community School where nine fifth-grade students and 61 seventh-twelfth-grade students participated in health screenings.

More than 200 community residents turned out at the health fair for information and health screenings including blood pressure checks, weight and body composition measurement and blood testing which were offered on the Wellness Wagon.

"We were very well received. The island residents were great to work with. The people responsible for coordinating the event and the people from the Beaver Island Boat Company were efficient and really made us feel welcome," says Kathy Hodgkiss, coordinator for the Wellness Wagon.

The Beaver Island Boat Company transported the RV-sized Wellness Wagon to the island

free of charge aboard the Emerald Isle, which operates between Charlevoix and St. James. The company also transported a mobile mammography unit from the Barbara Ann Karmanos Cancer Institute to the island free of charge.

Karmanos, affiliated with Wayne State University, entered into an affiliation agreement with Northern Michigan Hospital in Petoskey earlier this year and provided mammograms as part of the health fair.

For more information about the Wellness Wagon, call the Community Health Education Center at (231) 487-7900.

Northwest Academy to expand and improve stage

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Northwest Academy, a charter school in its fifth year of operation, specializes in science and technology but, according to music and theater instructor/coordinator Gary Stutzman, the school will be seeing renovations that will open up a window for expanding into the arts.

"We will be adding an addition equipped with a stage area. We have talented students that would like to do musicals. The theater will provide a better rehearsal facility and help transition an additional focus on the arts. We need architectural plans to get approval," Stutzman said. "We have had to have band practice at a local church. So, we will also be working to get our music facility back in order. I want us to get back in the band room and to get the new area opened up and get use approval." According to Stutzman, a benefit of extracurricular interests, like theater, is the students gain a more broad cultural knowledge base from which to draw.

"I think that we need to have a program that will allow those students who want to seriously pursue the arts, an avenue through which they can work. Musical experience is important in self-fulfillment; it adds what the students don't get in the classroom. It helps develop the student's self-esteem; they feel good about being part of something successful," said Stutzman.

Regardless of the benefits expansion would bring, the project is a substantial financial undertaking and these changes are contingent upon gathering funding.

"Each student has a dollar amount allotted by the state. Our budget is dictated by the number of students we have. This money from the state goes towards materials and hiring teachers. Anything in addition takes outside funding. We've done some small things to kick off the project," he said.

Currently the school has approximately $4,000 in the bank now and the facility can be built for about $60,000. To help raise this money, the school is looking for individuals who believe in what it is doing and is also getting grants, Stutzman said.

Hemingway Society hosts writing contest

In conjunction with the Michigan Hemingway Society's annual fall conference in Petoskey, North Central Michigan College is calling for entries in a writing contest.

Writers are asked not to parody Hemingway, but to create their own original work of not more than 3,000 words.

Manuscripts are to be double-spaced and pages numbered. The author's name is to appear only on a cover sheet. Entries will not be returned.

Faculty at North Central Michigan College will judge entries, and reserves the right to accept or reject any submitted work. The winner will be invited to read his or her entry at the welcome reception for the MHS fall conference and the selected work will be published on the MHS website: www.northquest.com/hemingway.

A cash prize of $25 will be awarded at the discretion of the juror.

Deadline for entries is Oct. 15. Please send work to: Dr. Chris Picard, North Central Michigan College, 1515 Howard Street, Petoskey, MI 49770 Attn: Writing Contest.

YOUR HEALTH

Coping with the common cold

Melodie Brown, M.D.

'To your health'

Oh, the glorious sounds of fall - "Sniff, sniff...snort, snort...ah-choo, hack."

You're surrounded, and soon you too, will join the chorus. You first notice congestion and a sore throat. A few hours later you start sneezing, your nose starts to "run," and you have a fever, headache, muscle aches, and cough. A few days later your nasal secretions become thick and green. You finally start to feel better after two weeks of suffering.

Sound familiar? Cold symptoms bring many people to the doctor's office. With a little understanding of the cause and remedies, most common colds can be managed just as well at home.

Colds are caused by viruses. There are hundreds of viruses that cause the common cold. Children may have as many as eight to ten colds a year. Colds usually occur early fall to spring.

People with colds transfer their viruses everywhere by coughing, sneezing and touching things. Others can then "catch" a cold by touching something with the virus on its surface, and then touching their nose, eyes, or mouth. It is important to wash your hands often and not touch your face, especially when around others with a cold. There is no proof that being cold, getting wet, not eating properly or being tired or stressed has anything to do with catching a cold.

Colds usually last from two to seven days. Most people will improve by day ten, but the cough and runny nose may linger for more than two weeks. As a cold lingers, it is normal for clear nasal mucus to turn yellow or green as the cells and bacteria that normally live in the nose are shed into the secretions. It doesn't mean you need antibiotics.

Antibiotics that work against bacteria do not work against the common cold. There is no good "cure" except time.

"Cold medicines" will not make the cold go away faster, but they may help with some of the symptoms. Tylenol or ibuprofen will lower the fever and help with some of the aches and pains. Decongestants or antihistamines may be of some help with a runny nose, but decongestant nose sprays should not be used for more than 3 days.

Try rinsing your nasal passages with salt water to remove excess mucus. Buy saline nasal solution or make your own. Add a quarter teaspoon of table salt to one cup of warm water. Mix well in a clean squeeze bottle. Squirt the salt water into each nostril for several seconds three or four times a day.

Cough drops or throat sprays may improve a sore throat. Sometimes gargling with warm salt water helps. Soft, cold foods, such as ice cream and Popsicles, are often easier to eat.

Most people feel better if they rest and drink a lot of clear fluids. Using a cool mist vaporizer may also improve congestion. There is no scientific proof that vitamin C can prevent or treat a cold.

Why not just give everyone antibiotics? Antibiotics have a small risk of causing an allergic reaction, upset stomach or diarrhea. A more serious problem is that bacteria can become resistant to antibiotics if they are used too frequently. Then antibiotics wouldn't be able to cure illnesses. To prevent this, doctors try to prescribe them only when they will help.

Occasionally, a cold leads to other infections that will need to be treated. Call your doctor's office if you have prolonged symptoms, severe throat, ear or facial pain, shortness of breath, or other symptoms that concern you.

Township fights urban sprawl

This is a win-win solution available in the dilemma people are facing in Charlevoix. The majority of people would agree that they want to keep open space intact and that they need to allow for new schools."

Wilson and the conservancy, a key organization in the Peninsula Township program, offers insight into the issue as this concept surfaces locally.

"Peninsula Township is one of the leaders in farmland preservation. In 1994 the township residents voted a millage in which allowed for the levying of property taxes to fund the purchasing of development rights. There are a lot of funding sources that are potential avenues through which to fund the program including both public and private sources. The key is to have a properly established program," Wilson said.

According to Wilson, steps were taken to ensure community support was strong enough to sustain the program. Purchasing development rights requires funding, and the governmental body, in this case the Marion Township Planning Commission, must target a source for that funding.

In effect, the people who rally for preservation legislation have voted in a millage which would allow for such a program to thrive.

"(In Peninsula) they established the program and established unanimous public support through people voting to tax themselves. They put themselves in a position to receive substantial federal and state funding. The Conservancy (Grand Traverse) worked with private families and foundations to raise an additional five million dollars in support," Wilson explained.

Jim Young, Marion Township Planning Commission attorney sees a possible future in such a program and outlined four specific steps which could cover the bases and possibly result in a balanced, successful program.

"If the township goal is to protect the rural character and minimize development to the maximum extent possible, four pieces are needed: a package including both a plan and a method through which to carry out the plan, a well-written, thoughtful zoning ordinance and a land use plan that clearly articulates the goals of your community and a careful evaluation of infrastructure," Young said.

This is a final process which binds the development rights of the current land owner and the development rights of future owners.

The property can be sold or passed on but the deed restriction remains in place. According to Wilson some flexibility does exist in the agreement.

"The PDR allows for a broad range of agricultural uses, forest management and other resource uses. The PDR attempts to eliminate uses that are structural and alter the land itself; e.g. houses and roads that diminish the conservation value of the property," Wilson said.

"There is also flexibility in the agreement written with a long-term vision, so the holder of the easement (the conservation, township or state) is not infringing on everyday management of the farm. The changing nature of agriculture as a business is understood. The agreement is tailored to be a win, win situation," he added.

Some may see this concept unfruitful because the development value of land generally far exceeds the agricultural value. As Young pointed out adequate compensation has to be provided for in order to make this attractive to potential participants.

"Fair compensation is an issue. They are giving up something of value; in turn they are entitled to be fairly compensated," said Young.

In many cases this compensation can arrive in the form of cash. The program has also proven in some cases to be a tax write-off option. If the farmer is well-off and chooses to donate his/her development rights this value could act as a tax deduction. In this case, the value of the gift is measured by the difference in the fair market value prior to the donation minus the value after the donation.

Wilson also highlighted the success of the purchasing of development rights program in place in Peninsula township.

"I think it is another tool that can be used in a growing community to help manage growth. It's a great program. The result has been approximately 3,000 acres of scenic, prime and unique agricultural land has been forever preserved along with an additional 1,000 acres of more open space, wildlife habitats and natural lands. This is 4,000 acres forever preserved for public benefit," Wilson said.

In response to the ruling, Doty reiterated that Inman was fired due to a restructuring of the office to make the department more efficient, that continues to this day. He added he was also glad this trial was over, saying a weight has been lifted from his shoulders and now he and the building department can concentrate on doing their jobs.

On the charges of a "good ol' boy network," he said, "The good ol' boy network is not allowed to be used in this department. We treat everyone the same."

Doty also addressed the charges Inman made against him and the county in November 1998 and the recent ruling.

"From what we, meaning I, did with the information that we found and investigated, it was done thoroughly. Both before, and after, we feel, along with the prosecuting attorney's office and the state, we didn't knowingly, intentionally or deliberately do anything wrong," he said.

Inman's $150,000 award is broken down as follows: $30,000 was for past damages, $30,000 for outrage and $30,000 a year for the next three years. She had sought $500,000 in compensation for lost wages, lost pension benefits and damages.

The county's insurance is expected to cover this cost.

In November of 1998, Inman reported to the state that an electrical inspector for the county, James Easley, was inspecting the work of Easley Electric, a company he is affiliated with. The state and county investigated this charge.

Easley was allowed to remain an inspector, but because of this, the county drafted new policies and created a partnership with Antrim County for building inspections. Basically, Antrim County electrical inspectors will inspect any building projects associated with Easley and Charlevoix County will inspect any projects where Antrim's inspectors may have a conflict.

Sometime after the report in December, Inman discovered her work hours were being changed in the building department. According to testimony, she went into Doty's office and said she would not work those hours.

Shortly after, Doty fired Inman, stating he wanted to restructure the office. Inman claimed it was because she had reported the department to the state.

Testimony that may have been the most damaging to Doty and the county in their case, were notes Doty had made prior to a meeting with his staff on Dec. 15.

According to the notes submitted to the court by Inman's attorney Grant W. Parsons of Traverse City, Doty told his staff he would not accept them "going behind" his back to commissioners with letters, conversation or usurping his authority. He further stated, according to the notes, "I own this department, whether you like it or not. Any problems, information, will come to me and only me. If I get wind of information, rumors, secondhand, the (county) commissioners have given me the authority to do as I choose."

According to those notes, Doty could give staff members days off without pay or dismiss them. Doty also told his staff members if they had family or friends working on building projects in the county, they had better have a permit.

"I will not allow anything to jeopardize this department," Doty's notes stated.

In an interview with the Charlevoix Courier, Doty said this staff meeting was not directed at Inman, but was addressing some problems he was having with staff members going over his head or not giving him needed information.

"When those things happen, aren't those acts of insubordination? I believe some people misinterpret or hear what they want to hear. People misinterpret a lot of things. This is a good department. You can stack this department up against any other department in the state," he said.

"The staff we have here is a very dedicated staff. For the tools and resources that have been made available to us, I believe we have done an excellent job. We will not make everyone happy, but we will do the best we can," Doty added.

As for Doty's future with the department, he said, "I am here as long as I want to be. I know if I'm not doing the job they want me to do, I will do something else."

Public hearing on sex education to be given Oct. 9

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

A second public hearing will take place Oct. 9 at the 7 p.m. school board meeting to discuss the proposed implementation of a comprehensive five week sex education program titled "Sex Can Wait" for seventh and eighth grade students of Charlevoix Middle School.

"The program is abstinence based for those children not lucky enough to have a dialogue with their parents. This can give factual information and open up dialogue with parents. We emphasize that parents are the best source of information," said Charlevoix Public Schools Nurse Sue Dixon.

Statistics record that in Charlevoix eight incidences of school-age parents were accounted for in 1999 — that number rose from two cases recorded in 1998. This increase reveals there may be a need for greater discourse in schools surrounding sexual relations.

A grant from the Michigan Abstinence Partnership was awarded to the Charlevoix Middle School to fund an after school alternative activity program titled, "Instead Club." However, the grant was contingent upon the implementation of 10 hours of abstinence-based human growth and reproduction classes to be administered to seventh and eighth grade students.

The sessions are divided into three focus areas: Knowing myself, relating to others and planning my future. Knowing myself focuses on the enhancement of self-esteem, offers factual information of male and female reproductive anatomy and physiology, briefly explains the changes of puberty and guides decision making. Relating to others is a communication based lesson set. Planning my future then interlocks the two aforementioned concepts linking values, decisions, behaviors and how these aspects of life can direct life outcomes.

"It (the Sex Can Wait program) helps students develop the skills to say no. It teaches them ways to approach their parents. It is supposed to make them feel good about themselves and to teach them not everyone is doing it, that's a fallacy. Lots of focus on good communication skills," Dixon said.

If the meeting Oct. 9 goes well the new program will be on the November school board agenda for approval.

Pending approval, students will be instructed in the three step process during an afternoon class period. Parents may choose to opt-out, in which case their student would not receive the instruction.

Venetian barge to be stored off of Ferry Beach for winter

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

At a meeting of the Charlevoix City Council Sept. 18 it was agreed that in the off-season the Venetian Board would be permitted to park its 70-year-old, 32 by 100 foot barge — used as a fireworks platform — off of Ferry beach.

Concerns surrounding the location of the barge were raised by council members who questioned the implementation of safety features including lighting to ensure features would alert snowmobilers of its whereabouts.

"We are going to light it for safety purposes as it may relate to snowmobile season. Appropriate signage will also mark the site advising people the barge is off limits. We don't want to create a safety hazard of any nature," said Venetian Board President Dan Barron.

When council members asked Barron about the location of the barge he responded that a free-standing approach would be more logical than nestling the barge closer to the pier.

Both council and the Venetian board saw just cause for the free standing status of the barge, saying if it were to be parked closer to the pier the possibility of curious passersby investigating the vessel increases.

The Venetian Board hoped to see the barge parked at Ferry Beach during winter months as a long-term accommodation, but were granted their request on an at will basis — the barge is to be removed at any time upon request by the city.

The Venetian Board will benefit from the new storage agreement both financially and in terms of convenience. Transportation and storage costs associated with hauling the barge back and forth to Beaver Island, where the barge historically has been stored, total $5,500 annually.

According to Barron, the Venetian Board welcomes the financial accommodations afforded by the city.

"The community would benefit in further financially supporting the Venetian Festival by saving our out of pocket expense. We can use the additional funds to finance other activities," said Barron.

Finalizing plans to dock the barge during winter months at the Ferry Beach site have been slowed pending permits from both the Department of Environmental Quality and the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers.

If these permits are issued the barge will be in the southwest beach area, north of the pier.

Homecoming called a success, new king and queen crowned

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Homecoming festivities came to an end after a week-long celebration during which time Charlevoix High School students performed goofy displays of high school spirit, strutted their stuff in elaborate evening threads and dolled out an old-fashioned butt-kicking at Kipke Field.

"Everything turned out well. The weather was super and assisting in the festivities was fun. We saw some great goofy games and lip-synchs. I was pleased. It was a positive school experience," said Gail Cherry, Charlevoix High School career prep coordinator.

As the fierce varsity Rayder football players filed into the locker room with a 21-0 lead at the half over the Kalkaska Blazers out came the 2000 homecoming court. The 2000 homecoming coronation crowned Ben VanGuilder and Katie Yager king and queen of Charlevoix High School.

Ben is the royal offspring of Dennis and Dianne VanGuilder. He had to take off his football helmet in favor of his crown. Ben is co-captain of the Rayder team who he has played for all four years at the high school. Ben is an all-season sports buff who takes to the track in the spring and showed his stuff on the basketball court for two years. Scholastically, Ben is a member of the National Honor Society and the Spanish Club. Ben has also helped direct his fellow students for the past three years as a member of the student council.

Katie Yager is the daughter of Mark and Deborah Yager. As a cheerleader for the skilled Rayder football team, Katie had to drop her pom-poms in favor of a bouquet of roses. A mitt can also be found on Katie's hand in the spring — she has played on the softball team for three years. Katie is treasurer of the National Honor Society and also sits on the student council with her king.

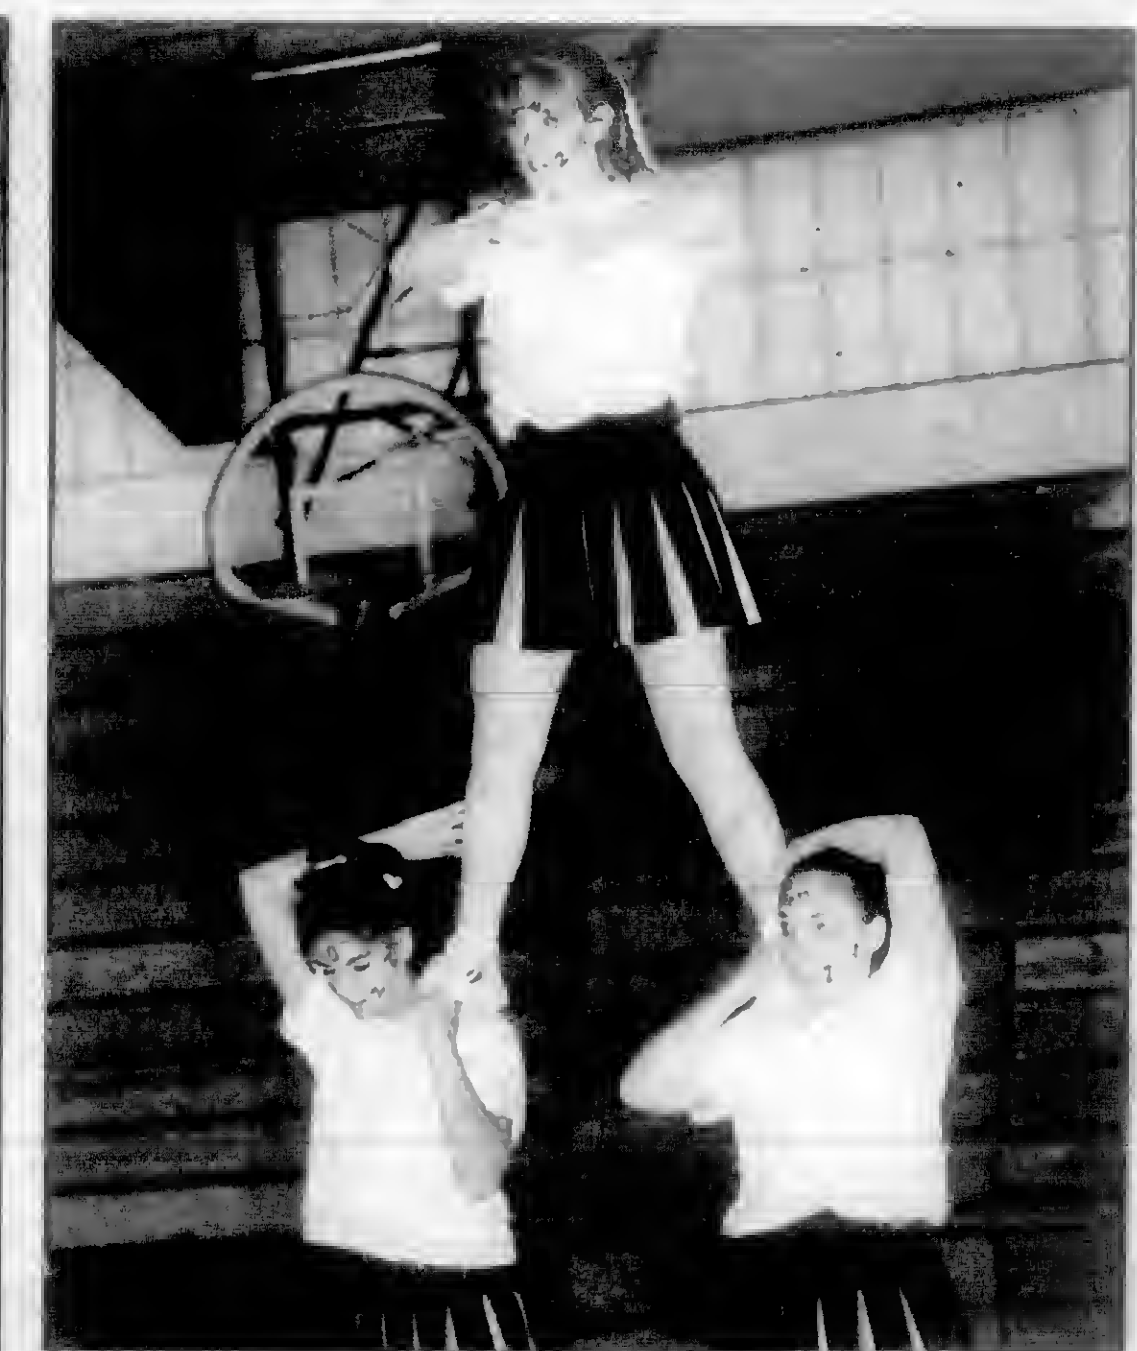

Following the football team shut out, the post game pizza party celebration began. The pizza party was a hit regardless of high winds that canceled the bonfire that was scheduled to accompany the munch fest.

Businesses could benefit from Benson's consultations

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

Former Downtown Development Coordinator for the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce from 1995 to 1997 and experienced management consultant, Rodney Benson, is back in town.

Benson is bringing his Ann Arbor based consulting company, The Benson Group, to Charlevoix to help local businesses.

"Basically if somebody says, 'I need to get this job done and I don't have the time or staff.' That person would call me and I would do the detailed planning and put together a management plan. It can be anything from a small event to a major program," he said.

Benson said his firm is very broad based and can cover a multitude of different activities a business in Charlevoix will face.

Besides being a former downtown coordinator in Charlevoix, Benson helped create convention and visitors bureaus in Kalamazoo and Boulder, Rodney Benson will use his many years of experience to help your business become successful.

Colo., was president and chief executive officer of the chambers of commerce in Kalamazoo, Ann Arbor and Boulder, Colo. and owned and operated the Benson House Bed and Breakfast in Petoskey.

Benson's future plans for the consulting firm are for it to grow.

"I hope to spin-off some small specialty firms under the umbrella of The Benson Group," he said.

Crisis response team forms in Charlevoix, Emmet counties

Charlevoix and Emmet counties recently announced the formation of the North Bays Crisis Response Team.

This team is comprised of trained volunteers who respond to a group or community request for help resulting from a traumatic event.

Trauma occurs when an individual or group are exposed to events involving actual or threatened death or serious injury to the physical integrity of self or others.

Individuals may react to trauma physically, emotionally or cognitively. Physically they may exhibit nausea, tremors, chills, headaches, sleep disturbances, fatigue or a rapid heart rate. Emotionally they may respond with fear, guilt, grief, irritability, anger, numbness, feeling isolated or feeling lost. Cognitively they may respond with confusion, poor memory, intrusive images, disoriented, inability to make decisions or solve problems.

The team suggests these reactions are normal reactions by a normal person to an abnormal situation. These reactions can take on a life of their own and render the person helpless. Research has shown that these reactions can be mitigated and the person returned to normal functioning sooner if they are provided with an opportunity to discuss the circumstances around the traumatic event. This is called debriefing.

When an organization or group's functioning is impaired with fear, withdrawal, confusion and helplessness a debriefing assists personnel returning to normalcy.

The team focuses on groups and assists them in developing healthy connections with those who have also been traumatized.

It meets with individuals directly affected allowing them to share their reactions and concerns. The emphasis is on helping a group of individuals return to full functioning as quick as possible.

Debriefings are most effective when they are held within 72 hours of the event.

The team consists of medical and emergency personnel, school educators, social workers, psychologists and clergy.

This team may be contacted by calling Northern Michigan Community Mental Health at (231) 547-5885 and asking for John Thorp.

Girls' basketball team takes first place spot in league

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

After winning a series of games last week, the Charlevoix girls' varsity basketball team has taken the top spot in the Lake Michigan Conference.

Charlevoix's winning streak last week started Sept. 26 in a 77-43 victory over Harbor Springs at home.

The leading players for the team were: Leslie Hoffman with 24 points, 11 assists and 13 steals; Danielle Vogelheim with 21 points; Meghan Vogel with eight points — Vogel was taken out of the game with an injury — and Jennifer McClellan with eight points and six assists.

According to Coach Jason Otter, regardless of losing a valuable point-maker such as Vogel to an injury, Charlevoix's remaining players stepped up their play against East Jordan Sept. 28 to win 80-53.

Leading the scoring for the game were: Hoffman with 33 points, eight rebounds, seven assists and 15 steals; McClellan with 13 points and eight assists; Kelly Ward with 11 points and 12 boards; Kathryn Ricks and Vogelheim each with six points.

"The (team) has developed a winning mentality when they step on the floor," Otter said. "When the game starts, they get after people defensively."

Otter said he was particularly happy with the playing of Ashley Ager, Ricks and Ward in the East Jordan game.

The Rayders faced Traverse City St. Francis last night at home. The results of this game were not available before press-time.

Rayders soccer team loses to Harbor

Harbor Springs took advantage early on a defensive lapse and two corner kicks to defeat the Charlevoix varsity soccer team Sept. 25 at Harbor Springs, 5-0.

"The Rams beat us to the ball in critical situations and took advantage of a strong first half wind to take the season series," Coach Tom Conlan said.

Charlevoix managed nine shots on the Harbor keeper.

Even with the loss, many Rayders put forth some great efforts. Conlan said Charlevoix junior Jason Haas stopped eleven shots on the Rayder goal.

He added freshman Bryce Daly is improving with each game and kept Charlevoix out of trouble on several occasions. Charlevoix also received strong play from Roscoe Serrels, John Curtis and John Dimartino, Conlan said.

"Harbor beat us to the ball; our young but improving team needs to take lessons away from each game and keep their heads up, their time will come," he said.

Charlevoix shuts out Kalkaska in homecoming win Sept. 29

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

The Charlevoix varsity football team gave Rayder fans a perfect homecoming victory Sept. 29 by beating Kalkaska 42-0.

"I thought we played very well defensively. This was the first shutout in at least four years," Coach Todd Klinger said. "Kalkaska didn't cross the mid-field line until 9 minutes in the game."

Klinger added, while the team's defense looked great, the offense made a few mistakes they will need to work on.

"Fortunately, we were playing good defense," Klinger said.

However, the offense was able to take advantage of its variety of strong running and passing skills throughout the game. Using this balance, Klinger said, the Charlevoix is able to keep teams off-balance throughout the game.

Klinger was unable to really point out players that stood out in this game, saying the win was a "total team effort."

"Six different people scored touchdowns and the (players) substantial playing time," Klinger said. Everyone on the team received some playing time, he added.

Touchdowns were made by: Ben Coen in the first quarter; Ryan Leitner and Ryan Rafacz in the second quarter; Ben VanGuilder in the third quarter and Troy Smith and Chad Mackowiak in the fourth quarter. All of the extra points were kicked by Smith.

Leitner was the leading rusher with 14 carries for 91 yards, Smith had nine carries for 58 yards, Mackowiak had five carries for 50 yards and Coen had seven carries for 30 yards.

The leading passer was Jeremiah Teuscher, who completed 11 out of 16 passes for 160 yards. The leading receiver was Rafacz with 8 catches for 121 yards, followed by VanGuilder who had two catches for 19 yards.

On the defense, there was a tie for the most tackles between Kyle Louiselle and Brian Cleary. Both of them had nine tackles.

The Rayders will face Elk Rapids High School Friday in Elk Rapids. Charlevoix's current record is 4-2 overall and 3-1 in the league.

Golf team stays undefeated

After winning their match against Kalkaska, 165-179, Sept. 26 the Charlevoix varsity golf team remains undefeated in the conference.

"Going undefeated in conference play gives us a big advantage going into the conference championship..." Coach Jim Glynn said.

The conference championship match was last night at A-Ga-Ming golf course in Antrim County. Results of this match were unavailable before press-time.

"This was the best all around round we've had all year. All six players scored well," Glynn said about the Sept. 26 match. "The team seems to be peaking at the right time."

Taking the low score was David Shearer with a 39. He was followed by Nick Cole with 41, Jordan Nystrom with 42 and Chris Smith with 43. Craig Siwarga and Allen Brooks scored 44.

Cold weather and strong wind give racers a chill

A. Nony Mouse

'Yachting notes'

The downwind spinnaker legs were not too bad but the beat to windward chilled to the bone!

A strong 15-knot breeze added to the 7-knot boat speed combined with 40 degree temperatures to yield an awesome wind chill factor near zero.

Basic Transportation, leading the way to the first mark, had great photo-ops with close quarters tacking duels and the beauty of skillfully sailed close-hauled speed demons.

TOO RECKLESS broke the one-hour mark with an elapsed time of only 0:59:30 with FIRST DATE right on her tail. HUSSY, SWINE FLEW and JUBBLES rounded out the top five — all finished within less than 1 minute after RECKLESS! The closest was the two-second gap between SWINE and JUBBLES.

A couple minutes later, SUPERFLUOUS led the rest of the J-22 Fleet across the line. Then it was HIGH MAINTENANCE, CRAZY HORSE, PALEFACE LITE, GECKO, THUNDERSTRUCK and HOG-TIDE, in that order.

GOTCHA wrapped up her third straight win in the Big Boats of Division 1 with KAMIKAZE and BLASEN IV well back.

CYGNUS did the trick on ORIGINAL SIN in the P-26 Fleet but by only 22 seconds. JESSE did not start.

Again, FLASH crossed the line well ahead of the rest of the JAM Fleet and saved her time over BALD EAGLE by less than two minutes. HIGH SEAS did not show.

A quick look at the standings at the halfway point of the Fall Series, not recognizing the one drop that will be allowed:

Division 1: GOTCHA 3, KAMIKAZE 6 and BLASEN IV 9.

Division 2: M 3 is the only entry and will be re-scored in Div. 1.

P-26 Fleet: ORIGINAL SIN 4, CYGNUS 6 and JESSE 9.

JAM Fleet: FLASH 4, BALD

EAGLE 7, SLAPSHOT 11(?) and HIGH SEAS 14.

J-22 Fleet: RECKLESS 4, HUSSY 9, SWINE FLEW 10, SUPERFLUOUS 16, FIRST DATE 18, HIGH MAINTENANCE 21, CRAZY HORSE 22, GECKO 27, JUBBLES 30, PALEFACE LITE 32, ROCK STEADY 34, HOG-TIDE 35, HS MOISTURE MISILE 37, THUNDERSTRUCK 39 and HABANERO.

Alive and Well in Harbor Springs

Well, here it is ... my first letter to the editor. I'm 49 and have never had the need to write until now. This is a Thank You letter, e simple, yet not so simple letter. This is the most important letter that I have ever penned. So here we go -

I would like you all to picture yourself in a large room with windows. OK, got it? Now picture at the end of the room is Death - yes, the real Death - and that monster is looking out the window so you feel safe. Now picture yourself in a hospital emergency room trying to survive a heart attack. The room is small, bright, clean and the hospital staff is working very hard trying to save your life. You are in the bed with tubes, monitors, oxygen, and patches all over your chest and things are not going well. You look to your right and you see that monster Death and Death is so close to you that you are touching, but there is nothing you can do. Well, through the grace of God, the magic of a skilled and caring hospital staff and maybe just good old dumb luck, I made it through. I must say that when Death has looked deep into your soul, it simply changes you.

Now, as I said, this is a Thank You letter and for me it is from the heart. I want to say a sincere Thanks to the police officers in Harbor Springs, to the ambulance staff, to all of the dedicated emergency room docs and staff, the surgeons, all of the nurses; I want to say Thank You to all of the people at Northern Michigan Hospital who were involved with my case and my recovery. Quite simply, I want to Thank you all for saving my life.

Castle foreclosed at auction

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Time ran out on Kim Reibel, heir of the Reibel estate, when on Oct. 5 at the Charlevoix County Court-house the historic site of Castle Farms was sold to Linda Muller of Long Beach, Miss. for $300,000 in a foreclosure sale.

"Our client was not able to post the required bond so the injunction never took effect and there was nothing further we could do to stop the sale. We are left now to consider finding the necessary funds to redeem the property," Gregory DeGraff, attorney for the Reibel Family Trust, said.

Judge Pajtas' September ruling, granting the Reibel Family Trust preliminary injunction, required the trust to raise a $148,530.72 bond. The sizable amount of the bond reflected the $85,000 mortgage on the Castle Farms property and interest which has since mounted owed by the late Art Reibel to the mortgage lender, Fred Taylor and F.B.T. Enterprises.

Taylor called for the foreclosure sale in order to collect on this outstanding debt. Taylor himself represented the only other bid presented in the sale — he submitted his figure based on the amount he claims was owed to him by the trust, $178,071.

According to Don Schneider, Deputy Sheriff of Charlevoix County who handled the sale, the $300,000 bid will be split by the trust and Taylor. The amount due is given to the mortgage holder and the remaining funds from the sale go to the trust.

However, the 38 acre parcel located off of M-66 is not yet under the ownership of Muller. During the six month redemption period allowed in foreclosure proceedings the Reibel Family Trust can redeem the property.

Valerie Barnes of Joseph, Corcoran, Telgenhof and Barnes, the firm employed to handle foreclosure proceedings, explained the outcome of the afternoon's proceedings.

"The title will not vest until after the six month redemption period. During this six month period the Reibel Family Trust has the absolute right to redeem the property," she said.

However, costs associated with redeeming the property include the $300,000 purchasing price, plus any other costs Muller incurred like transfer of title and recording fees.

Charlevoix hosts Apple Festival this weekend

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

This weekend area apple growers will be loading East Park with delectable homemade treats and 30 varieties of apples, heightening the senses of Twenty-first Annual Apple Festival celebrants.

Apple Fest fun is scheduled to kick-off Friday at noon and continue until dusk. Saturday core crunching will start even earlier — the downtown market is scheduled to open at 9 a.m. and shops will be shut down at dusk. Sunday hours will run from noon until dusk.

Both Friday and Saturday there will be a unique opportunity to see Charlevoix from an old-fashioned perspective by taking advantage of free carriage rides provided by Cedar Valley Farms leaving from Park Avenue. The carriage rides are available from 2-8 p.m.

Ambitious folks looking to do some early Christmas shopping can browse craft booths showcasing assorted goods.

While making your way downtown to marvel at the vendors harvests and to grab a hold of crafty stuff you'll breathe in the aroma of freshly made cinnamon doughnuts that permeates the air from Friske Orchards.

Proposal One puts voters in the middle of voucher battle

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

ELECTION 2000

Voters in Michigan will vote on the fate of funding for some school districts in Michigan.

Proposal One, to appear on the November general election ballot, is a three part education reform bill which in part seeks to implement a voucher program in an effort to bring these districts up to speed.

"In some school districts, schools are failing to educate kids. There are a handful of schools where 200,000 students are trapped (Detroit, Inkster.) Proposal One would empower parents with a voucher worth one half of the state average, which is $6,600, so the voucher would be worth $3,300. Parents can use the voucher at a non-public school alternative," Ed Patru deputy communications director for Kids First!

Yes!, the campaign behind the passage of proposal one said. The voucher system claims to allow parents of students in low-performing school districts (graduation rate of 66 percent and less,) a choice. However, the program has also come under great scrutiny as some feel it will cause greater decay of the public school system, funneling public funds to private hands.

"We are against Proposal One because we don't think public dollars should be used for private schools. I think we are looking at a situation where money would be taken from public schools and put towards private schools and one in which tax payers could be forced to shoulder the burden of both public and private school systems through the tax system," Laura Wotruba, media specialist for All Kids First said.

But, Patru claims that a tax increase would not result, but rather that a surplus exists in educational funding which far exceeds the cost of the program.

Those, like Patru who take a pro-voucher stance focus in on the ability of competition to produce the most qualified and polished product.

Believers in the voucher system hold that regulations instituted by legislators have not dramatically improved the state of affairs in public education and that perhaps incentive based reform, in which case schools must compete for students, would improve the face of public education.

"One of the powers of vouchers is that the program empowers parents with the choice to send their child to an alternative school. Once vouchers were introduced in Milwaukee many students left the public schools so schools responded — they re-negotiated teacher contracts so that tenure didn't matter as much as results, instituted a new curriculum and the schools started calling parents at home asking them what they think," Patru said.

Candidates oppose vouchers

ELECTION 2000

Andy Neumann, currently holding the seat of state representative to the 106th district and his opposition in the November general election, Republican Francis Flanders both take an anti-voucher stance and foresee similar outcomes if Proposal One passes.

Proponents of Proposal One argue competition will lead to a high level of excellence in education. However, both Neumann and Flanders see the future of the voucher system not as a building block in education, but rather a wrecking ball.

"Just because McDonald's moves to town doesn't make other restaurants have better food. Saving money and cutting corners in education leads to a second-class education and ends up costing more in the long-run," Neumann criticized.

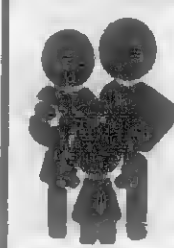

According to Flanders the benefits of the proposed system are outweighed by a heavy load of costs.

"I don't think this (a voucher program) is something we want to do. We have a wonderful education system in Michigan, too good to destroy it with a voucher program. Some kids may be better off with this program but so many would fall through the cracks," Flanders said.

"In marginal public schools that are eligible for vouchers the better students will come out, the school will lose funding and the rest of the kids will fall through the cracks. Income would be taken away from the existing public school system," he added.

OPINIONS

Vouchers are bad for state's public schools

Out of all the issues in this year's election, Proposal 1 is the one issue we can say we are solidly against.

Proposal 1 would create educational vouchers to be used in the state of Michigan. These vouchers would allow students in some school districts to take the tax money their family would normally pay to the public school and use it to pay some of the tuition of a private or parochial school.

This type of school choice looks like a nice idea on its face, but the body of this plan hides a hideous reality.

The biggest problem with this plan is the vouchers would take needed money out of school districts, doing further damage to public schools. Voucher proponents say that this idea will create better schools by fostering competition, but it just doesn't seem logical that taking money away from public schools will make them better.

Plus, we are talking about taxpayer money that normally goes to public schools that now is being used to fund a private or parochial school. Think about it: Taxpayer money will be used to help fund a private entity or a religious institution — a direct violation of the separation of church and state.

Sure, there are many religious groups and schools supporting

ELECTION 2000

Proposal 1. They can make money from it.

The voucher proposal is also very unfair to public schools.

Public schools must abide by several testing standards, the Open Meetings Act, Freedom of Information Act and several other laws designed to allow the public the ability to watch over their school district. Private and parochial schools do not.

Even though taxpayer money would be helping to fund the school under the voucher proposal, parents sending their children to private and parochial schools do not have the right to view school testing records, attendance records, funding records or even attend meetings of school administrators. They have this right with public schools.

Public schools also must allow any child living in the school district to attend. Private and parochial schools can be choosy and deny certain children access to their schools, even though they will be receiving some taxpayer money.

The bottom line is Proposal 1 is not the way to improve our public schools. Vote No on Proposal 1.

Vote like you bet on a horse race for this year's elections

Roger Knutson

'Ear to the ground'

The problem of the month is who to vote for.

To the committed partisan, there isn't any problem, but for that great mass of "undecideds," that every candidate is courting, what to do? I was genuinely puzzled until someone said of the presidential contest, "It looks like a real horse race."

Suddenly, how to solve the problem of voting became clear. Just as in any other horse race, you don't want to find yourself backing a loser. But how do you choose the winner before betting? You could bet on the horse with the best odds of winning, but what if they have about the same odds of winning? You could look at the ancestry of the horse and hope it has performed in other similar races, but who has time for that sort of study?

Do what you would do at the track. Look at the names of the horses and bet on the most appealing name: the name that speaks to you; the name with the hidden meaning.

For example: If two horses, Winner Takes All and Stuck In The Mud, are at equal odds, which one are you going to bet on? If you bet on Stuck In The Mud, you are an uncharacteristic better. Let's just see how choosing by the most meaningful name might work out in the coming elections, especially if they are real political horse races.

I'm a botanist, a plant person, so the top of the ticket seems easy. Bush sounds better than Gore. But, then again, I'm a hunter and fisherman — catch and eat is my motto — so I'm comfortable with Gore.

Bush sounds sort of like camouflage, but Gore might be better in those life or death situations. Maybe I'll have to toss a coin on that one. Possibly the potential vice president's names will help.

Lieberman and Cheney. Lieby in German is love or affection, and maybe we have had enough of a loverman. Cheney is no better with the images of bondage, chains and whips coming to mind.

You can see how well the method of most appealing names works.

The Michigan races can be approached the same way: Neumann or Flanders. New man sounds right for someone who is just starting out, but he's the incumbent. Flanders just doesn't sound substantial enough for a legislator.

Let's look at the congressional race. Bart Stupak wouldn't have a chance for the name picker's vote if he were running against anyone other than Chuck Yob. How could you be serious about either of those names showing up in the papers for the next two years?

Stabenow and Abraham — almost have to go with Abraham on that one, unless you remember what his biblical namesake almost did to Isaac, which sounds a lot like Stabenow.

Looking at the names really seems to help doesn't it?

Maybe there is a better way. Maybe we should all find out as much real information as possible about the candidates before the election and make a reasonable choice in each case — Nah, that's too much to expect.

Seriously folks, voting is an important business and the undecideds must choose with as much information as they can accumulate.

Personally, I won't have any problem. I am an unashamed Democrat; always have been. Something to do with the Great Depression and Roosevelt.

For the rest of you, feel free to use the name method. It probably works as well for elections as it does picking winners at the race track.

Letters to the editor

Reasons for change

Editor:

In an effort to stimulate thought, encourage debate and increase voter participation, I offer my reasons on why I will vote for change.

I know character does matter. I was disgusted to see Eagle Scouts booed while leading the Pledge of Allegiance at the Democrat party convention. I don't confuse rational thought with emotion. I know truth is not subjective. I cannot bring myself to believe a proven liar. I know who really invented the Internet. I know reading the Bible is not extremism. I know that headless birth abortion is infanticide. I know moral relativism is an oxymoron. I know the difference between tolerance and acceptance. I know people are more important than endangered insects. I know independence is better than dependency. I know that nothing is ever free. I refuse to be bribed with my own tax dollars. I know the government cannot give me anything without first taking it from someone else. I know taking money from one person to give to another is theft. I know a government powerful enough to give me everything I want can also take it all away. I know guns are the best burglary insurance. I do not envy success or wish to punish it. I know unity cannot be achieved through division. I want a president, not a nanny. I know the White House is overdue for fumigation. I know the meaning of is.

Conservancy addresses sprawl

Editor:

Julie Musilek's article on "...plan to curb urban sprawl" was a welcome and timely addition to an ongoing issue central to the quality of life and the beauty of Charlevoix County.

In the next few years, there will be critical opportunities for our area to protect farmland and it is essential that the groundwork be laid now. The Charlevoix County Land Conservancy has presented several workshops on land use planning and on Charlevoix County farms.

Because the price paid for produce has not increased since the 1950s and because taxes and expenses have exploded, most small family farms run on love of the land and one or two outside incomes. It has become more and more difficult for small family farms to compete with large agri-business and products grown in other countries.

Michigan loses 10 acres of far-land every hour of every day. Because land values are so high in Charlevoix County, farmers here are under exceptional pressure. Communities must come together to find ways to support local farmers and to seek solutions to this loss of farmland.

Peninsula Township has shown that success is possible. If you would like to help lay this groundwork in Charlevoix County, (A film on Michigan Farms will be shown in November), and would like to participate in the Charlevoix County Land Conservancy's Farmland Preservation Committee, call the Charlevoix County Land Conservancy at 237-9335.

Students offered more classes with program

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

The Charlevoix Elementary School is offering students an opportunity to participate in a broad range of classes outside of their normal curriculum as part of the Elementary Enrichment Program.

"This is designed to give kids something to participate in beyond going home and watching TV. These classes offer opportunities to broaden their perspective and enrich their lives. These courses get them doing something physical," enrichment coordinator Sue Goss said.

Goss alluded to physical education, as an important and highly utilized component of the enrichment program. Currently local resident Vinnie Klooster is leading tennis lessons at the Charlevoix Township courts. These lessons allow kids to engage in after school fitness while learning the life-long sport of tennis.

"My goal is to give these kids a basic understanding of what tennis is and how it is played," Klooster said.

Klooster's roost of elementary students is split into two groups. The first group is second and third graders who meet Mondays from 4 p.m.-5 p.m. The second group consists of fourth and fifth graders who meet on Fridays from 4 p.m.-5 p.m. Each group currently has 18 participants and mid-session joiners are welcome.

All the students need is a pair of sneakers; rackets were purchased by the school and are available to all participants. A $10 fee is required of each student.

If pursuing the arts interests your child, the enrichment program is offering a unique opportunity for elementary students to try their hand at the viola, violin and cello. A fee of $85 will be required of each student partaking in the group lesson and will cover the full eight week session.

Lessons are available for students ages eight to 12 and will start Oct. 16 and run through Dec. 4. They are scheduled to take place from 3:45-4:45 p.m. in the music room. Kids will be learning everything from folk tunes and classical pieces to modern artists.

Instructor Karey Johnson takes a long-term outlook on the work kids will be doing in her enrichment lessons.

"I was hired by the Crooked Tree Arts Council to conduct and develop a youth orchestra. Kids who have played before can contact me but I need to start beginners in order to build and develop a string section for the orchestra,"

"This is designed to give kids something to participate in beyond going home and watching TV."

Sue Goss,
Enrichment coordinator

Johnson said.

According to Johnson a youth symphony could sprout from this class, which would be a great community asset and a positive personal gain for the students as well.

Kids who aren't into sports or making music, but are looking for some exercise and an avenue through which to explore their rhythmic talent are offered a creative dance program scheduled to begin Oct. 17 and running for eight weeks.

Creative dance is open to all elementary school students. The classes will be split into three sessions each lead by instructor Dorothy Eisenstein of Traverse City.

"Overall the classes emphasize self-expression for children through a wide-range of movement activities. This will help them develop rhythmic awareness, share their ideas and develop self-confidence. Through the arts we become more aware of ourselves, other people and our environment," Eisenstein said.

All sessions will be in the elementary school gym. The first session will be open to students ages 4 and 5 from 3:40-4:10 p.m. and will cost students $30. The second creative dance session is open to students ages 6 and 7 from 4:15-5 p.m. at a cost of $35. Students ages 8 to 12 have the opportunity to partake in a more advanced program integrating both creative dance and drama from 5-6 p.m. for a fee of $40.

According to Eisenstein, in class kids will be using their imaginations and their bodies to illustrate stories and myths through movement — using their natural environment as a spring board for learning.

Each of these instructors commented on the importance of their focus of study in instituting a level of self-confidence in their students. Parents who would like to see other courses to be offered through the Elementary Enrichment Program, like foreign language sessions, or would like to register for a class listed above can contact Sue Goss at 547-9803.

Friends of Stover Creek form, start cleanup

The "Friends of Stover Creek" have officially formed.

Volunteers met Sept. 30 to begin cleaning up the banks of Stover Creek on Mildred Wither's property, which starts about an eighth of a mile from the mouth of the creek.

Volunteers worked for several hours and filled a small dumpster to the brim. The cleanup hasn't been finished yet, but volunteers will continue working at a later date until they reach M-66.

Using an outline provided by Tip of the Mitt Watershed Council, volunteers will make a scientific study of sections of the creek. An analysis of the creek will determine if anything can be done to restore the creek to its previous glory.

The group's goal is to prevent further abuse of the creek and to protect and maintain it for future generations.

BEACONS

By CARA B. HOCHHALTER
Christian education director
First Congregation UCC

"Then the people brought their children to Jesus so he could put his hands on them and prayed for them." (Matthew 19:13)

Many churches in our country will be observing "Children's Sabbath" in October. The Children's Defense Fund in Washington D.C. led by Marian Wright Edelman publishes materials to be used in a variety of worshiping denominations. They seek to bring to our awareness the urgent needs of children and the mandate in every faith tradition to nurture and protect children.

One story tells of a tribe of Africans named the Masai. They were reportedly considered to be the most fearsome and intelligent of warriors. It might be surprising then to learn that the traditional greeting that passed between Masai warriors was a phrase which translates, "And how are the children?"

If the answer was, "All the children are well," it meant that peace and safety prevailed, that the priorities of protecting the young, the powerless, were in place, and that society had not forgotten its reasons for being. "All the children are well" meant life was good.

How would we respond to this question? Charlevoix is a caring community with wonderful parents, teachers, many churches and sports activities for children. However, we are not immune to some of the societal shortcomings in the Charlevoix area. Too many children are home alone for two to three hours after school. Many children lack health insurance, even though their parents are working. Drugs, alcohol and media violence are all influences which do not stop at Charlevoix's borders.

Here are some statistics, also from The Children's Defense Fund: There are 11.9 million uninsured children in America. 13.5 million children are poor, 74 percent of them live in working families, 5.8 million live in extreme poverty with incomes below $6,500. 80,000 American children have been killed by guns since 1979, a greater casualty rate than we suffered during the Vietnam War.

How do people of faith respond to these reports? We must become educated about the issues and write letters to Congress seeking support for programs which benefit children. Locally, in our own churches and community groups we can seek to support all Charlevoix's children through love, prayers, friendships and programs.

With God comes hope. As we prayerfully consider these problems, we discover ways that each one of us can work to ensure that indeed, "All the children are well."

Jesus said, "Let the little children come to me. Don't stop them, for to such belongs the kingdom of heaven." (Matthew 19:14)

School voucher debate surrounds Proposal One

However, the anti-voucher opposition contends that all this talk about students as commodities is inapplicable as education is not big business.

"We are talking about kids, not business. I think, in a school district competition it would have a negative effect because it would not be competition on a level playing field. Private schools pick and choose their students and leave others behind. Competition does exist in the public realm. An example would be the existence of the charter school. In rural areas you may have no private schools in driving distance, but the school may still suffer funding losses because vouchers exist," Wotruba said.

Furthermore, some have argued that other avenues including: smaller class sizes, greater parental involvement, better access to technology and better infrastructure are viable ways to achieve successful education.

The Charlevoix Public School District is not directly targeted by the voucher program, as our rate of graduation exceeds the failing rate, but if the proposal is passed all it would take is a vote to see this program locally instituted. Local communities can adopt vouchers through a popular vote, which requires 10 percent of the votes from the last school board election to be cast in favor of vouchers for the measure to be put on the local ballot.

Beyond the voucher program, Proposal One creates a state-wide increase in teacher testing. Increased teacher testing would apply to public school districts and to cover teacher testing in those non-public schools accepting vouchers.

"This proposal gives parents direct accountability over schools. Most teachers are doing a great job. This gives parents a way of knowing where teachers are academically. Once we can identify where the problem teachers are, we can better focus on improving the system," Patru said.

Anti-voucher proponents claim that this teacher testing issue has been added to the proposal in an effort to mask the voucher issue.

"The ad campaign for Proposal One is deceptive; they are focusing on other things, like teacher testing, that is not the aim of the proposal.

We need people to understand what the proposal is and does — it uses public money for private schools. Proposal One looks to amend Michigan's constitution which right now bans vouchers," Wotruba said.

Beyond increased teacher testing and the implementation of a voucher system Proposal One also includes a third focal point which targets raising per pupil funding. According to Patru, this increase would up the guarantee $2 billion dollars state-wide. The minimum would increase from $5,200 per student to $6,000 per student.

Apple Fest kicks off on Friday in Charlevoix APPLES

This will be Friske's second year making these sweet treats on-site.

Owner, Richard Friske recorded the sale of approximately 400 dozen of these piping hot, holed wonders at last year's festival.

This will be Friske's seventeenth year peddling 13 varieties of locally harvested apples and their goods downtown. Not only will Friske be showcasing their doughnuts, but they will also be selling locally pressed cider, caramel apples, pies, jams and a mystery addition brought in specifically for this year's Apple Festival.

All these treats are sure to entice adults, but really celebrating the 2000 harvest is fun for the whole brood.

On Saturday, kids can gawk and interact with some furry friends at a petting farm scheduled to be open all day or the young daredevils can try a pony ride.

"Apple Festival gives us a chance to showcase to the community and to tourists coming through what we have available and what northern Michigan can produce," Director of Retail for Friske's, Judy Friske-Kehr said.

As a whole, the booths will account for 30 varieties of apples including Macintosh, Gala, Delicious and Jonathan. They will also be selling other fall harvest goodies like squash, apple butter, jam, honey, pumpkins and cider.

These fall treats will be in Charlevoix's downtown district.

"The trust is taking steps to put together the necessary funds to redeem the property. Six months to redeem is an absolute under Michigan law, after that time period has expired the property will be lost for good," DeGraff said.

According to both DeGraff, representing the trust and David Gass, representing Taylor, the validity of a number of personal loans made by Taylor and F.B.T. Enterprises to the late Art Reibel will still be disputed in court.

"There were a number of loans not secured by the mortgage. I don't think things are resolved; this (the sale) pays off a portion of the debt. There are still some issues to be addressed," said Gass.

Friske gives writer a true fall experience

Julie Musilek
'Stepping out'

This time of year brings back vivid memories of being a little girl frantically running away from bees in hot pursuit of my cinnamon doughnut and fresh apple cider at a cider mill in the Brighton area.

I stood in awe of the water powered system that made apples into cool juice. There was something amazing about being surrounded by trees showing off their bright red and orange leaves while I sipped on cider and bounced along dirt trails grinning ear to ear at the silly horses dragging our hay filled wagon.

This was a super special family outing so naturally, when I came to northern Michigan, fall meant time to find a mill. Much to my dismay there are no cider mills in this area so I scouted and scouted and found the next best thing.

Friske Orchards is one of the few remaining places that still makes on-site cider and has been in the business since 1962. Most people are familiar with the Friske Farm Market in Atwood off of US-31, but just a block south on the left you'll see C-48; it takes you to the farm.

Here is where the cider happens. Friske does offer tours of the cider-making facility on Thursdays, but they are really geared toward school groups or if your family wants to get together with a couple others to make a group of 15 participants, the cider fun is on. Just in case you can't gather a troop, here is a brief explanation of the cider process.

First the little, imperfect apples that won't make great eating are gathered into huge crates. Then they are dropped into a stainless steel tank where leaves and other debris, not included in the cider recipe, are sorted out. Then the apples are scooted over where they make their way up an elevator and into the grinder. They are forced through a screen and turned into pomace — similar to a coarse apple sauce.

The pomace is then spread out on squares of fabric covering plastic boards. Layer after layer of pomace is stacked high by Friske workers. Then a pressing machine is lowered on top of all the layers and squeezes the juice out of the soupy apple mixture. The juice is collected in a tank and pumped through to a bottling reservoir.

Friske pasteurizes some of its cider, heating it just enough to kill the germs, but not to kill that crisp fall taste. The cider is heated to 150-160 degrees, no warmer than necessary.

Now you and yours can head to Friske's Farm Market armed with the knowledge of the arduous process that went into making this fall favorite. Friske's Market also offers visitors the Orchard Café hooking up lunches equipped with steamy homemade soups and gigantic sandwiches.

Outside the market, Friske workers have built a pumpkin house for kids to play in. They framed up a home and bricked and insulated it in pumpkins. Kids love to weave through the pumpkin wonderland.

This is also a great time of year to pick out your Halloween carver. This will keep the kids busy after you return home for the day.

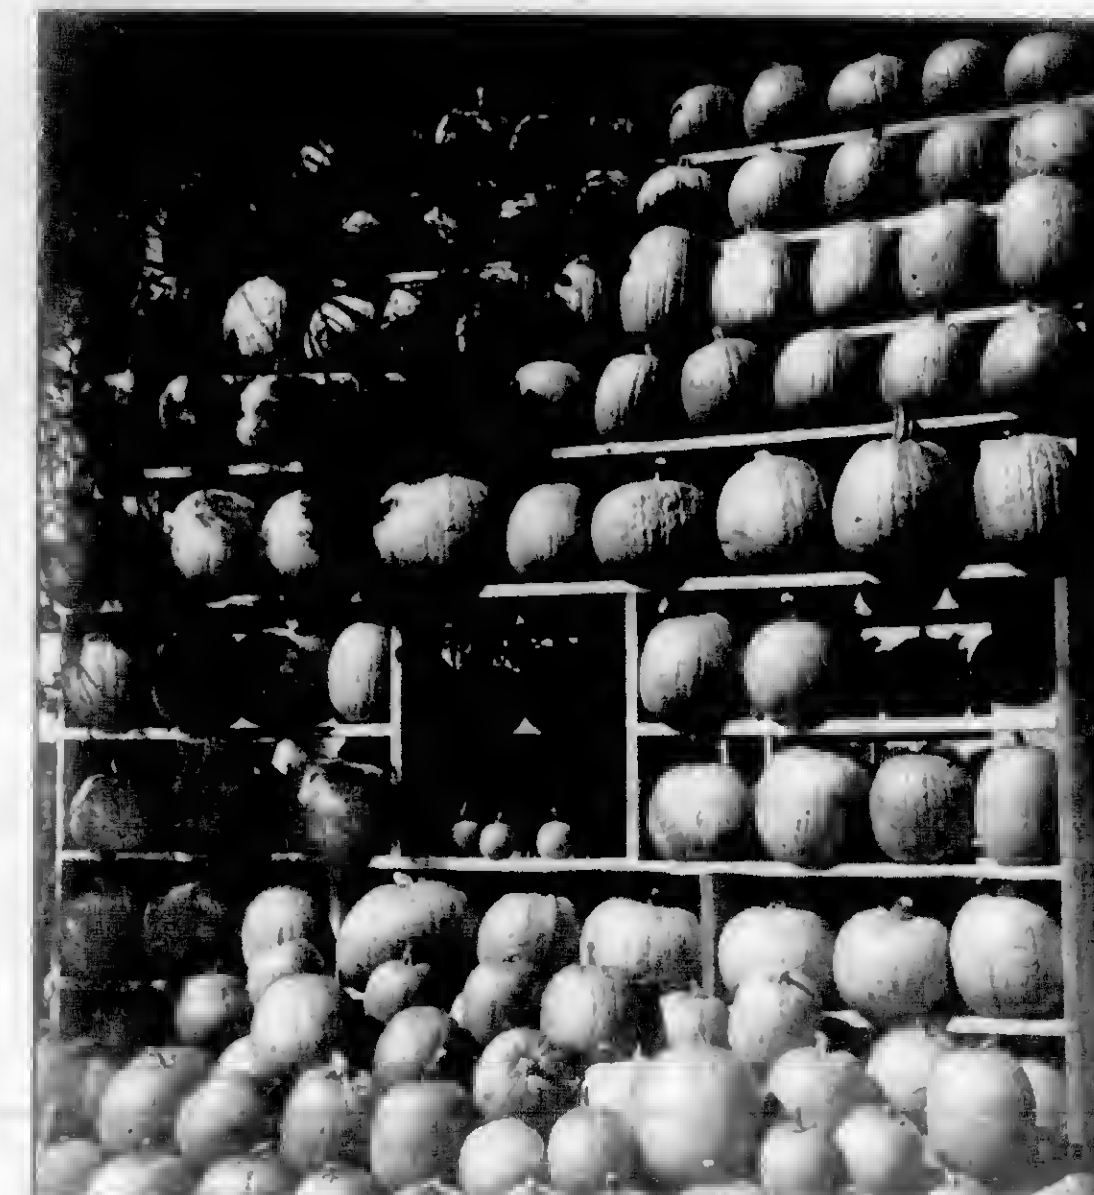

After tiring yourselves out in pumpkinville, Friske has an outdoor petting area where goats and chickens live harmoniously, anxiously awaiting their next visitor with kernels of corn spilling out of their palms.

Refreshing cider, a great lunch, a pumpkin house and animal interaction; what's missing? Hay rides of course. If your family heads over on Saturday, kids will also be able to take a tractor-drawn hay ride.

I left this investigation satisfied. Friske had everything I remembered: doughnuts, cider, animals, hay, apples and yes, even the bees were there.

The next generation of Friske farmers, Richie Friske III rests by some freshly made cider. (Photo by Julie Musilek)

Neumann, Flanders both against Proposal One

CANDIDATES

Neumann also pointed to a conflict with private institutions admittance policies, a concept that supports Flanders' vision of students falling through the cracks — private education institutions are not required to accommodate all students like those with special needs.

The question both candidates asked is who will really benefit from this program. Proposal One advocates claim that the thrust of their efforts are for the 200,000 students trapped in failing school districts but, according to Neumann, public schools will not benefit. "Look at the whole picture and see that the voucher program will be very damaging to public education. I oppose the voucher system. Public education is our backbone, our future. If we do institute a voucher program we will lose funding, the school will be hurt. We will see students move from public to private institutions taking that funding with them," Neumann warned. Neumann and Flanders did not simply reject Proposal One's call for reform in education, but located areas where the proposal could make beneficial additions to the system including both teacher testing, which Flanders advocates, and increasing per pupil funding, where Neumann sees changes occurring.

"We are beginning to see increased per pupil funding so our schools will be brought back in line with the majority a move from $5,800 per year to $6,700 per year, there's more to work with," Neumann said.

Flanders sees a future for teacher testing and also advocates implementing strategies proven to help increase the level of excellence in education.

"I believe we can tweak the public school system a little and figure out a way of instituting teacher testing. There is good stuff in that proposal, but it is too bad vouchers are attached. We need to take the money the voucher system is going to cost, which is around $700 million dollars and lower the number of students in each classroom, let the teachers teach and we will have a wonderful system," Flanders said.

Funding drive for new auditorium kicks off

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

A recent millage approved the integration of an auditorium into the blueprints of the new high school project but, the Rotary Club of Charlevoix is reaching even higher and foresees a state of the art performing arts center which will meet the needs of both the community and the students.

"Rotary approached the school board and will be undertaking a project to sell the seats in the auditorium to enhance both the sound and lighting in the auditorium to make it more of a performing arts center," school board member Dennis Halverson said.

Rotary Reach for the Stars campaign chaired by Dan Barron has set its sites high, hoping to raise $225,000 in funds. The money will upgrade the auditorium's sound and light systems and other improvements needed to elevate the theater to professional status.

Businesses and individuals can sponsor seats at four different donation levels: Galaxy $5,000, Gold $1,000, Silver $500 and Bronze $250. Sponsorship forms are available at all five Charlevoix banks (Bay Winds Credit Union, Charlevoix State Bank, Citizens Bank, Huntington Bank and Standard Federal Bank.) Donors get advance ticket notification and purchase privileges and will be memorialized on a plaque in the lobby.

"The idea is not only for budgetary reasons, but Rotary and the school board agreed that there is an opportunity to upgrade for a higher level of performance. This opportunity would allow for state of the art equipment and students would have the opportunity to learn on computerized state of the art sound and lighting," Halverson said.

At press conference on Monday the campaign raised $6,000 in the first 20 minutes. Rotary wrote out the first $1,000 check in sponsorship of the first seat and were followed by a check of the same value by the Lions Club, then former school superintendent Gordon VanWieren and lastly by Citizens Bank. A representative of Charlevoix State Bank also stepped forward with a $2,000 check.

The Charlevoix Rotary Club is kicking off a campaign to create a state-of-the-art auditorium in the new Charlevoix High School. Involved in the project are (back row, from left) Larry Boog of Standard Federal Bank, Rochelle Roerig-Whippo of Huntington Bank, David Leusink of Bay Winds Credit Union, Principal Gary Grundman and Dave Atkins of Citizens Bank. (Front row, from left) Jim Berlage, president of Rotary, Dan Barron, chairman of the Reach for the Stars Campaign and Jerry Russell of Charlevoix State Bank. (Photo by Julie Musilek)

"This is an opportunity for the community to come together on this project; it is something we can all work towards," Halverson said.

In the cool of the evening

A. Nony Mouse

'Yachting notes'

The sails were casting cool winter shadows on those to leeward as the diminishing breeze seemed to come directly from the setting sun. The first windward leg was a game of playing the wind shifts and SWINE FLEW had a great lead at the first mark.

She actually expanded that lead on the colorful spinnaker leg and seemed to have victory well in hand as she tacked up the final windward leg. SUPERFLUOUS and HUSSY split sides of the course making it tough to cover both.

As we watched, those two seemed to time every tack perfectly, always catching the favored shift and avoiding Mother Nature's calm traps. Further along, SUPERFLU-

OUS, not more than 100 feet away from SWINE FLEW, was lifted and pushed along by a narrow shaft of air that only she received. Now in second place, SWINE FLEW switched to cover HUSSY but was just seconds too late. A great race by all three.

Trailing, in this order, were: TOO RECKLESS, CRAZY HORSE, HOG-TIDE, JUBBLIES, FIRST DATE, PALEFACE LITE, HS MOISTURE MISSILE, ROCK STEADY, HIGH MAINTENANCE and HABANERO. GECKO and THUNDERSTRUCK were DNS.

GOTCHA nailed down yet another win in the Big Boats of Division 1 with KAMIKAZE back by 2 minutes and BLASEN IV far behind.

Division 2, after having an off week last Wednesday, saw J HAWK ahead of M 3 by over a minute.

In the P-26 Fleet, ORIGINAL SIN switched positions with last week's winner CYGNUS but by 20 rather than last week's 22 seconds.

FLASH, in the JAM Fleet, crossed the line almost 7 minutes before BALD EAGLE but the corrected time shows only a 3 minute difference.

With only two boats left in all fleets, except only the J-22 Fleet, it is tough to write about the rest of you — please, bear with me. (Or get more boats out in your fleet!)

A quick look at the standings at the halfway point of the Fall Series, now recognizing the one drop that is allowed:

Division 1: GOTCHA 3, KAMIKAZE 6 and BLASEN IV 9.

Division 2: (CORRECTION) M 3 5, J Hawk 7.

P-26 Fleet: ORIGINAL SIN 4, CYGNUS 5 and JESSE 9.

JAM Fleet: FLASH 3, BALD EAGLE 6, SLAPSHOT 11 and HIGH SEAS 14.

J-22 Fleet: RECKLESS 4, HUSSY 8, SWINE FLEW 10, SUPERFLUOUS 11, FIRST DATE 11, CRAZY HORSE 19, JUBBLIES 21, HIGH MAINTENANCE 21, PALEFACE LITE 25, GECKO 27, ROCK STEADY 29, HOG-TIDE 29, HS MOISTURE MISSILE 30, THUNDERSTRUCK and HABANERO 39.

Girls basketball team remains at the top of league

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

The Charlevoix girls basketball team remains undefeated in the conference following two wins last week.

Charlevoix faced Traverse City St. Francis on Oct. 3, beating them 63-55. Leading scorers were: Jennifer McClellan with 15 points, Leslie Hoffman with 12 points and Danielle Vogelheim with 12 points.

The Rayders stayed with this winning form Oct. 5 when they faced Kalkaska and beat them 70-58.

Leading scorers for this game were: Vogelheim with 28 points and 10 boards, Hoffman with 18 points, 16 steals and four assists and McClellan with eight assists and 2 points.

According to Coach Jason Otter, the Rayders were down throughout the game, but came back thanks to a tremendous team effort in the fourth quarter.

For helping the effort, Otter praised Meghan Vogel who played the game on an injured ankle and still managed to make one of the big plays. He also spoke highly of Ashley Ager, who came off the bench in the third quarter.

ter and scored a quick six points.

Additionally, while on their way to winning the game in a gym filled with Kalkaska supporters, the Rayders found themselves in a very hostile environment, with noise so loud Charlevoix players couldn't hear their coach, Otter said. But, thanks to some great leadership shown by McClellan, the team was able to stay together and be victorious, he said.

"I am pretty happy overall. We will be putting that same effort into every game," Otter said.

Rayder football shines

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

The Charlevoix Rayders just keep on winning.

The varsity football team improved its season record to 5-2 overall and 4-1 in the league with its 36-20 win over Elk Rapids Oct. 6. But, the win did not come easy for the Rayders.

"It was a win in what wasn't the prettiest types of games. We made some mistakes that could have hurt us, but we overcame them," Coach Todd Klinger said. Those mistakes were some missed assignments and other mental errors.

The biggest error, Klinger said, happened in the fourth quarter with Charlevoix leading 37-7. He said the Rayders seemed to slack off a little and allowed Elk Rapids to score two touchdowns.

Klinger said the biggest problem was the defense had trouble containing the Elk Rapids quarterback.

"His scrambling ability gave us fits," he said.

While he is planning on working out these errors from the fourth, Klinger was happy overall with the Rayders efforts, especially in the third quarter. With the score at 12-7 in Charlevoix's favor, the Rayders came out of the lockerroom after halftime and marched down the field for a touchdown.

Charlevoix took complete control of the rest of the third quarter when Ryan Rafacz returned a punt for a touchdown and Patrick Gowell scored on a 62 yard pass from Jeremiah Teuscher.

"Overall it's a win and we will take it," Klinger said.

Touchdowns were made by Ryan Leitner, Chad Mackowiak, Ben Coen, Rafacz and Gowell.

The leading rushers were Leitner with 114 yards and 15 carries. Coen had 50 yards with 10 carries and Mackowiak had 38 yards and three carries.

The leading passer was Teuscher, who threw eight for 12 with 111 yards. The leading receivers were Gowell with two catches for 67 yards and Rafacz with five catches for 29 yards.

On the defense, the leading tackler was Matt Horon with 17. Mackowiak had 12 tackles.

Rafacz caught an interception and Horon had a fumble recovery.

The Rayders will face Boyne City Friday in Boyne City.

Soccer team loses Oct. 5

The Charlevoix varsity soccer team found the key to the goal in the second half on a rainy night in Central Lake, Oct. 5, but still came up short in a 5-4 loss to Bellaire.

The Rayders were behind 4-0 early in the second half before freshman Bryce Daly connected on a 30 yard shot off a feed from sophomore Travis Smith. A nice feed from freshman Alex Callihan to sophomore Spencer Bryan was called back as offside, but Bryan responded with the first of three assists as Callihan put away a shot in front of the goal.

Bryan again fed sophomore Craig Stockman and junior Jason Haas to complete the scoring.

Haas took another shot with seconds remaining which fell wide to the right.

According to Coach Tom Conlan, the second half turn around was led by senior co-captain Tic Bakker, who played the best half of the season. Also strong defensively were freshmen John Dimartino and Jacob Place. Sophomore Trevor Kline had his best effort in the midfield, Conlan added.

The Rayders record is now 1-12. They faced Elk Rapids last night. The results of that game were unavailable before press-time.

Golf team upset by Elk Rapids at conference meet mention All-Conference title.

Charlevoix will be back on the course Friday at the Division III Regional in Houghton Lake.

According to Glynn, he expects the team to have a strong showing at this event and qualify for the state finals.

Although the team went into the conference championship with an impressive unbeaten record, the Charlevoix varsity golf team was upset by Elk Rapids and must now share the conference title with two other schools.

Elk Rapids, whose record was 2-4 going into the meet, upset not only Charlevoix, but several other teams by shooting a 348, which put the team in the first place slot. This left Charlevoix, Traverse City St. Francis and Harbor Springs tied for the conference title, rather than allowing the Rayders to claim it alone.

"Elk Rapids should be congratulated on their play and hosting. By winning the championship round, it upset the apple cart throwing the scoring into a tizzy," Coach Jim Glynn said. "Ending the conference with three teams tied for first shows how strong the conference is."

Charlevoix ended the match with a score of 360, leaving it in fourth place. Harbor Springs was in second with a 351 and Traverse City St. Francis was in third with a 357.

"I'm proud of the team and their work ethic," Glynn said. "Finishing the regular season undefeated was a fine accomplishment."

Top scores at the conference championship for Charlevoix were made by David Shearer with an 83, Craig Siwarga with 87 and Nick Cole with a 94. These scores enabled Shearer and Siwarga to be named to All-Conference. Cole's score of 94 gave him an honorable

Train station hosts plenty of history

Marilyn Boss
'Days gone by'

Charlevoix's railroad station has had an extensive amount of outside renovation this summer.

Our son, Bo, removed all the old roofing and replaced it with a complete, new mottled green, shake type roof. The Steven's brothers refurbished the ornate exterior chimneys on the building and removed a chimney which was put on in the 1920s when central heat came along. It was not engineered by the original architects, but was an add-on, and the roof had a tendency to leak in the valley. Haggard's installed a new energy efficient furnace as the old one was about shot, and it was not necessary to use the odd-ball chimney.

From 1892 until 1906, the depot had a dormer on the east side, facing the lake, and for some reason, it was torn off. Bo discovered that the three original windows were left in the attic. They had been there for 94 years. Lou Orlovski drew up a sketch of the old dormer from photographs taken years ago and Bo crafted a new dormer, using the old windows. The dormer is identical to the original.

Notice the dormer on the original photo enclosed.

On June 26, 1992, Robert and Mary Pew, of the Chicago Club, donated the depot to the Charlevoix Historical Society, to be used as a museum. It happened to be exactly 100 years to the day that the first train arrived in Charlevoix at 2:30 on a Sunday afternoon, as the waiting townspeople excitedly greeted them.

The train then took the Charlevoixians to Petoskey and back. The townfolks said that Charlevoix would never be the same again with fast transportation available.

That first summer, there were seven passenger trains a day, each way. Four of them were suburban trains that ran from the Belvedere to Bay View, and three were through-trains, to Grand Rapids, Detroit and Chicago.

A dining car and Pullman sleeping cars were included on some of these trains.

A sleeping car train was named "The Resort Special," and ran in the summer every night from Chicago and Detroit to the resorts in northern Michigan. In 1898, the railroad company built a large hotel on the bluff overlooking the railroad depot.

The inn was second in size only to the Grand Hotel on Mackinac Island. It extended from Chicago Avenue on the south side of the property to Cherry Street on the north side of the property, and it even had a walkway on the north end, which extended over the top of Cherry Street to a huge dormitory, located on the north side of Cherry Street, by the home now occupied by Dr. Gels. This was the John S. Dixon residence, the first home built in Charlevoix.

The railroad company also owned three private homes on Elm Street, for the executives to lodge their families in the summertime. They also owned the inn garage. They used this building to keep their horses and buggies, so that they could use them for transportation. This property now has eight new private homes built on it.

The concrete hill going down Chicago Avenue to the depot, was the second piece of concrete laid outside the city of Detroit. It is stamped concrete, so that the horses, dragging the heavy loads of cargo unloaded from the trains, would have a foothold. The boulevard lights that line Dixon Avenue, were put there because Dixon Avenue was the main connection with the outside world in little Charlevoix. The railroad bridge that was demolished about 18 years ago, was paid for by the City of Charlevoix. It cost the sum of $25,000.

The community did this to entice the railroad company to bring the railroad to town. This was a very expensive undertaking, due to the water around us. Captain Taylor, a retired captain, had an ice cream and lunch stand located at the foot of Chicago Avenue, where you now turn to go to the coastguard station and he served ice cream and sandwiches to the many people who were waiting for the train and those who departed the train.

When Dale was a little boy, he and his brother would beg their dad to take them down to see the "choo-choo" train come in. Of course, what they really wanted, after they watched the hissing steam, and the hundreds of people getting off, was the big ice cream cone.

Ike Byers and P.R. Ross, two local draymen, would have trunks piled ten feet high, with ropes over the top of them to keep them from falling off their stake rack trucks, which they delivered to the various cottages. They usually had to leave some behind on the four wheeled hand trucks under the canopy, as there were too many trunks to carry.

Jess Smith would take the mail down to the train in his little Chevy truck, and there were men on the railcar sorting mail as they rode the train. You could get a letter delivered to Chicago the next day.

The late Jim Flynn, who worked as a bell hop at the inn, told my husband that the inn had a complete telegraph office located in the hotel, so that the executives who stayed there, could keep in contact with their businesses at home in the big cities. Jim said that he and the other bell hops used to sit on the hotel balustrade, and watch the ladies dressed in high fashion parade around the hotel.

The inn was torn down in 1941, and much of the debris was shoved over the bank on Mercer Boulevard, near the present Sleep Inn. Hobos used to have a hangout there.

The last train went from Charlevoix to Petoskey on Feb. 18, 1962. I took our children for the ride on the last trip, and Dale picked us up in Petoskey.

Charlevoix's history is wonderful, and if you want to find out more information, the Charlevoix Historical Society has a great amount of interesting data.

The B.A.S.S. tournament was a huge success!

This year's B.A.S.S. Tournament was bigger and better than ever by all accounts, with more hotel rooms being booked in Charlevoix than of the previous tournaments and many merchants reporting a big bump in post Labor Day weekend sales! The Chamber will be working hard in the future to bring this event back again to Charlevoix. Special thanks to those who volunteered to help with many of the details for the B.A.S.S. tournament: Judy & Jerry Corley, John Ferguson, and John Fiedorek. Our own Police Chief Dennis Holverson, and City Manager Mike Welsner also went above and beyond the call of duty to help!

Charlevoix High School helps with cornstalks

The Chamber of Commerce greatly appreciated the help of the students and teachers from Charlevoix High School in cutting and tying up cornstalks to decorate the downtown area on October 5th! It's a big task and they did a great job! Thank you to the City of Charlevoix for all their help and continued support in this and many other projects. And thanks to Ace Hardware for donating lots of twine to the project as well!

State bound

By JEREMY MCBAIN

The Charlevoix High School golf team is heading to the state championship.

Thanks to the team's second place finish Oct. 13 at the Division Three regional in Houghton Lake, five members of the team will be leaving this week for the state championship Friday and Saturday in St. Johns.

"I'm real proud of them. It was a real good team effort," Coach Jim Glynn said of the second place finish Oct. 13.

David Shearer shot the lowest on the team with a 75. This score also gave him the first place spot on the All Regional Team.

Glynn said since Shearer is shooting so well as a sophomore, he envisions a "bright future with the golf team" for the young Rayder.

Shooting the second lowest on the team was Jordan Nystrom with an 84, followed by Alan Brooks with an 86 and Craig Siwarga with a 88. Nick Cole had the highest score with an 89, but it was scratched.

The Rayders' total team score was 333, but this wasn't enough to beat Houghton Lake, who scored a 327.

"I think they (the Rayders) are all shooting well, but they have to lower their scores even more," Glynn said. "I think they have played relaxed enough and can do it."

Charlevoix will be one of 24 teams to go to the state championship out of 118 teams in Division Three. If the Rayders are one of the 12 best after Friday, they will go on to the final round on Saturday.

New lawsuit filed over school site

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

One year and one week ago to the date Charlevoix voters approved an $18.8 million dollar bond proposal providing funds to build a new high school. Since then proponents of the new high school have weathered two lawsuits and will now be facing their third.

The plaintiffs in the latest suit against the school are: Kenneth Staley, Kenneth Richard Tunison, Robert G. Mossman, Paul Richards, Joseph E. Seidel and Russell and Sue Bolt. On Oct. 12 the plaintiffs issued their grievances against the Charlevoix Public School District and Superintendent John Strock.

"We filed suit based on co-mingling of funds. They (the Charlevoix School District) are using public money to build a sewer which will serve private interests — an 80 home development. Basically we think it's not legal for school funds to be used to build a sewer much larger than what would be needed to service the school," Richards said.

In a brief filed by Traverse City

Attorney Jim Olson on behalf of the plaintiffs, a claim is made that voters who approved the bond "were confused and didn't realize they were voting to authorize the use of bond proceeds for the purchase of the site and for the payment of over half a million dollars for a public sewer extension."

The brief claims because the bond wording did not specifically point to funding being allocated to a sewer extension that their case merits injunctive relief.

School board president Allen Telgenhof contests the claim that voters were unaware of the sewer extension.

"The wording on the proposal read the funding would be used for erecting, furnishing and equipping a new high school. I believe most people instinctually realize that sewer or on-site septic will be a part of that," Telgenhof said.

The plaintiffs believe because of the vague wording presented on the bond proposal, voters did not approve the use of public money to extend the sewer. This assertion raises the possibility of misappropriated public funds, they say.

Students, administrators discuss zero tolerance

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

The Charlevoix school board discussed possible changes to the high school's extracurricular and co-curricular substance abuse policy at the Oct. 9 meeting.

The current school policy stipulates that a student who participates in an extracurricular activity and is caught drinking or using drugs for the first time during their season will be suspended from all remaining competition. If the incident occurs out of season, he/she will lose eligibility for 20 percent of the regularly scheduled events in the next season. Second violations result in eligibility loss of 50 percent of the next sports season.

The proposed policy would increase the out of season penalty to 50 percent of the next sports season, would "clean-up" the self-disclosure policy and would change the appeals process.

"We are trying to find a balance between what is fair and what is right. We do not condone kids drinking and we need to target a balance that shows the students that mistakes lead to consequences. Students are less likely to make these mistakes in-season because their coaches are there to constantly remind them of the policy; off-season is when most of these incidents happen," Superintendent of Charlevoix Schools, John Sturck said.

However, senior members of the student council claim they are committed to their activity and the rules that govern their participation and don't see a need for change in the off-season policy.

Candidates discuss ideas to improve the economy

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

Both of the candidates for the 106th District Seat say there is a great economy in northern Michigan, but it could be better.

However, incumbent Andy Neumann and challenger Francis "Brownie" Flanders differ on how to make this economy stronger.

Flanders said there are a couple of things that could be done to make the economy better across northern Michigan. He said the economic environment must be made more friendly to business to induce some smaller businesses to the area by fixing up some taxing situations and regulations to encourage business start-ups.

Flanders suggested creating some tax credits for businesses, eliminating the single business tax by phasing it out over 20 years, local tax abatements for start-up businesses and state assistance to help small businesses pay for training of employees and relocation costs.

He added there also needs to be reasonable environmental regulations. Some of the current regulations are so harsh they are hampering some of the northern Michigan businesses, Flanders said.

For example, Flanders pointed to a situation with a cement plant in Alpena that was burning flammable material in a kiln. The community thought that wasn't something that should happen, but the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality said it was OK.

The citizens of Alpena complained and hassled the company so much, it stopped burning the material and now must buy the material it was creating in the kiln, Flanders said.

OPINIONS

Let's play 'Scare the Editor' this Halloween

Jeremy McBain

'Just a thought'

People have always been fascinated by ghosts.

Throughout history, cultures have created millions of ghost stories and many insomniacs in the process.

Stories of the ghosts of murder victims, vampires and zombies were told by the light of a late-night fire in many families. The stories were a way to entertain and perhaps make some sense out of the mystery of death.

It is this fascination with ghosts that has created the modern-day holiday, Halloween.

Halloween was originally created by the ancient Celts as a festival called Samhain (pronounced "sow-in"). It is on this day at midnight that the Celts believed the veil between the land of the living and the dead was at its thinnest. Supposedly, the dead were able to enter the land of the living to cause mischief and play tricks.

To avoid being the recipient of these tricks and mischief, the Celts would dress up in costumes and carry hollowed-out gourds with burning embers in them to ward off the spirits. As the tradition traveled to the New World with Irish immigrants, it was called Halloween.

Even now we are fascinated with these stories and Halloween. Some of the best selling books and movies spin modern-day ghostly yarns and make a lot of money for storytellers such as Steven King or Wes Craven.

Personally, I love hearing these stories around Halloween. The problem is, my imagination doesn't need much inspiration lately to make my heart jump at night.

You see, I have recently moved to a new apartment and along with the usual jitters that come with sleeping in a new place, this new place creates just a few more for me. My new home is a nice three bedroom apartment in the basement of the old Charlevoix hospital, now called the Hillcrest Club.

I must say, the owners of this building have taken great care in renovating the building and it looks great. I think it is probably the best looking apartment building in the city. It has new siding, new windows and my new apartment has new carpeting, new tile in the bathroom and new appliances in the kitchen.

Even with all these new items, when I am trying to fall asleep late at night and when my imagination is running like a stampeding herd of bulls, I can't stop thinking about the building's past.

"I wonder if this was the morgue? I wonder if there are spirits in the hall or under the bed? Do you think any past tenants ever saw a ghost? Did you hear that noise? Was that the heater going on or some ghost knocking on the wall?" I ask my wife, usually at 3 a.m.

My wife, who was previously in the land of dreams before my barrage of questions, usually rolls over, looks at me lovingly and sweetly says, "Shut up."

Then she rolls back over mumbling something about my nonstop imagination.

About two weeks ago, my black cat decided he would join in on the fun and started a game we call, "Scare-The-Life-Out-Of-Jeremy."

Twice a week, as I am at the edge of awake-and-sleep, my cat climbs to the top of the bed post, gathers his balance, coils up, springs into the air and lands on the bed between my wife and me. This usually causes me, and sometimes my wife, to jump out of the bed, covers and all, and fall onto the floor in a quivering bundle.

I swear I heard the cat snickering one night after doing this.

Regardless of the late-night frights, I love my new apartment and actually enjoy learning about the building's past. Not many of my friends can say they live in an old hospital.

And when I tell my friends this, the conversation usually turns to ghost stories and haunted houses, with my friends sharing their favorite tales with me. It doesn't usually help my imagination.

What I have realized is practically everyone has a ghost story to tell, especially around Halloween. So, we at the Courier have decided to print some of the best ghost stories of Charlevoix residents and are inviting our readers to send in their favorites to be published in the Oct. 25 edition of the Charlevoix Courier.

Please keep the story under 450 words and have it to our office no later than Monday afternoon. You can mail it to P.O. Box 117, Charlevoix, MI 49720, e-mail it to charlevoixcourier@charlevoixcourier.com or just drop it off at our office located at 112 Mason Street.

With the combination of your ghostly tales, my never-ending imagination and my flying black cat, I just may never fall asleep again.

Letters to the editor

Vote no on Props. 1 and 2

Editor:
Proposal One on the Nov. 7 ballot is a bad idea.

1) It would change the Michigan Constitution.

2) It takes public tax dollars to support private schools.

3) Private schools are not accountable to the public, either financially or professionally.

4) Public tax dollars used for parochial (private) schools violates "separation of church and state."

Granted that Michigan has problems in some public schools, vouchers for private schools are not going to solve those problems, whatever they may be. We already have charter schools, which are in competition with the public school system, but they are accountable to the state as are public schools.

Proposal One is another "end run" around the public schools which solves nothing, but does create more problems.

When both Republican Governor John Engler and former Democrat ic Governor Jim Blanchard oppose Proposal One, it must be a bad idea. Vote no.

Proposal Two on the ballot Nov. 7 is another bad idea.

It would change the Michigan Constitution by requiring a two-thirds affirmative vote instead of a simple majority by the state legislature to pass any matter any municipality could propose. What it is in effect is that a smaller majority (one-third) is needed to defeat any legislation proposed.

It appears, from information I have, that down-state big-city politicians are behind this blatant attempt to control state legislation.

You know this proposal is not in our best interest. Vote no on Proposal Two.

Williams endorsement

Editor:
This letter is in support of the re-election of Theda Williams as Charlevoix Township Treasurer. I am a resident of Charlevoix Township and have been since 1995, but have lived in the community and have known Theda for the past 17 years. Our children have grown up together and have all attended Charlevoix Public Schools.

During this time Theda has not only shown that she is trustworthy, but that she can do a responsible and efficient job as treasurer. She has also been an active member of the community, volunteering her time and talents for many different activities.

Theda has been an active member of the Community Reformed Church here in Charlevoix and currently volunteers as church treasurer, where the church is presently in the process of a big debt reduction program. In my capacity as church bookkeeper, I have had the opportunity to work closely with Theda over the past year. Theda has proven to be very conscientious, responsible and frugal in her position as both church treasurer and township treasurer.

On Nov. 7, I will vote to re-elect Theda Williams as Charlevoix Township Treasurer. This will mean splitting my ticket, a small inconvenience, but I believe it is more important to vote for the individual who has a proven work ethic than for a particular political party.

The value of a party affiliation

Editor:
Your Oct. 4 editorial "Base your votes on more than a party" presents a welcome opportunity to address the meaning of political party affiliation.

As a voter who carefully reviews individual candidate qualifications, I do not vote based on political party alone. My decision-making criteria includes an understanding of the candidate's value system, as well as background and qualifications. I find that political party affiliation is a good place to begin researching a candidate's beliefs on such things as personal responsibility and the role of government in our lives.

My value system aligns very closely with those of the Republican Party. Rather than ignore or hide my Republican affiliation, I choose to highlight it. It helps me define myself to the voters. The voters of Charlevoix Township are not just electing a treasurer who has specific non-partisan duties to carry out, they are also electing a member of the township legislative body — a member of the township board. Voters deserve to know what values will guide my decision making on their behalf.

I am a life-long Republican and I am very proud of it. Voters should take into account my Republican philosophy as they cast their ballots. I stand for personal responsibility, community involvement and conservative government.

Parents, kids need to be warned of drug

Julie Musilek

Staff Writer

My mom recently approached me with genuine concern in her eyes, the same devastated look I got when I was 16 and she heard about kids playing "the game," which involves two cars and a group of invincible teens.

So we went to investigate. We strolled down a winding road through a wooded corridor in the Charlevoix Country Club where she had repeatedly found empty pill cartridges and beer cans strewn about. The pill containers read "Ephedrine" and "Mini-Thin," a medicine used by asthma sufferers.

"Asthma," yeah right, in my experience this over the counter "herbal" substance rarely is ingested to fulfill its purported purpose but rather, has become a staple for recreational use.

Even the web site ephedra.com recognizes the abuse of the drug in its claim that it was "created to aid in public awareness that it is best to be moderate when it comes to a quest to be extreme."

Now this mission statement does not seem to target asthma sufferers, but rather seems to be addressing recreational users.

I've seen ephedrine use range from individuals taking 10 pills at a time to a pill here and there in college to help keep awake and study.

Many don't understand the dangers.

My concern is that there is a lack of substantive dialogue between parents and their impressionable teens. I have repeatedly seen fingers pointed at the city police's inability to control underage alcohol abuse and drug issuers in town or that the school has not done enough to educate kids.

Whose opinion do you think a rebellious teen is more likely to listen to: law enforcement officials and school administrative heads — exactly the authority figures they love to hate — or a parent who makes up 50 percent of their genes?

I understand this is not a fun topic to approach, but the reality is that these kids are taking three times the dose amount of this stimulant in one gulp than is to be ingested during the course of a 24 hour period. I hope to see the threat of this drug addressed at home before parents receive a much more devastating phone call from the police.

I've found that one of the most empowering avenues through which to address these issues is in knowing the facts. Read the article in this issue outlining side effects of use (page 19), look online for research and educate yourselves so you can target signs of misuse. The long-term negative outcome can be subverted by simply admitting your child is not perfect and is subject to the same pressures that the neighbor's teen is facing.

I'm not claiming that I never made mistakes in my adolescence and did not experiment along the way; teens are bull-headed beings who will make their own choices. But empowering both yourself and your child with information may give the tools to decline pill popping opportunities.

In each wrong step I took my mother's stern words and serious facts led my journey, the tight rope, into adulthood.

I also strongly recommend recreational users of ephedrine to consider this powerful drug's potential dangers.

Dear Jeff,

I would like to take this opportunity to let you know of the excellent care I received while at Northern Michigan Hospital. On Feb. 9, 2000 I was evaluated by Dr. Willens and Dr. Vazales and scheduled for a heart catheterization. The procedure showed that I have three arteries 70 to 90% blocked. Dr. Vazales explained the options that I had, and we decided to proceed with the by-pass operation. On Feb. 10, Dr. Vazales performed the operation, and on Feb. 12, I was discharged. I feel the advanced technology and high level of skill that Dr. Vazales possesses deserves a great deal of credit for my quick recovery.

I cannot express to you the amount of kindness and courtesy that was extended to me and my family by your entire staff, from Pre-Op, ICU, CVU to discharge. Some of the memorable personnel are Judy in Dr. Vazales' office, Linda, Steph, Denise, Barb and Gisselle in CVU, along with Patrick and Sbeila in ICU. There are others whose names I don't recall. I am a retired firefighter (25 years) and I know that it's very easy to become callous to patient wants and needs. This is not the case with your staff. Let me end by saying that you should be very proud of your entire Cardiovascular Department.

Sincerely,
James L. Twink

Children's Theatre and Choir having auditions

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Ragamuffin Children's Theatre and Choir, a newly formed private theater company for children in Charlevoix, is having auditions.

According to troupe leader, Kathleen Whittaker, the focus of the program is to cultivate a local level of excellence in the performing arts.

"I have a definite philosophy of excellence. I am looking for kids who will exhibit respectfulness and self-discipline in order to teach them that performing professionally takes time. Hopefully giving them, a greater sense of how to be good at anything in life and instilling in them a sense of discipline and a work ethic that will produce good fruit in all areas of their lives," Whittaker said.

Whittaker said the program will cover various genres in an attempt to achieve an all-encompassing focus. The program is to include everything from dance, music, drama and choir to pantomime. However, the broad range of subjects are free from negative or sexual undertones.

Auditions are open to kids ages 7 to 14 and can be arranged by calling Whittaker at 237-9686. According to Whittaker the word audition need not act as a deterrent — the children are not required to come with a predetermined act to display but instead she will ask questions and gauge their skill level.

"During the children's auditions, I will seek out the area of the arts they are most comfortable in and will gradually expose them. The auditions are designed not to weed out the kids without experience. We are looking for interested participants with a natural bent towards the arts. I am interested in finding children who are willing, teachable and workable," she said.

Future performances by the troupe will occur in a variety of different settings including: dinner theater appearances performing in conjunction with the Ragamuffin Adult Theatre Troupe, a production of the Prince of Egypt and church presentations.

The participation fee is $80 per month. Sessions will take place weekly on Saturdays from 10 a.m.-12 p.m. in either the Middle School Cafeteria or the Charlevoix Public Library basement.

According to Whittaker, the first hour of each session will be dedicated to building skills and establishing a foundation. In the second hour the kids will shift gears and begin focusing on a specific repertoire.

Fees go toward costumes and equipment used to build the program. Scholarships are liberally available for those in need.

"Performing arts will affect every area of a child's life including boosting their confidence and building up their self-esteem — kids are affected when they see themselves as part of something of great quality. Every child, given the opportunity to take part in the performing arts, will find an area in which they excel," Whittaker said.

Backpacking expedition offered to area students

High school students from around northern Michigan are invited to an overnight backpacking expedition offered by SEE-North, northern Michigan's environmental education center.

The fall trip will take place along the North Country Trail, from Sturgeon Bay to French Farm Lake. This trip is geared toward young people with little or no backcountry experience, and will focus on backpacking skills and ecological exploration.

The North Country Trail originates in Maine as a work-in-progress path across the United States. Students will explore a small section of the trail, learning about leave-no-trace camping techniques, survival skills and natural history.

The trips will be led by two experienced SEE-North employees: Chris Dundon is a graduate of Western Michigan University and is also a certified Wilderness First Responder through Wilderness Medical Associates. He has extensive backcountry experience across the United States and Canada as well as in South America.

BEACONS

By FR. JIM GUNN

Rector, Christ Episcopal Church
I recently received the following as an e-mail. I found it to be inspiring and wanted to share it with all of you.

Imagine life as a game in which you are juggling some five balls in the air. You name them: Work, family, health, friends, spirit and you're keeping all of these in the air.

You will soon understand that work is a rubber ball. If you drop it, it will bounce back. But the other four balls — family, health, friends and spirit are made of glass. If you drop one of these, they will be irreparably scuffed, marked, nicked, damaged or even shattered.

They will never be the same. You must understand that and strive for balance in your life. How?

OF BLESSINGS

1) Don't undermine your worth by comparing yourself with others. It is because we are different that each of us is special.

2) Don't set your goals by what other people deem important. Only you know what is best for you.

3) Don't take for granted the things closest to your heart. Cling to them as you would your life, for without them, life is meaningless.

4) Don't let your life slip through your fingers by living in the past or for the future. By living your life one day at a time, you live ALL the days of your life.

5) Don't give up when you still have something to give. Nothing is really over until the moment you stop trying.

6) Don't be afraid to admit that you are less than perfect. It is this fragile thread that binds us together.

er.

7) Don't be afraid to encounter risks. It is by taking chances that we learn how to be brave.

8) Don't shut love out of your life by saying it's impossible to find. The quickest way to receive love is to give; the fastest way to lose love is to hold it too tightly; and the best way to keep love is to give it wings.

9) Don't run through life so fast that you forget not only where you've been, but also where you are going.

10) Don't forget that a person's greatest emotional need is to feel appreciated.

11) Don't be afraid to learn. Knowledge is weightless, a treasure you can always carry easily.

12) Don't use time or words carelessly. Neither can be retrieved.

What newspaper ???

1. Goes into more Charlevoix homes than any other newspaper?
2. Supports the community editorially?
3. Provides a forum for citizens to express their views?
4. Documents the history of the community?
5. Provides glimpses into our community's past each week?
6. Is the only newspaper devoted to the interests of the Charlevoix community?
7. Provides in-depth reporting of local issues?
8. Has served the community for over 110 years?

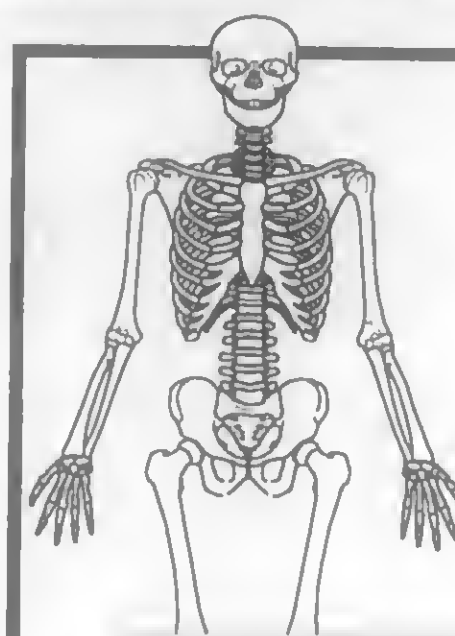

If you answered "Charlevoix Courier" to all eight questions you scored 100%. The Charlevoix Courier does all of these and is proud of its tradition of service to the community. We, at the Courier, know the importance of a community having its own newspaper and we will continue to serve the area.

Harsha House gives visitors a taste of 1800s Charlevoix

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

When you step through the door of the Harsha House Museum at 103 State Street you'll feel as though you've stepped back in time.

Historical Society members have refurbished three downstairs parlors to reflect the home's turn-of-the-century Victorian heritage.

Restoration projects began in the early 1980s, but leaky pipes and unstable walls and ceilings were screaming for attention. So, on a tight budget, historical society members pulled together and were able to update the structure and implement changes into the parlors which "reflect a Charlevoix lifestyle through the turn of the century."

"We can sit back and listen to the compliments. We accomplished something no one wanted to take the initiative to do," Restoration Committee member Karen Lewis said of the recent completion of the dining parlor.

The front porch entry, accesses the entrance parlor, originally the library, where the Harsha family would spend time doing homework, writing letters and playing games. You can almost picture John, Amy, Irene, Horatio, Paul and Katherine, the Harsha kids, stretched out on the floor reading a book.

In the entrance parlor, society members have displayed an 1875 Eastlake settee and an oak cupboard and collection table original to the Harsha House and donated by Andrew Lonyo, cousin of Anne Harsha who also donated the house. The entrance parlor reflects the home's original design from the furnishings right down to the floor and wall coverings.

A glance to the left will reveal the formal parlor where Harsha kids were forbidden to enter. Currently the room is roped off, but visitors are welcome to peek in and imagine formal gatherings that took place in the parlor in the late 1800s. Andrew Lonyo donated the 1860 French renaissance settee, matching chairs and marble-top tables which once furnished the home of Anne Harsha's maternal grandparents.

The fireplace situated into the wall on the far-right in the formal parlor is outlined by ceramic grape leaf tiles that were installed before 1892. They may have come from Ohio where Horace Shaw Harsha, the home's original owner, lived as a child.

The next stop is the dining parlor where the historical society's restoration committee slaved away since the fall of 1999 — an effort to create an authentic setting. The room once housed the Bob Miles Photography Collection but decisions were made which moved the photo display and morphed the room into a dining area where china and glass collections are displayed.

Committee members and volunteers scrubbed and chipped away at the lead paint on the walls. In the process of removing the paint they found the original wallpaper and from there searched far and wide for a reasonable deal on wall covering that would closely match what they had unearthed.

Bartlett's agreed to give the committee a good deal and the rest is history. The group framed a swatch of the original paper so visitors can compare the current paper to the original.

From the ceiling to the floor the committee was determined to go original, so they started chipping away at the soft wood covering the floor. They found dark brown paint in the late 1800s as the color Horace and Marguerite chose. When replicating the hue the committee added a hint of red to match the new wallpaper.

"We found a dark brown color paint when we got down to the original coat on the floor. The restoration committee used dark brown, but we cheated a little and added a hint of red to make it match the wallpaper," Lewis said.

Other features of the dining parlor include: A relic sitting in the left corner of the room, this is the original fire box and also the sparkling Italian chandelier hanging over the dining table, a true treasure from 1910.

After replacing everything from the ceiling and walls to the rug on the floor the restoration committee along with volunteer help and generous donations by area businesses completed this undertaking in June.

The Historical Society has many upcoming exhibits including a proposal to exhibit artifacts from the long history of the Waterfront Art Fair, a heritage exhibit showcasing memorabilia, photos and historical accounts of Charlevoix's history as a fishing hub. Other brain storming sessions by historical society members also produced a possible lumbering exhibit, similar to that of the fishing exhibit and a historical timeline of the history of Charlevoix Schools.

The Harsha House Museum is valued by many as a local gem, offering residents and visitors a central location where the rich history of Charlevoix is not only housed but is displayed.

"Our job is preserving what we have," Lewis said.

South Side Gym offers healthy life to members

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

With its newly expanded kick-boxing class and facility, South Side Gym and Fitness has something for everyone striving to strengthen their body and improve their health.

South Side Gym, located on Marion Center Road, opened in December 1998. Within a year, owners Dean and Patti Spencley expanded the business to include South Side Aerobics in October 1999 and now, about a year later, they have expanded again with the inclusion of kick-boxing classes and a new facility to teach them in. "This makes us an all around health and fitness center," Dean said.

The kick-boxing classes are taught by Connie Birdsall. They are at 6 a.m. and 5:45 p.m. on Mondays and Wednesdays, 6 a.m. on Fridays and at 9 a.m. on Saturdays.

In addition to this class, South Side Gym and Fitness offers members a wide variety of workout equipment and services for their health needs.

Members can use one of the many mechanical exercise systems or free weights. They can also make use of South Side's personal trainers, who will set up a personalized weight, aerobic or resistant fitness program.

"We are a no nonsense gym and want anyone to feel comfortable in our facility. We will help you find and set and achieve your goals," Dean said. He added he believes South Side also offers its customers the best rates and hours of any gym in the area.

While making healthy members

"We are a no nonsense gym and want anyone to feel comfortable in our facility. We will help you find and set and achieve your goals."

Dean Spencley,
Co-owner of South Side Gym and Fitness of the community, South Side also offers its customers a place to meet friends.

"When you start working out here, you start seeing the same people. Like in a bar setting, you can come in and talk to people and make friends," Dean said. Unlike in a bar setting, while making friends and meeting people, you are working on keeping your body healthy.

South Side Gym and Fitness is open throughout the year from 5 a.m. to 10 p.m. Monday through Thursday, 5 a.m. to 8 p.m. Friday, 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. Saturday and 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sunday.

For more information on the gym or a membership, call 547-0246.

Public, private school officials debate Prop. 1

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

As voters digest the many facets of Proposal One and prepare to cast their vote, local school officials have taken a stand against the issue.

"As a school board we passed a resolution opposing Proposal One because the proposal seems to be aimed at just a few failing school districts and will really penalize all of the school districts in Michigan in the long-run," School Board President Allen Telgenhof said.

The voucher program, the portion of the proposal causing heated debate between politicians, parents and educators, will channel public funds to private hands. Proponents of the proposal claim this shift in funding is a reaction to deplorable conditions in failing school districts.

The proposal claims it will alleviate the inadequacies of education by giving parents choice. In turn saving the 200,000 students trapped in failing school districts by allowing them to attend the non-public institution which may best serve their individual needs.

Janet Troppman, principle for St. Mary's school in Charlevoix shares this vision and sees a viable future for the voucher system in Michigan.

"We at St. Mary's support the passing of Proposal One and are encouraging parents to vote yes. At this point it wouldn't benefit the students of St. Mary's, the greatest effect would be in allowing Detroit students to attend their school of choice, a school that would work for them individually, every child is different and unique. Every parent would have the opportunity to help their child go to school," Troppman said.

"The bottom line is that it (Proposal One) gives parents a choice and gives kids options. Proposal One helps failing school districts and parents in those districts to give their child a choice," she added.

The term choice has been used by both proponents and opponents of the proposal. Troppman's vision is challenged by Superintendent of Charlevoix Public Schools, John Sturock, who views non-public school admittance policies as a barrier to this concept of choice and equity in education.

"There are no regulations or accountability requirements of non-public schools. Public dollars will be funneled into a system where there is no accountability. They have admission policies which allow them to reject students they don't want but public schools accept all students," Sturock said.

Many opponents of Proposal One have urged private school administrators to proceed with caution when advocating a pro-voucher stance, arguing that the acceptance of public funds is almost invariably followed by government regulation. However, Troppman does not feel the voucher program threatens St. Mary's autonomy.

"I believe it wouldn't come to that and if it did we would have to reevaluate the funding. The trend now is towards bringing a more spiritual aspect back into schools, not necessarily religious, but spiritual — an attempt to try and stop violence by spiritually touching the students lives. I can't see them trying to change what we have here," Troppman said.

It is this same regulation discrepancy existing between the private and public realms of education that has raised eyebrows from both Charlevoix Public Schools officials and Steve Bennett, administrator of Northwest Academy.

Bennett sees virtue in Proposal One but remains reserved from advocating the proposal as major issues still need to be addressed.

"As far as the voucher idea I think it has merits but it needs stipulations. If private schools start receiving public funds they have to follow the same regulations all of the rest of us do. That is the way it should be for any school receiving state funding," Bennett said.

He added, "Proposal One has the potential to be good if set up to make sure people follow the rules. The proposal needs something more, it is very vague and I know from experience to be skeptical of anything vague."

However, Bennett, along with Troppman, agreed that teacher testing requirements included in the proposal were of value while Sturock questions the teacher testing proposal as another gray area of the proposal.

"They (proponents of Proposal One) are hiding behind teacher testing, but have made no provision in the proposal as to what they will do with the testing. Teachers are already tested when they come out of college," Sturock said. "This isn't about teacher testing, it's about dollars and cents and diverting public funds to private, for profit and parochial schools."

Area teens may be abusing asthma pill

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Poking around local Charlevoix teen outdoor gathering spots produced disheartening findings — some teens are ingesting potentially toxic quantities of an over-the-counter asthma pill whose primary ingredient is Ephedrine HCL.

"Some kids try to get a cheap speed effect from it (Ephedrine) and other over-the-counter things," David Kelly of Bay Area Substance Education Services said.

The positive uses of this herb have been said to relieve bronchial asthma, decrease congestion in breathing passages and suppress allergic reactions. The drug prevents cells from releasing allergy causing chemical histamines, relaxes the muscles in the bronchial tubes and decreases blood vessel size and blood flow, thus decongesting.

But, ephedrine can also sharply raise blood pressure and heart rate and stimulates thermogenesis, heat production commonly triggered with exercise, food consumption and the use of certain substances.

It is thought that ephedrine contributes to a calorie-burning effect by causing the adrenal glands to dump epinephrine into the blood stream, which leads to an increase in body temperature.

"This is not a direct problem kids come in with a lot. It's mostly used by teenage girls for diet control and is a drug kids are using while weight lifting," Kelly said.

However, problems do arise when side effects like those reported to the U.S. Food and Drug Administration are a reality. The FDA has received reports of adverse reactions relating to the use of stimulants ranging from nervousness, dizziness, tremor, alterations in blood pressure, headaches and gastrointestinal distress to chest pain, myocardial infarction, hepatitis, stroke, seizures, psychosis and death.

Users claim results from use include tingling on the top of their head. According to Kelly this most likely results from oxygen loss to the brain.

At least 32 deaths have been associated with ephedrine and some 900 adverse reactions have been reported.

Ephedrine has been removed from shelves in some states because of these many complications. There is no existing pre-market review by the FDA of this supplement's safety or effectiveness, no good dosing information and no monitoring advice.

"People are targeting retailers who sometimes don't realize kids are abusing it," Kelly said.

Overdose symptoms include severe anxiety, confusion, delirium, muscle tremors and rapid and irregular pulse. If these symptoms occur call 911 immediately and seek first aid treatment.

Excessive doses may cause sharp rise in blood pressure sufficient to produce cerebral hemorrhage. Repeated ingestion may cause contraction of the bladder sphincter and interfere with voluntary urination.

BASES teen center offers parents an introductory crash course in drug awareness and also offers a weekly parent group for parents struggling with teenage substance abuse. For more information on these programs call 547-1144.

"This seems to be part of the universal desire to mood alter among a lot of kids. Marijuana use has gone way up as has the use of inhalants, butanes and nitrous," Kelly said.

Ephedra equisetina is a shrub originating in the desert from which scientists extract ephedrine. Ephedrine is a thermogenic aid originally used to alleviate symptoms of asthma through bronchiolating action, meaning it dilates the bronchioles that supply the lungs with oxygen.

Ephedrine is also commonly referred to by its traditional Chinese name, Ma huang. The Chinese plant species E. sinica, an evergreen plant derivative, has been used in China for over 5,000 years to treat asthma and hay fever, also acting as a stimulant boosting energy and helping with weight control (in part by reducing appetite.) These characteristics make ephedrine chemically similar to stimulant drugs such as amphetamines.

Zero tolerance policy may change

POLICY

"We don't need a new policy; we don't have a problem now," student Hal Evans III said.

The word, "now," used by Evans indicates that a problem did once exist, but the seniors pointed to the policies of Athletic Director Keith Haske as the impetus for change in the high school.

"When Haske came in he announced, 'I can't believe how much substance abuse is in this high school; we are going to change that,' and he has. We are the first senior class to have had Haske all four years. We've seen it get better, it has improved. Look at the statistics; we've improved. Why change the policy now?" senior class secretary/treasurer Tanya Wyniawskij questioned.

According to school board president Allen Telgenhof, the proposed changes, eliminating the in-and-out of season distinction, would afford the students a policy that shows the board's blanket intolerance for substance abuse.

"What we are doing is talking about making the policy 50 percent regardless, meaning it is more strict out-of-season. The sentiment is we are going to err one way or another, no statistics tell you the perfect policy. There is a gray area," Telgenhof said. "What John (Superintendent Sturrock) has said is if we don't know the perfect method, we have to do the best we can with the policy and acknowledge that kids make mistakes. The 50 percent in and out of season policy gives kids a chance and yet it is a strong enough message to get their attention."

The student activities' policy targets students involved in any form of extracurricular from football to performing arts.

Senior class representative Ben Macks argues that there is a greater incidence of abuse by students not involved in extracurriculars.

According to Sturrock, extracurriculars are offered as a privilege that can be taken away if the rules are not followed. In the case of students not involved, they can only be penalized for those activities that take place during school hours or on school property.

"What carrot do you have to hold over students not involved? These students (those involved in extracurriculars) are models for the rest of the students. Maybe it will make them think about decisions they make and say I don't want to give up my opportunity to participate," Sturrock said.

But, students claim it is not the policy that makes an individual choose not to partake in restricted activities rather, their actions are in most cases directed by their personal values.

"In our school, students who go to a party and don't drink are respected for that. You are respected for standing up for what you believe in. We have learned to have fun without drinking," student council vice president Melissa McDonough said.

Beyond augmenting the penalty for out of season incidents, the policy will also address the "self-disclosure" clause which has caused problems in the past.

Students who choose to come forward and admit their substance abuse violation without having been reprimanded by an authority figure, a police officer or a parent, will have the incident count as their first violation, will suffer no loss of eligibility and will be required to attend three self-help meetings.

This portion of the policy was put in place to recognize that everyone makes mistakes and to leave open the option for students to admit their fault. However, according to Macks, use of this clause is highly unlikely.

"If you go to a party, who in their right mind is going to go into Haske's office and say I drank last night?" Macks said.

Haske said he saw successes with the old policy and fears increasing the out of season penalty would cause some kids to not come out for the season.

"We had some controversial calls to make, but in the vast majority of cases the policy has been successful. You would like to think a tougher penalty will deter kids from drinking, but whatever we decide will not stop kids from drinking entirely," Haske said.

Members of the student council supported Haske's claim, pointing out it is not the size of the penalty that makes the difference but their participation makes the difference. Students not involved in school sponsored activities have even more time on their hands to partake in undesired practices.

"Twenty, 50 or 100 percent, kids are still going to do it. Kids out of their sport are at even a greater risk. They will have nothing better to do," Wyniawskij said.

McDonough added, "Kids do party, but no policy will change the fact that kids drink."

Telgenhof argues that in some incidences student-athletes penalized by the policy have remained active supporters of the team, but were not permitted to partake in games. The senior panel felt this was an optimistic stance and believes the vast majority of students penalized by the policy will walk away from the activity.

"If you lose 50 percent of your season, like you are actually going to stick with it and undergo the humiliation of sitting on the bench," McDonough said.

In the opinion of some students and some administrators a harsher penalty is not what the policy is lacking. In closing the students called for more consistency in implementing the penalty and also asked school board officials and school administrators to discuss the student's activities policy with the individuals it directly affects, the students.

"It's not enforced, in this school the penalty depends on who you are. The policy needs to be enforced 100 percent, not a zero tolerance policy based on your status. Consistency is key. If your family is well-respected in the community you can drink and get away with it," Wyniawskij said.

Final decisions on the possible policy changes will be discussed during the November 13 school board meeting.

YOUR HEALTH

Should my child be under chiropractic care?

Craig Gilling, D.C.

'To your health'

Why should my child see a chiropractor? He/she does not have any back pain.

Chiropractic is not just about back pain. The foundation of chiropractic and its principles is that the body is self healing. We all know when we get a cut on our hand, that it will heal on its own, without any help. The same principle works for the whole body.

Your body has the potential to heal all things that occur to it and if not, there is something interfering with the way it is functioning. Most people think a cold or flu, sinus infections, headaches, ear infections or plain old feeling run down is a normal part of life. I'm here to tell you it's not! If your child is getting sick, he/she needs to be getting adjusted regularly.

Subluxated (stuck) vertebrae cause nerve interference, which will lead to a lower immune system. The only way a child or adult can get sick is if their immune system is low enough and it is unable to resist infection. If your immune system is functioning at its optimum level, you will not get sick. There are studies that prove that if you are under regular care your immune system is up to 200 percent stronger.

I heard that adjusting a child can hurt them or is bad for them.

Actually the exact opposite is true. Chiropractic is proven to be the safest form of health care available today. Chiropractic adjustments are even safer than taking an aspirin.

Did you know that there is a 1 in 200 chance of having an adverse reaction to aspirin, yet there is less than a 1 in a million chance of having an adverse reaction to a cervical adjustment? In fact, the only thing bad for them is not getting a spinal adjustment. Every time a vertebra stops moving correctly it effects their health and proper subluxated vertebra in the neck.

A new book shows that there is a major correlation between a subluxated vertebra in the neck and sudden infant death syndrome. (The Best - Kept Secret to Raising a Healthy Child by Dr. Craig Wehrenberg and Dr. Tracey Mulhall Wehrenberg)

How do you check a child to determine if they have a subluxation? Do you take x-rays?

Depending on the age of the child, we do a variety of tests. The first test we do is a surface EMG. With the EMG, we scan the surface of the child's spine to check for muscle imbalances that could be the result of subluxated (misaligned) vertebrae. We also use posture checks, leg length checks and a variety of other tests that can check for spinal misalignments. In most cases x-rays are not necessary unless we find the potential for a serious problem developing. Every test we do is painless to the child, including the adjustment.

Do you adjust a child the same as you adjust an adult?

Adjusting a child is significantly different from adjusting an adult. Because a child's spine is still developing and there is very little muscle development, there is very little force needed to make an adjustment. In most cases we use one or two fingers to apply a little pressure to one side of the vertebra. As the child gets older we change the pressure and the technique accordingly. In most cases there is no audible (popping) sound occurring during the adjustment and it is completely safe and painless.

My spouse does not believe in chiropractic or in kids seeing a chiropractor.

Hopefully, we have answered some of their concerns here, but some people still need additional information. We are always happy to talk to anyone that has a question or would like to learn more. We have articles and books that talk about the benefits of chiropractic care and is proven to be very effective in improving your immune system along with helping many childhood ailments specifically ear infections, colic, colds and flu's and headaches. But the major benefit that chiropractic has to offer, unlike any other health care options, is that it is the safest of all options available, because there are no side effects.

Dr. Craig Gilling is a member of the Gilling Chiropractic Center located in Gaylord and Charlevoix. To contact the Charlevoix office, call Dr. Brian D. Oliver at (231) 547-3483 or visit the center at 119 Antrim Street.

School faces another lawsuit

Telgenhof responded, "The misappropriation of money is simply not the case. When we gave people a breakdown of where the funding would be used we told them it would be used for sewer."

The plaintiffs also highlight concerns which point to a portion of public funds, garnered in the form of a 2.84 mill tax increase levied over a 20 year period, being used to serve a private 80 home development. They base the allegation that public funding will go to private parties on a deed restriction attached to the purchasing agreement the school made when buying the 74-acre parcel on Marion Center Road.

The following is an excerpt from the plaintiff's brief: "Access shall be provided the Alexander/Reese adjoining property for public sewer connections that would accommodate 80 home sites with easements and pump ability."

Telgenhof does not read this as a promise to the Alexander and Reese sisters that an 80 home development will directly follow the implementation of sewer infrastructure but rather, if a sewer were extended for use by the school it would have the capability to accommodate other facilities beyond the school itself.

"Their (Alexander/Reese) concern was that down the road if they develop their property they would not be able to tap into the sewer. They also asked if the sewer would be able to handle an 80 home development. We responded saying we have no control over the size of the sewer," Telgenhof said.

"This is an 80 home development that may or may not happen. In terms of pump ability if we run the extension we want it to be sufficient to cover us. We don't control the size of the run."

A third count raised against the district by the plaintiffs asserts that the school district lacks the authority to engage in such an improvement as a sewer extension.

Telgenhof supports this claim and stated he never looked to usurp the process. Rather the governing body, the Marion Township Board and the city of Charlevoix, will make those decisions and ultimately steer the project.

"We are not the ones running the sewer. It would be the City of Charlevoix. We don't have the authority to run a sewer. Because we will be the first to tap in and the biggest facility tapping in we will have to pay a big chunk," Telgenhof said.

hof said.

The plaintiffs also claim the district violated due process. This allegation is based on the lack of prior notice afforded to voters that funds raised through the bond would be used to construct the public sewer.

In the suit prior to this case filed by Jim Olson on behalf of the Charlevoix Area Natural Resources Preservation Association, the Marion Township "master plan" was entered as a document that reflects Marion Township residents wish to curb the threat of development in their rural area in an effort to maintain the area's rural character. However, according to Telgenhof, this same master plan contains plans for a sewer run.

"Part of the Marion Township master plan shows sewer going down Marion Center Road so we felt pretty comfortable that it (the sewer extension) will be approved out there (by the Marion Township board)," Telgenhof said.

According to Superintendent of Charlevoix Public Schools John Sturock, if the plaintiffs do receive injunctive relief in the 33rd Circuit Court for the County of Charlevoix sewer plans could be halted but, the construction process of the facility at the Marion Center site will continue.

Neumann, Flanders discuss plans for economy

ECONOMY

"We need to set regulations so that the plant can be allowed to operate under normal conditions without having to continuously answer to whiff calls. The community keeps filing complaints that turn out to be invalid, at some point it gets to be harassment," Flanders said. "We need to have clean air and water, but we also need to have businesses up here and an economic environment that encourages economic growth."

Flanders stressed he is not suggesting that the state get rid of all its regulations. He said he is only advocating reasonable environmental regulations.

Neumann said his plan for the economy in northern Michigan is to improve tourism throughout the area, recruit more permanent businesses and create some renaissance zones.

"The state needs to do some advertising and it needs to promote this area," he said.

By promoting this area, not only will tourists discover its great qualities, but businesses wanting to start-up or relocate will too. Neumann also suggested offering tax incentives to businesses wanting to start-up or relocate to the area.

"We need to make sure we get money up north to help out with our infrastructure," Neumann said. Northern Michigan needs more money to build better roads to ease traffic congestion and better harbors for tourism and permanent businesses bring more taxes to do this, he said.

Due to the current employment situation in the Charlevoix area with the closing of a few factories, Neumann said he would like to get some state money to create training programs to help out displaced workers.

Neumann added while the economy has been generally good in northern Michigan it definitely could be better.

"On average, the income growth in the state has dropped. We used to be seventeenth, now we are nineteenth," Neumann said.

While addressing the economy issue, Neumann and Flanders were given the opportunity to address some criticism of them.

Neumann, who has been called not favorable enough to businesses, said his critics are misinformed about his record.

"If anything I am more pro-small business," he said pointing out he recently offered an amendment to a bill in the legislature that was more favorable to small businesses with the single business tax.

The amendment proposed raising the tax's current revenue "cliff" of $250,000 to $1.5 million in revenue. Basically, it would state businesses making less than $1.5 million a year would pay less in taxes, but the bill the amendment was attached to failed.

Flanders addressed criticism of his ideas for environmental regulations saying, "I understand we need to have clean air and clean water. But I also know, if we don't have some businesses in the area, we can't afford to live here."

Flanders added he currently owns about 600 acres of land he manages for a tree farm. This has given him a lot of training in good land management.

Cross-country teams make strong finishes

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

Both the boys' and girls' Charlevoix High School varsity cross-country teams came up with great finishes Oct. 14 at the Reese Invitational.

The girls' team did exceptionally well with a first place finish out of 21 teams at the meet, while the boys team had an admirable third place finish.

Taking medals for the girls' team were: Kati Swenor in third place, Liz Ulrich in fifth and Heather Probert in eleventh.

Coach Mary Plude said this was a very big meet for Probert, who is coming back from an injury.

Mary was also very happy with the performance of Betsy Tebeau, who came in thirty-third, Amy Kennedy, in thirty-fourth, and Kate Madison, who came in thirty-fifth.

"They really did a terrific job and really worked well together," she said. "Their effort allowed us to win...."

Mary said this win over 20 other teams really gave the girls a boost of confidence, especially knowing some of those teams that they beat will probably be going to state.

"It was a good race and I am really proud of them," Mary said.

On the boys' team, Coach Ken Plude congratulated Zach Dennis, who came in eleventh place, for having "one of his best races of the year."

"He kept the team in third because he stepped it up," Plude said.

The team was led by Tim Dain- ing, who came in fifth, Josh Popenhagen placed fifteenth and Gordie Selph placed seventeenth.

Both the boys' and girls' teams took part at the conference meet in Elk Rapids yesterday. The results of this meet were unavailable before press time.

Gusty breezes, wrong marks at the Wednesday races

A. Nony
Mouse 'Yachting
notes'

Gusty breezes greeted the 18 yachts still hanging in for this, the next to last Charlevoix Yacht Club Wednesday race of 2000.

The 12 boats in the J-22 start were jammed up near the buoy, as many perceived it to be the favored end of the line. Just before the gun sounded, a puff complicated the timing and the leaders suddenly had to kill seconds. Tough to do, when the boats behind are all trying to push you over the line! Anyway, only one ended up CSL (PMS to those who didn't read of the new designation) and he did return to start properly. A few others didn't notice the course change and sailed merrily off making great time to the wrong first mark.

As the evening light quickly diminished, so did the breeze, but only down to the six to eight knot range.

Six of the J-22 Fleet broke the one hour barrier and all finished in less than 66 minutes. SUPERFLUOUS crossed the line with an elapsed time of 0:55:13 to take top honors. A minute and a bit later HUSSY nailed down second with TOO RECKLESS crossing third. Trailing them were: SWINE FLEW, PALEFACE LITE, JUBBLIES, HABANERO, CRAZY HORSE, HOG-TIDE and HIGH MAINTENANCE. FIRST DATE and HS MOISTURE MISSILE went the wrong way. The score sheet says RET. ROCK STEADY, GECKO and THUNDERSTRUCK were DNS.

The entire JAM Fleet (all two of them) also went the wrong way but the Race Committee accepted the finish times they had recorded and blessed BALD EAGLE with a corrected time victory over FLASH. A tip of the skipper's cap to FLASH — for reporting accurate times for both finishers.

To re-correct our correction of last week, Divisions 1 and 2 are now (once again) combined. J-HAWK trailed KAMIKAZE across the line nearly a minute but corrected out in First Place by over a minute. Gotcha and M3 were DNS.

In the P-26 Fleet, ORIGINAL SIN and CYGNUS seem to switch positions each week. This week it was CYGNUS in first by just 30 seconds (still, it was the biggest gap seen in the last several weeks).

The standings, including the drop, with one race left in the Fall Series:

Division 1: GOTCHA 4, KAMIKAZE 8, BLASEN IV 15 and M3 17. (Possible toss-up if GOTCHA does not start as she dropped a fifth place; KAMIKAZE dropped a second. If a tie; GOTCHA has it with her 4 firsts.)

P-26 Fleet: ORIGINAL SIN 5 and CYGNUS 6. Wow! (It's still a race as a Cygnus win next week would tie points and also firsts (3) and seconds (2).)

JAM Fleet: FLASH 5 and BALD EAGLE 7. (It's really over, as FLASH has dropped a second place and could drop next week instead.)

J-22 Fleet: TOO RECKLESS 7, HUSSY 10, SUPERFLUOUS 12, SWINE FLEW 13, FIRST DATE

ish the retaining wall project. Any time after 4 p.m. and done by 6 p.m. or so....hopefully. (Wet grounds stopped us Saturday after unloading the ties.)

Yachting Notes is submitted each week during the "warm" months by the Charlevoix Yacht Club. To contact the club, see its website at www.charlevoixyacht-club.org or call 547-9170.

Rayders clinch playoff spot and share of conference title

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

With the Charlevoix varsity football team's latest 24-13 win Oct. 13 against Boyne City, they have clinched a spot in the playoffs and at least a part of the conference title.

"The kids are real excited and they deserve this. It is nice to see them rewarded like this," Coach Todd Klinger said. The last time Charlevoix has been in the playoffs was in 1992.

According to Klinger this clinching game was not an easy victory for the Rayders, as Boyne City proved to be tough opponents.

"It was a hard fought game. Boyne was fired up to try and knock us off course," Klinger said.

"Our kids battled the whole game and we were able to come out on top."

Boyne's solid defense gave the Rayders a very tough time in their attempts to run the ball.

"The kids are real excited and they deserve this."

Todd Klinger,
Varsity football coach

"It was tough to make the big plays, but eventually we were able to wear them down," Klinger said. Charlevoix took the lead for good thanks to a third quarter drive that lasted into the fourth quarter and ended in a touchdown.

For the offense, Ryan Leitner had 26 carries for 104 yards rushing and Ben Coen had eight carries for 34 yards rushing. Teuscher was 14 for 23 passing, racking up 150 yards and four touchdowns. Ryan Racfacz led in receiving with four catches for 85 yards and two touchdowns. Keith Daly had three catches for 58 yards, Patrick Gowell had three for 20 yards and Coen had one catch for a six yard touchdown.

Defensively, Klinger said the Rayders played very well. Jeremiah Teuscher chalked up two interceptions and Ben VanGuilder had one. Klinger added, the defensive line of Rob Boss, Mike Kochanny, Brian Cleary, Chad Mackowiak and Jon Kilkenny played a great game and were able to keep things stuffed up at the scrimmage line.

Coen and Racfacz each recovered fumbles and Horon, Kilkenny and Troy Smith had eight tackles.

The Rayders will face Suttons Bay Friday in their last home game of the season before the playoffs.

Klinger said this game will provide great preparation for the playoffs since Suttons Bay is one of the teams Charlevoix may face.

The playoffs will start next week at a time, date and place yet to be announced.

Soccer team shows some improvement

The Charlevoix Rayders' varsity soccer team has had some ups and downs lately.

While the team started off the month with a loss Oct. 2 to Pine River, 1-0, they rebounded for a win in their next game Oct. 13 against East Jordan, 3-1.

In the Oct. 3 game, Pine River scored on a header off an indirect kick in the second half. While Charlevoix played strong, outshooting Pine River with 18 shots, the Rayders just couldn't get into the goal.

According to Coach Tom Conlan, strong games were registered by seniors Tony Shearer and Tic Bakker and junior Roscoe Serrels.

Charlevoix showed some improvement against East Jordan Oct. 12.

The Rayders were a little flat in the first half of the game until sophomore Craig Stockman took advantage of a feed from Travis Smith and buried the ball in the back of the net at the 30 minute mark.

Charlevoix came out strong in the second half, outshooting East Jordan 23-2.

Junior Jason Haas tallied the second goal off an assist from sophomore Trevor Kline. Serrels chalked up a score with a penalty kick. Junior Kiel Tilley gained the victory in goal.

Golf team to head to state competition this week

GOLF

"Our goal is to do even better than that," Glynn said.

To reach this goal, Glynn took the team to the golf course they will be playing at in St. Johns, The Emerald, last Saturday. This gave the team a chance to try out the course and some of the best ways to play it.

They discussed what they learned and a plan of attack in a meeting Monday and have been practicing their technique at the Belvedere Golf Club since. Belvedere is currently closed to the public, but is allowing the Rayders to use the course to prepare for the state championship.

Glynn said it is this kind of support, not only from Belvedere, but from the entire community, that has a lot to do with the Rayders' success. Glynn also commended the strong leadership on the team from Charlevoix Captain Siwarga as being a source of success.

"It has carried over to other kids and I see leadership in them," Glynn said.

As for a plan of attack Friday, Glynn said the Rayders will be playing in a relaxed and smart manner.

"The team that makes the least amount of bad shots is the team that is going to win. Sometimes it is hard for young kids to understand that," Glynn said.

He added, "They have worked really hard at practice all year and it is paying off for them."

This will be the fourth time the Rayders have gone to the state championship in the seven years they have been coached by Glynn.

EVENTS IN BRIEF

About those coming events....

As a courtesy to readers, announcements of local coming events of broad general interest that arrive by the 10 a.m. Monday deadline are published in this section of the newspaper on a one-time, first-come, first-served basis. Because there is no guarantee of placement, readers should not rely on this free service as their only means of reaching the public.

Teen Read Week

Teen Read Week at the Charlevoix Public Library will be celebrated with a giveaway. Any teen who uses their library card during Teen Read Week, Oct. 15 to the 21, will be eligible to win a number of prizes provided by local restaurants or a $10 gift certificate to the Bridge Street Bookstore. To register, the teen only has to come to the library, use their library card and register for the prizes at the same time.

Story hour for 3-5 year olds is on Tuesday morning from 10:30 to 11:30. The "dress-up" story hour Halloween party will be Oct. 31.

The library is looking for people interested in doing a Saturday children's activity hour for the winter elementary school age programs. Last year the big hit of all the programs was the one with the two little pigs.

Maybe you can think of something that would draw kids interest for one hour on a Saturday morning after the holidays.

Ghost ship

SCRAPBOOK

Charlevoix of old

This unique photograph, taken from behind the knoll behind 109 Park Avenue, shows many of the highlights of a relatively new Charlevoix.

From the far left: The Fountain City House (now the Weathervane Terrace hotel), built in 1865 and the town's first hotel, named after the first large ship that was to traverse the completely widened and deepened channel; the Charlevoix Roller Mill, later the Argo Milling Company (now the Weathervane restaurant); stacks of lumber awaiting shipment on the wharf of the Charlevoix Lumber Company (now the Edgewater hotel); bridge #3, the first swing bridge on its island of pilings, torn down in 1899; the cupola of the Chicago Club clubhouse; the popular passenger steamer "City of Grand Rapids" of the Traverse City-Charlevoix-Petoskey and Mackinac Line; people gathered to watch the boat pass, just as they do today, but allowed to stand right at the drop-off; the Lewis Grand Opera House (now the greensward beside the bridge). Note the wooden board sidewalk along the bluff of what is now Pine River Lane. The channel abutments were treacherous and dangerous to walk upon, only two parallel planks nailed to staggered pilings, with no landward fill, only pools of water that stagnated and bred mosquitos in summer. Ice, rot, constant wave action, and strong currents kept these wooden abutments in never-ending state of repair.

Lawsuit costs over $120,000

School still not sure if insurance will cover costs

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Lawsuits filed against the Charlevoix school district by the Charlevoix Area Natural Resources Preservation Association have cost the district over $120,000 according to a recent report.

"We have no other choice but to defend ourselves. If these costs are not covered by insurance, then tax payer dollars have to be used in what I think is a frivolous lawsuit," Superintendent of Charlevoix Public Schools John Strock said.

However, preservation group member Paul Richards isn't counting dollars and cents; he is looking at the long-term picture which he feels outweighs any financial burden.

"Whatever the financial costs are, if we can stop sprawl it would be worth it," Richards said.

Records show the district's legal fees paid to school suit specialists

Thrun, Maatsch and Norberg, total $66,994.86.

Beyond the fees required by counsel, many long evenings were spent in heated debate at the Marion Township Hall. At these meetings, experts on behalf of the district from various fields of proficiency, provided by the BETA Design Group, made presentations. The experts' time, travel and work were not covered under the bond contract and cost the district an additional, $60,581.20.

According to school board president Allen Telgenhof, funding for the amount has been taken out of the district's general budget.

"The portion of these fees to be paid by the insurance company is not resolved. As it sits now, we have spent in excess of $120,000 and are out those funds at this point," Telgenhof said.

Charlevoix fall sports excitement

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

Area coaches, officials and students are enjoying the immense amount of success Charlevoix High School's fall sports have seen this year.

"We haven't had this good of a year since I have been in Charlevoix," Charlevoix Athletic Director Keith Haske remarked recently. "It has really been fun. It is nice to be a part of success."

Last weekend the Charlevoix varsity golf team took a third place finish in the state finals for Division Three and Rayders' golfer David Shearer was named third best in the state out of 500 golfers at the event.

On Oct. 20, the Charlevoix varsity football team finished up its regular season and is heading for the playoffs scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Friday at Whittemore-Prescott. The team, even though it lost its last game, also took the title of conference champion.

The Charlevoix varsity cross country teams are also looking forward to their regional meets this weekend and both the boys' and girls' teams are already expecting to send at least some of their runners to the state finals.

Additionally, according to Haske, the girls' varsity basketball team remains undefeated in the league. The girls' varsity basketball coach Jason Otter could not be reached for comment before press time.

"I think we have good kids; that's the bottom line," Haske said. Mix this with outstanding coaches and you have some good teams, he added.

Some tips for carving your Halloween pumpkin

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

The Jack-o'-lantern tradition is thought to be a derivative of Irish tradition and custom.

Some tell the tale of a man named Jack who enjoyed his time at local taverns sipping on liquid spirits and playing tricks. One night of indulgence Jack tricked the devil and trapped him in a tree. Legend has it Jack's trickery while on earth closed heaven's gate to him but his trick pulled on the devil also blocked his passage into hell.

Rather than opening hell's gates to Jack, the devil gave him one burning ember to guide his trip through the darkness. The ember was offered in a hallowed turnip to increase the longevity of the burn.

The Irish followed legend and used turnips as their version of "Jack's lanterns." When the Irish immigrants made their way to America they found pumpkins to run the fall harvest and thus the jack-o'-lantern was born in America, a hallowed out pumpkin lit with an ember or more commonly a candle.

Here are some helpful hints as to how to make sure your pumpkin carving festivities are successful:

- Pick a ripe pumpkin, one without bruises, cuts and other war wounds. The bigger the better, giant pumpkins are the easiest to carve. While picking it up don't grab the stem, it may break and splat before you even get it home.

- For quick clean-up place the pumpkin on several layers of newspaper.

- Adults should then cut a circle around the stem of the pumpkin using a sharp knife with a long, sturdy blade or do it yourself youngsters can use a pumpkin carving knife. The bottom of the pumpkin can also be cut off, this will allow the pumpkin to sit up straight and will even make the next step even easier.

- Make sure the hole is big enough to get your hands inside to scoop out the guts.

- When scooping out the insides of your pumpkin use a soup ladle to get out the seeds.

- When your pumpkin is cleaned out and you are ready to dig in step back and determine the best place to carve his/her face. We may think of ourselves as seasoned carvers but outlines are the key. So draw an outline of your face of choice on a sheet of paper.

Our helpful carving tips can turn pumpkins like these into works of art. (Photo by Julie Musilek)

New airport terminal opens for business

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

The destruction of the old Charlevoix municipal airport terminal Oct. 16, signaled the completion of most of the construction on the new terminal and its opening.

"We are really pleased to be in a larger newer and brighter facility. It will be much more pleasant," Airport Manager Loraine Luepnitz said.

She added there is still some construction that needs to be completed such as: a new road to the airport, new sidewalks and a renovated parking lot. A majority of this construction is expected to be completed within a month.

"Every day there is one more thing chalked off the list," Luepnitz said. The parking lot and landscaping will probably be completed next spring, she added.

In addition to having more office space for the airport manager and Beaver Island Airways, the new airport terminal is barrier-free, allowing easy access for handicapped people, and it features a number of renovations over the old design to make it easier for pilots and passengers visiting the building.

Instead of passengers carrying all of their luggage into the terminal, while trying to get the front doors open with full hands, they are greeted by automatic doors. And once inside the building, passengers will no longer have to pile all of their luggage in the center of the lobby while waiting for their flight to Beaver Island. All passenger luggage will be taken to a special freight area, thus keeping it out of the way.

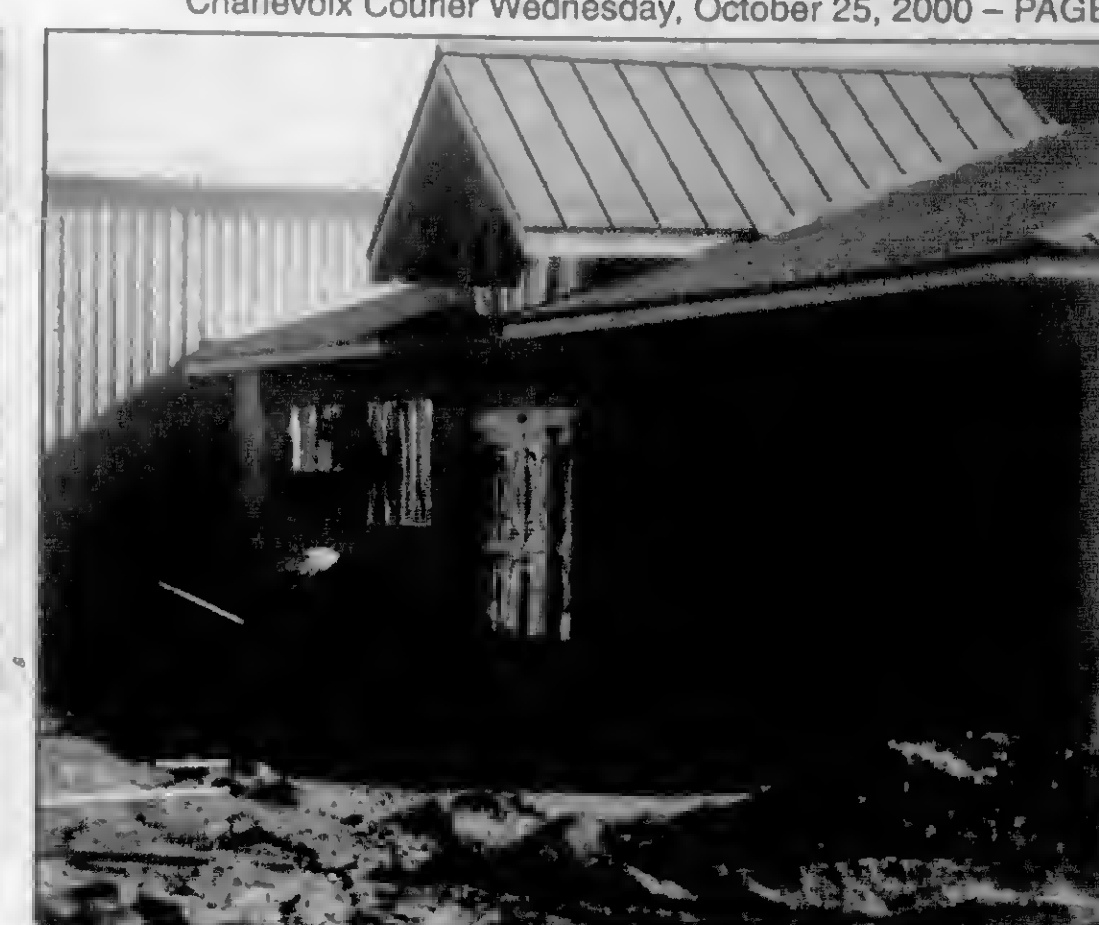

The lobby also has new chairs for passengers to use while waiting and will soon feature a television on the wall for entertainment. Passengers will also discover a new computerized ticket system for their flight on Beaver Island Airways.

Pilots visiting the terminal will also find some lush amenities for their use. Pilots have their own briefing room, complete with a computerized weather report and every other piece of equipment they will need to complete their flight plans.

Luepnitz said there will be a public open house sometime in the coming months, when the rest of the construction is complete.

OPINIONS

Congrats to all of the Rayders this fall

Wow, what a start to the school year for Charlevoix public schools, especially the athletic program!

Right now Charlevoix schools have a varsity golf team that has taken third in the state, a football team that is the conference champion and is in the playoffs this Friday, a girls' basketball team that is undefeated in its league and strong showings by the girls' and boys' cross country teams as they go into their regional championship meet and prepare for their state championships.

According to Charlevoix Athletic Director Keith Haske, there has not been a school sports season with this much success since he has been in Charlevoix.

And here at the Courier, when sports teams do this well, we try and get them on the front page, but we ran out of room this week because there is so much to talk about. We had to combine the story of all this success into its own separate story to make sure each of these sports were at least mentioned in a front page story.

All of the students on Charlevoix fall sports teams should be commended for having such great seasons. They have been and continue to be a source of pride for not only the school, but the entire community.

But, let's not just pat the athletes in Charlevoix schools on the back; let's congratulate all of the students.

Charlevoix students are some of the most active students of any community in the state of Michigan. In addition to scoring high grades in their school work, they can be seen in the community volunteering their time, or working on creative outside projects, such as the recently released independent film "Die Soft" that was produced, directed by and starred Charlevoix students.

Academically, the success of the students can be seen in the percentage of those have qualified for state scholarships from the MEAP test. According to Charlevoix High School Principal Gary Grundman, Charlevoix was the fifth highest in the state of Michigan of students who qualified for state scholarships based on their MEAP scores last year.

This is a great time for Charlevoix students and a great time for the community.

Congratulations Rayders and keep up the good work!

The value of Charlevoix's trees go beyond just looks

Roger Knutson

'Ear to the ground'

Charlevoix's early settlers have left us a wealth of legacies, among them the magnificent parks, the beaches and the trees along almost all of our streets.

Like anyone who has inherited something from someone other than a close relative, we are likely to be interested in just how much that legacy is worth. I am not qualified to comment on the monetary value of the parks or beaches, but I do know something about trees.

A tree's value can be determined in a number of ways. As lumber, trees are worth so many cents per board foot. As shade, they may be worth more or less depending on how hot it is. We could calculate how much life-supporting oxygen they produce, but there is a lot of oxygen around. The demand for oxygen is constant, but the supply is abundant. If you must buy oxygen by the bottle, you know how much it can be worth in some circumstances. The aesthetic value of trees is almost impossible to calculate.

One useful method of determining the value of living trees is to calculate replacement cost. Small trees can be replaced with a minimal expenditure, but moving or replacing a large, old tree is most often described as prohibitively expensive. Replacement costs rise rapidly as tree size goes up. Some years ago, I watched the process of moving a redwood tree in Seattle. The tree was as large or larger than our oldest maples. It took the two largest cranes in Washington state, a bulldozer and a crew of 15 working for a week to accomplish the move. It was a very valuable tree.

Replacement cost for trees averages about twice the square of the circumference of the trunk, expressed in dollars. For a tree six inches around the trunk that would be six times six doubled or $72. If we calculate replacement value, what is the size of Charlevoix's total tree legacy?

Charlevoix has approximately 3,200 streetside trees, nearly all of them planted by someone, and most of them provided by the city of Charlevoix.

About 1,200 of the streetside trees are maples. Some of those trees were planted over a century ago and represent the heart of our legacy from the past. To estimate the total value of our maples, I measured ten trees selected at random along Dixon Avenue. The ranged in size from 12 inches circumference to 114 inches with an average of 75 inches. Assuming that those trees are typical for our streetside maples, the 1,200 Charlevoix maples are worth $13,500,000.

You could do the arithmetic yourself if the number seems high. The other two thousand streetside trees are most likely smaller, but suppose they average only about 22 inches circumference. That's just a little over seven inches caliper or diameter; a pretty small tree. Assuming they are only that size, the additional monetary value is another $2 million. The wise city founders have left us a legacy worth $15,500,000.

Is our legacy growing in value as we hope or is it shrinking? Making a few more assumptions about how fast trees grow in our climate, the average increase in value is more than $100 per year for each tree, or a total increase of as much as $320,000 per year.

Clearly we have something of value, well worth maintaining. Each year we cut down some large old trees and add new small trees, so we are probably losing value if we don't plant more than we cut down.

Considering our proud legacy from the past, we should be planning in such a way that its value increases with each passing year. We won't have 100-year-old trees a century from now unless we plant them. We need to be able to think as far ahead as the Masons, the Dixons and others did when they initiated the planting of trees along all our streets.

Editorial response

Editor:

I feel bound to respond to the October 11 editorial about school vouchers. I'm not writing to put forth my personal opinion on vouchers but to touch on two other points raised in the editorial.

First of all, although I have no connection with any religious school, I deeply and sincerely resent the editor's implication that such institutions support vouchers because they would make money from them. Assigning such mercenary motives to religious schools is an action I find to be biased, offensive and reprehensible. Unless he has some evidence to substantiate such a claim, I believe the editor owes an apology to religious schools in general.

In addition, I take issue with the editor once again trotting out the boogie man of "separation of church and state" as though it had historical reality. There never was such a constitutional principle — nor is there now — except in the minds of some activist judges and lawyers.

The similar term appeared in a letter and not in a government document. The concept was meant to keep religion free from government control rather than keeping religious influence out of government. In fact, you have only to read the writings of the Founding Fathers to find they believed this country could not survive as a free nation without holding to the Judeo-Christian principles and ideals on which it was founded.

It was faith that made this nation great and it is only faith that can make it greater.

Drain Commissioner

Editor:

Several years ago I had the opportunity to hear a presentation by a downstate Drain Commissioner. He was committed to education, to a pro-active approach to the challenges of storm water and sediment control and to restoring water quality. Sadly in this county, streams were so altered and ditched in the past that the children there adopted drainage collection basins instead of streams!

The Drain Code of 1956 is now being revised and updated. It's really a whole new ball game. In the old days, the object was to get excess water off the land as quickly as possible. We ran runoff to the nearest body of water and made drains of our rivers and streams and lakes. In the larger cities we see the cost of this, where streams are buried and rivers are turned into concrete drainage channels.

Locally, many of our parking lots and city streets still drain directly to the lake. This is bad for water quality, it's bad for our land values and tourism industry, and it's bad for the health of our community.

The good news is that we are fixing these problems and that we still have high quality, free flowing rivers and streams. We do not have to repeat the expensive errors of downstate counties. Our lakes and streams and hills are a foundation of our economy. It is in the interest of all of us to ensure that our "Golden Goose" is protected by fair and conscientious adherence to soil and stormwater runoff control requirements and best practices for sustainable development.

The new way we are looking at stormwater control, drainage and runoff is to require on site retention. This basically "slows the flow" of runoff to rivers, streams and lakes, minimizing erosion and pollutants carried off site.

With greater development on our hills, and more impervious surfaces, the challenge of controlling runoff and sedimentation will increase. The responsibilities of the Drain Commissioner will be more demanding. My background in conservation and in working with river and lake organizations has given me an overview of our unique soil and water resources. The drumlins and moraines left after the retreat of the Wisconsin Ice Sheet more than 10,000 years ago left a unique and often fragile topography.

The Office of Drain Commissioner is an elected office, and I am proud to be participating as a Green Party candidate in that democratic process. I will work hard for the people of Charlevoix County and I will work to protect the economic needs of our communities and the quality of the water and the land. I am committed to education, water quality protection, and to being a responsible, responsive and fair public servant.

Support Williams

Editor:

This is a letter to voice my support for the re-election of Theda Williams as the Charlevoix Township Treasurer. When my husband, Howard, and I moved to Charlevoix 12 years ago, Theda Williams was one of the first people we met.

When we chose to build our new home in Charlevoix Township, I was thrilled to learn that Theda was the treasurer.

Our daughter, Sally, has taken piano lessons from Theda for the past 5 years.

Recently, Theda had the courage to publicly change her political party affiliation, knowing full well that this would cause her to take much "heat" from the other township board members.

Theda is an honest person who will stand firm on what she feels is right. I feel that my hard-earned tax dollars are in good hands when I send my check off to Theda. She's a good person who has done a great job.

It doesn't make sense to change what doesn't need changing. Re-elect Theda Williams as Charlevoix Township Treasurer.

Vote no on Prop. 1

Editor:

As elected officers of the Northern Michigan Schools Legislative Association, we are writing to convey our strong opposition to Proposal One which will be voted on at the Nov. 7 election.

Our organization consists of school boards and administrators from all over the northern half of the Lower Peninsula and the eastern half of the Upper Peninsula.

In our view, Proposal One is bad for all of Michigan and perhaps especially bad for Northern Michigan. During the last 10 years we have made tremendous strides in getting fair and adequate funding for our schools. Proposal One is a step backward in that it would divert millions of dollars in school funding to private and parochial schools. Either our schools suffer cuts to pay for this, or taxes have to be raised to hold us harmless while covering the new cost.

The proposal immediately benefits parents in only a handful of districts (including Detroit), but is so constructed that it could expand vouchers to even the smallest districts. If this happens, it will almost certainly result in declining revenues and call into question the continued viability of many independent small town public schools.

We also question the teacher testing talked about by proponents of Proposal One. Teacher testing is required now. The added bureaucracy and lack of details on how their testing would work is troubling.

Our position is shared by many others who also urge a "no" vote on vouchers. These others include the Michigan Association of School Boards, Michigan Parent Teacher Association, Governor John Engler, former Governor James Blanchard, Michigan Education Association, Michigan Federation of Teachers, Michigan Association of School Administrators, American Association of University Women and various local chambers of commerce.

We urge Northern Michigan residents to join us in saying "no" to vouchers on November 7th.

Hospital gears up for annual Holly Daze event

October may seem a bit early to be thinking about Christmas, but there are a few people who have Christmas trees and decorations on their minds.

Plans are currently underway for this year's annual Charlevoix Area Hospital's Holly Daze celebration. The members of the Holly Daze committee are organizing this year's event, which will be bigger and more grand than in past years.

The event centers around Christmas trees that are decorated by sponsors and donated to the hospital. Through silent and live auction, the trees are sold to the highest bidder. All the proceeds go to the hospital.

This year, the trees will be decorated by designers and displayed at the Charlevoix Country Club beginning Nov. 7 through Nov. 28. A few additional trees, including some that will be sold through raffle tickets, will be displayed at the hospital beginning Nov. 20 through Nov. 28. A silent auction of various holiday-themed items will take place at the hospital on Nov. 25. A live auction of the designer trees and other special items, complete with heavy hors d'oeuvres and a party atmosphere, will be at the Charlevoix

Country Club on Nov. 28.

As in past years, poinsettias will be available for purchase at the hospital beginning Nov. 19.

If businesses or individuals would like to sponsor or design a tree or make a silent auction donation, they may do so by contacting Amy Lalewicz at 547-0474 or Kathy Johnson at 547-8502.

Future of library to be discussed

The Charlevoix District Library Board of Trustees has decided to take a broad based, disciplined look into the next 20 years of the library.

The question to be examined is how to insure that the library can best meet the evolving needs of its community.

The board working with the library staff has enlisted the services of George Lawson, a library consultant who specializes in evaluating space needs for small libraries. Lawson has worked on several library projects in the area including the new Traverse City Library which was built in 1999.

Lawson's approach to helping a community determine its library and information needs is to gather information and opinions from the staff and trustees, incorporate this information into a space needs assessment and then ask the general public for additional comments and ideas.

In the context of this method of evaluating needs, the Library Trustees have set two community forums. At these meetings, community residents will be invited to share their visions of future library facilities and services with Lawson and the Board of Trustees and staff of the Charlevoix District Library.

The forums will be on from 1 to 2 p.m., Nov. 2, the evening session will run from 7 to 8 p.m. Both forums will be in the lower level meeting room of the library located at 109 Clinton Street and will be hosted by the Friends of the Library.

Reader shares Halloween ghost poem

Do Unto Others!
By ROSALYN GOLDSTICK

A Halloween scary story, I'd like to tell
About the BIG pumpkin that — well —
Listen to the story, and then you'll know
About the BIG pumpkin that put on a show!

'Twas early evening, and the kids were all out,
They tried to whisper, but I heard one shout,
'It's pumpkin time, and I know just where
There are lots of kids we can scare!'

So they started out with evil in mind,
And, of course, more evil, they would find!

There was one, especially, I'll be on the level,
That I didn't like — he was quite the devil.

Then they raided my pumpkin patch, you see,
And I thought of others coming — woe is me!

Then I remembered my prize that was for the Fair,
And I thought, "O.K., kids, you're the ones to scare!"

So I put it out on the old fence rail,
In real plain sight — they'd see it — no fail.

It was BIG and heavy — must have weighed a ton —
And again I thought, "It's my turn to have fun!"

So I propped it up for them to take.

What does it mean to be "far-sighted" people?

It has to do with seeing properly and with growing into the kind of people that God wants us to be. Unfortunately, many Christians are thought to be very near-sighted, only seeing what is close up, never seeing what is beyond the cozy corners of our present life.

Personally, I would like the people of God to be known as "far-sighted" people, always focusing on the way ahead, always looking down the road, always keeping in mind the next generation which will follow after us. Of course, it's important to take the here and now seriously and to be responsible in our present daily living. But as Christian men and women, we also want to have a long view.

Christians — whether children, teens, young adults or the more mature among us — almost by definition are to be a "far-sighted" people. We are to "lean into" God's future with great hope, to look forward to God's tomorrow with glad anticipation. Even more, we are to grow into all of our tomorrows in some spiritually mature way, as we claim the future that has already been revealed to us in Jesus Christ.

When I was in seminary the professors used to talk about something called "realized eschatology" living as if what we dream about for ourselves, our church and our community has already come true, or at least is within our reach.

In my way of looking at it, that essentially is what Jesus was preaching and what each of us is asked to believe and "lean into" in every part of our life. In my way of thinking, every Christian is called to take upon himself or herself the challenge of embodying and expressing the mission and ministry of Jesus, until the whole world is filled with Christ's love.

For over 25 years I have bet my life on that vision, and I hope and pray you will too. The songwriter Jim Strathdee frames the challenge for all of us in his composition, "We Have This Ministry."

We have this ministry, and we are not discouraged.

It is by God's own power that we may live and serve.

Openly we share God's word, speaking truth as we believe, Praying that the shadowed world may healing light receive.

O Christ, the tree of life, our end and our beginning.

We grow to fullest flower when rooted in your love.

Brothers, sisters, clergy, lay, called to service by your grace,

Different cultures, different gifts; for young and old a place,

The yoke of Christ is ours, the whole world is our parish,

We daily take the cross, the burden, and the joy.

Bearing hurts of those we serve, wounded, bruised, and bowed with pain; Holy Spirit, touch us as we die and rise again.

Jerome "Jigs" Peter Whitley

Jerome "Jigs" Peter Whitley died on "Alaska Day," Oct. 18, at the University of Michigan Hospital.

He was born May 6, 1949, to Jerome W. and Dorothy (Winnick) Whitley. When he was just a small boy, his mother decided one day that she was going to call him Jigs. He was from that day forward known to those who knew and loved him best as Jigs.

He leaves behind his mother, Dorothy Whitley, of Midland; his brothers, Chris Whitley of Charlevoix, Craig Whitley of Petoskey, Paul Whitley of Charlevoix, and Randy Whitley of Midland; and his sister, Andrea Cymbal, of Royal Oak.

His father, Jerome W. Whitley, preceded him in death in May 1995.

On May 16, 1970, he married Nancy Hoffman and they were blessed to have three children named Jessica Lea, Benjamin Wade and Lukas William Whitley.

He served his country in the army in 1970 and 1971. He had worked at Big Rock Nuclear Plant in Charlevoix as a security officer for 16 years.

His greatest loves in this life were his family, coaching middle school football, mushing and caring for his sled dogs, hunting with his brothers and friends and camping with his family. His greatest adventure was a trip to Alaska in March of 1999 to see the start of the Iditarod dogsled race from Anchorage to Nome. The beauty of Alaska and the thrill of the race were something that made a deep impression on him and a part of his spirit will always remain there.

His life was lived fully in the actions he daily made, which reflected his kind and generous heart. He gave himself fully to his family, to his dogs, to his boys in football, to his friends and neighbors in Charlevoix and everywhere. His love for football really stood for his love for life. Life can be hard, but we need to stand together and be "tough." You play hard and do your best. You may get knocked down, but you need to get back up and go on - you need to go forward and make it through this world that's not our home.

Anyone wishing to make contributions in honor of Jigs may direct them to:

The Charlevoix Middle School Football Program, with checks made payable to CMS Football Program;

The Sarcoma Research Fund at the University of Michigan, with checks made payable to U-M Sarcoma Research Fund and sent to Cancer Center Development Office, 1500 E. Medical Center Drive, Ann Arbor, MI 48109-0759; telephone (734) 647-7562; Alaskan Sled Dog Food Program to feed sled dogs.

Memorial contributions may be made through the Winchester Funeral Home in Charlevoix, where arrangements were handled.

A memorial service was Oct. 21, at the Community Reformed Church in Charlevoix with the Rev. Steve Guthrie and the Rev. Larry Grooters officiating.

Patricia Forster, 78, of East Jordan, died on Oct. 18 at the Charlevoix Area Hospital.

Council approves grant application for Wharfside

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Homes and businesses dot almost every inch of waterfront property in Charlevoix, but on Oct. 16 the Charlevoix City Council approved a grant application to permit tearing down the Wharfside in Charlevoix's central business district allowing for park improvements.

"The goal is to acquire the last piece in the puzzle, (the Wharfside) opening up the park area between the highway and Round Lake," City Manager Mike Weisner said.

The purchasing price of $1.1 million dollars for 330 and 332 Bridge Street is no lower than what could be expected of other waterfront property in this area. These funds will be used to initially acquire the property and subsequently tear the structure down.

Funding sources targeted by the city include; $500,000 in funding from Waterways, a $500,000 Trust Fund Grant, $62,000 from the Frye Foundation, $5,000 from the Charlevoix Community Foundation and a local match by the city of $173,000.

Second ward councilman, Gabe Campbell raised concern as to from where the city match would be generated. In response Weisner pointed to $148,000 set aside in a marina account, $15,000 of which was used for the dock study, leaving $130,000 available in that account.

Community member Charles Winn who has been working on project logistics alluded to the long-term benefits which would far outweigh the immediate costs.

"This is a project that will benefit all walks of life and all ages in our community. We have an opportunity to receive state funds to help pay for the project. If the city doesn't put the local match forward we won't get Waterways and the Trust Fund grants," Winn said.

Taking all presented information into account the city council approved the application for the grant — in effect, assuring the DNR (the granting agent) that the city would provide matching funds.

According to city planner Gerry Harsch the Wharfside acquisition is one piece of the larger project which will in its final stages result in a major make-over of downtown parks and public amenities.

The Charlevoix City Council wants to tear down this building to create a better view of Round Lake in the downtown area. (Photo by Julie Musilek)

"The purpose is to basically free up the land and make it more flexible for developing the East Park, Chamber Park area. The total project involves this acquisition, the redesign of the marina and the waterfront park," Harsch said.

According to Harsch, if acquired, "it may be a couple of seasons before that building (the Wharfside) comes down."

"We'll have to wait and see the results of the grant application," he added.

School programs not suffering at this time

"From the school board's standpoint we are out that figure and are not sure how successful we are going to be in getting that money reimbursed."

Sturock stressed, "The loss won't affect programs at this time."

As the district prepares to enter into their third suit, Set-Seg, the district's insurance provider, has yet to fully approve the $127,576.06 bill resulting from the prior suit filed by the preservation association.

"When we were originally served papers in the second law suit we weren't sure it would fall under the Error and Omissions Policy that covers situations like libel suits. So, we submitted the complaint to the insurance company. In the interim, when there was no response, we had to respond to the lawsuit. We had the firm Thrun, Maatsch and Norberg respond. They (Set-Seg Insurance) did not get back to us until 10 days prior to when the response had to be submitted and we already had Thrun involved," Sturock explained of the slow response by Set-Seg.

Sturock is confident the district will be reimbursed. "Over time, getting involved in litigation takes funds out of the district's pocket that could go somewhere else," he "Whatever the financial costs are, if we can stop sprawl it would be worth it."

Paul Richards,

Member of preservation group that sued district added.

"It can't even be measured in the 3-4 hours per day spent dealing with two lawsuits and talking on the phone with Set-Seg and attorneys. This takes up clerical time and time that would be used for programs for students and other positive things in the district," Sturock said.

Stupak, Yob debate state education reform

Charlevoix Courier Wednesday, October 25, 2000 - PAGE 13

BY JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Education is a hot topic this election season and contenders for U.S. Congressional Representative to the First Congressional District, Republican Chuck Yob and Democratic incumbent Bart Stupak, both foresee changes in education but take different steps towards reform.

"I am committed to education, not just during election time, but also during my term. Under a Republican majority (in Congress) this is the first time ever education has fallen down. We need to re-authorize the Elementary and Secondary Education Act (ESA) which promotes teacher training and development. This is the first time ever in our nation's history that the ESA has expired," Stupak said.

"I look to fully fund the Head Start program and to re-authorize the ESA. Let's make sure schools are of high quality and that teachers are teaching classes they are certified for," he added. "I look to make sure class sizes in grades K-3 have 18 or less students. Studies show that in this environment kids will learn and their social skills will develop — benefits that will follow them through their lives."

Yob feels education would see greater success rates if left in local hands.

"We have to have local participation in the final decision in kids education — where to go to school and curriculum choices should be made at the local level. Program decisions should be made by school boards, parents and teachers together. There needs to be a reward system where teachers who are good should be awarded while the bad teachers need to be weeded out," Yob said.

Each candidate outlined aspects of his vision for reform, involving contrasting levels of government involvement in education. But when asked of their stance concerning the controversial Proposal One, which would implement a voucher program directing public funds to for-profit education institutions, both deviated from their stance.

Stupak looks to alternatives to Proposal One "proven to improve education" and Yob believes Proposal One has the capability to kick-start public education.

"We need to be more competitive to get better. We are a capitalist country, competition will develop better schools," Yob said.

The cornerstone to competition is choice, he said. If one outlet is not providing adequate service the consumer has the option of changing to a provider that will satisfy their needs.

"Compare the process where college choices are made. How would you like it if you had to go to local colleges? The difference here is choice and parental responsibility taken in grade school where they make the decisions as to the best school for their kids. The voucher program will make schools perform as they will lose students to other schools over non-performance. In the end they must decide to take care of the students," Yob said.

However, Stupak contends that Haunted ships, unique costumes staple of a Charlevoix Halloween

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

To get a taste of some of the best Halloween costumes and scary tricks followed up by yummy candy treats head over to the Acacia on Oct. 30 and 31 from 7:30-9:30 p.m.

Admission is "free" but all non-perishable food items gathered will be given to the Charlevoix Food Pantry.

"Our goal is to bring the community together. We are trying to offer people something to do, to get people out and gather food for the Charlevoix Food Pntry. This is a great opportunity for people to come on the ship (the Acacia) and have a good time. It is fun for us to get away from our normal routine on the boat," Coast Guard Ensign Marc Vanzetta said.

It will take about eight to 10 minutes to make your way through the bone chilling Coast Guard presentation.

For people looking for cost efficient, unique costumes to scare the coasties right back or to wear while gathering candy here are a few ideas.

For guy's, "The World's Most Popular Guy," costume requires fashionable attire and a good female friend willing to wear a lot of lipstick and to apply kisses all over your face. Touch-ups may be needed, the lip marks need to look like lip imprints not color smears.

For gal's, "A Breath of Fresh Air," wearing all white and covering your face in white powder (even flour will work), carry around air freshener and spray it every once in a while.

Unisex, "Inspector Number 12," first make a name tag that says "Inspector #12." The name tag should look just like the one you find inside garments from whoever it is that approves the quality of clothing and appliances. Carry a magnifying glass, and put a pencil behind your ear. Then, roam parties or the streets looking for candy and "inspect." For added effect carry a Post-It pad printed with "Inspected by #12" and stick them to friends.

students already are armed with choice.

"I have nothing against parochial education, my sons attended Catholic school. But, we (parents) should be paying for it, not the taxpayers. Why pass a proposal that will take money out of public education when we have more students than ever in public schools," Stupak questioned.

"We have choice now, if the public school system is failing, a Charlevoix student for instance would have the opportunity to attend Petoskey schools, the money follows the student, that is choice. You can't drain money from public education, there isn't enough funding to go around."

Firefighters teach students how to stay safe in a fire

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

According to the Federal Department of Housing and Urban Development each year in the U.S. about 12,000 children 14 years of age and under are injured in residential fires. Locally, the City of Charlevoix Fire Department is attempting to alleviate this threat by equipping kids with fire safety knowledge.

"The purpose of the program is to make kids aware of what to do in an emergency — when the smoke alarm is ringing at home. We are stressing how to get out of the house safely," City Fire Chief Doug Carver said.

The 2000 presentation with the theme of, "The Great Escape, How To Get Out Alive" was enacted by fire safety officials at St. Mary School, Charlevoix Elementary School and the Montessori School. The city fire department is teaching kids from pre-kindergarten through the sixth grade safe ways to get out of the house alive.

The course utilizes a fake smoke filled room set up like a child's bedroom. Inside the room, kids are subject to an emergency fire simulation. They hear the smoke alarm, get out of bed and crawl over to the door. They feel the door and find it to be hot to the touch and choose their alternate path, the window.

"About 90 percent of the students knew a smoke alarm meant to get out of the house," Carver said.

HUD records show that a home fire occurs every 66 seconds. Here are a few tips as to how home owners and renters can lessen your susceptibility to a residential fire.

• In the kitchen look for testing agency labels on all electrical appliances and those appliances that are on the fritz should be brought in for repair. When baking if you are using your Cuisinart, your beaters and your electric can open, beware outlets should not be overloaded. Other simple remedies to nip disasters in the bud include; not storing things over the stove — you can get torched when reaching, turning pot handles so a child's curious hands aren't able to reach and thirdly save your own hands from the threat of fire by wearing light sleeves instead of loose garments that may catch fire.

• In the living room a higher level of fire safety can be achieved by working with a few simple guidelines. Smokers should use large ash trays and before you retire for the evening have a look under cushions for possible burning cigarettes. Living in northern Michigan during

Township/City Clerk

BALLOT LANGUAGE FOR NOVEMBER 7, 2000

HAYES TOWNSHIP: Road Repair and Maintenance Proposal
Shall the previously voted increase in the 15-mill limitation imposed under Article X, Sec. 6 of the Michigan Constitution on general ad valorem taxes within Hayes Township be renewed at one (1) mill ($1.00 per $1,000 of taxable value) for the period of 2001 through 2005 inclusive for the purpose of road repair and maintenance; and shall the township levy such renewal in millage for said purpose, thereby raising in the first year an estimated $106,431.00.

ST. JAMES TOWNSHIP: Proposal
This proposal will permit the Township to restore the Township's .8625 mills for airport operations and maintenance previously approved by the electors and now expired. The Headlee Amendment previously reduced this millage to .8329 mills. This ballot proposal renews the existing .8329 mills and restores the .0296 mills previously rolled back by the Headlee Amendment.

Shall the limitation on the amount of taxes which may be imposed on taxable property in the Township of St. James, County of Charlevoix, State of Michigan, be increased by eight-six and 25/100 cents ($.8625) per thousand dollars ($1,000) (.8625 mills) of the taxable value on all taxable property in the township for five (5) years, 2000 through 2004 inclusive, for the purpose of providing funds for airport operations and maintenance of the Township? If approved and levied in its entirety, it is estimated that the .8625 mills would raise an estimated $23,327 for the township when first levied in 2000.

COUNTY OF CHARLEVOIX: Charlevoix County Medical Care Facility Bond Proposal
This proposal will permit the County to borrow up to Seven Million Five Hundred Thousand Dollars ($7,500,000) to pay for renovation and construction of additions to the Grandview-Charlevoix County Medical Care Facility. This renovation and new construction would correct building deficiencies, create a new Alzheimer unit and add hospice and respite beds.

Shall the County of Charlevoix, Michigan, borrow the principal sum of not to exceed Seven Million Five Hundred Thousand Dollars ($7,500,000) and issue its general obligation unlimited tax bonds therefore payable in not-to-exceed sixteen (16) years from the date of issue, for the purpose of renovating, improving, equipping, and furnishing the Grandview-Charlevoix County Medical Care Facility and constructing, equipping, and furnishing additions to the Facility and any necessary site improvements? The estimated millage to be levied in the first year that the levy is authorized, estimated to be 2001 is .54 mills ($.54 per $1,000 of taxable value) and the estimated simple average millage required to retire the bonds is .54 mills ($.54 per $1,000 of taxable value).

Charlevoix trick-or-treating hours and a little history

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Gourds, pumpkins and corn stalks decorate homes and store fronts all over Charlevoix but the culmination of the month of October for kids isn't just festive decorating, it's in the candy gathered Halloween Day.

The majority of kids will soon be painting their faces, pulling on bizarre rubber masks and dressing in costume. Trick or treaters understand the candy side of things but in most cases have no idea where the Halloween holiday originated.

So while helping your little pumpkins get dressed for trick-or-treating, from 6-8 p.m., Oct. 31 in Charlevoix, here's an account of the custom that will give them a sense of why they are in search of sugary treats.

According to the web site www.wilstar.com/holidays, in the 1840s the custom of Halloween was brought to America by Irish immigrants in search of a better life and an escape from the devastating potato famine.

The word "Halloween" originated winter time can mean stoking a cozy fire in the living room. To assure a safe burn a metal screen should be used and the chimney should be checked and cleaned on a regular basis. Allow air space around the TV or stereo to prevent overheating. If the TV is playing funny tricks have it looked at, it could be a fire danger.

Some useful fire tips for bedroom safety include: installing a smoke detector outside your sleeping area, planning two escapes from the bedroom, not smoking in bed and once again not overloading electrical outlets.

According to Carver, City Fire Department firefighters are called to eight to 10 residential fires annually both in the City of Charlevoix and outlying townships serviced by the city department.

Functional smoke alarms have been proven to make a difference in saving lives. HUD estimates that 90 percent of fire deaths involving children occur in homes without working fire alarms. So check your batteries and make sure that fire safety is a priority.

"We urge parents to talk to their kids, have an escape plan outlining how to get out, where to go once you get out — a meeting place and never go back in," Carver said.

in the Catholic Church and stems from a bizarre happening on "All Saints Day," Nov. 1. Way back in the fifth century B.C., in Celtic Ireland, summer ended Oct. 31.

Legend has it that on that day, the spirits of the people who had died that year would return in search of warm bodies to inhabit. This was the spirits last ditch attempt at the afterlife. The Celts believe that it was only on this day that the laws of nature were lifted to allow the spirit world and the living world to mingle.

Living people were not excited about the prospect of being possessed, so they set about warding off these spirits. They made their homes cold, they would dress up in ghoulish costumes and loudly parade around their neighborhoods — all of this was done to frighten away spirits looking for a fresh body to inhabit.

As time went on and belief in possession waned the practices became more ritualistic. So, dressing up like ghosts, witches and goblins played a ceremonial role.

Dressing up like scary characters stems from Irish history but the American search for candy on Oct. 31 draws from the ninth-century European custom of "souling."

On Nov. 2, early Christians would roam around from village to village begging for soul cakes. The more soul cakes they could accumulate the more prayers they would offer for the dear relatives of the donor. This was done because it was once thought that the deceased remained in a state of limbo after death and that prayers on their behalf would expedite their trip to heaven.

So, while some may argue evil guides Halloween it really is a limb of Irish heritage as they celebrated their new year and out of European prayer rituals.

Rayders are conference champs, playoff bound

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

They may have lost their last home game of the season Friday against Suttons Bay 34-19, but the Charlevoix Rayders varsity football team are the sole champions of the Lake Michigan Conference and are getting ready for a strong showing in the playoff this week.

"They are up for the challenge (of the playoffs)," Coach Todd Klinger said. "They are willing to work this week in practice."

As for the Suttons Bay game, Klinger said the team played hard and created some opportunities to score, but were not able to capitalize on those.

The killer for Charlevoix against Suttons Bay, Klinger said, came when Suttons Bay kicked a short punt in the third quarter that bounced off one of the Rayders and was recovered by the Northmen, who later ended up scoring.

For the offense, leading the rushing was Ryan Leitner with 20 carries for 80 yards. Quarterback Jeremiah Teuscher completed seven passes out of 16 for 121 yards. Ryan Racfacz caught three passes for 78 yards and Keith Daly caught two passes for 23 yards.

For the defense, Matt Horon had 14 tackles, while Racfacz and Patrick Gowell each had seven. Racfacz also added two interceptions to his statistics and Ben Van-Guilder recovered a fumble. The Rayders will have to shake off this loss and get to work preparing for the playoffs at 7:30 Friday in Whittemore-Prescott, who is ranked number one in the state.

Klinger said Charlevoix will have to take special note of Whittemore-Prescott's defense and special teams. These units have turned the tables on many opponents by not only stopping the drive, but scoring on their opponents as well.

"At the beginning of the year, these kids had two main goals: one, to win the conference and two, to make the playoffs. They made both goals," Klinger said. "These boys deserve a lot of credit."

Soccer team finishes season on a high note

The Rayders soccer team ended its regular season on a positive note by winning its last two games.

This late season winning streak started Oct. 19, with a 1-0 win against McBain and lasted into the next game Oct. 21 with a 6-2 win against East Jordan.

The win against McBain came in sudden death overtime. Junior co-captain Roscoe Serrels ended the game seven minutes into overtime, when he sent a cross from right wing Craig Stockman into the back of the net from 20 yards.

Charlevoix outshot its opponents 39-10.

According to Coach Tom Conlan, junior Kiel Tilley had five nice saves in the goal and earned a shutout. Conlan added, solid defensive efforts came from Seniors Tony Shearer and freshman John DiMartino and sophomore Travis Smith created several chances with good distributions in the midfield with the help of junior Jason Haas.

This win improved the Rayders record to 3-14, which was further improved with the win against East Jordan.

In this game, Charlevoix outshot its opponent 33-9.

Trevor Kline and Craig Stockman. Freshman Alex Callihan had three assists. Kiel Tilley and Haas shared the win in the net.

According to Conlan the freshman defensive trio of Jacob Pace,

John DiMartino and Bryce Daly played a strong game.

The Rayders started district play last night at home against Roscommon. Results of that game were unavailable before press time.

Several fall sports teams celebrate season of success

SPORTS

Another attribute Haske noted was many of the players on these teams have really good attitudes and are willing to work hard.

"A lot of it comes from their home. Parents need to take some credit in the value they have instilled in their kids," Haske added.

Charlevoix High School Principal Gary Grundman added these sports successes have been great for the school and the community.

"The kids are enjoying themselves. This serves as a part of school pride and it brings the community and the school closer," he said.

Varsity Golf Coach Jim Glynn also added there is an excited feeling in the schools.

"Charlevoix was a power-house years ago in all athletics. It is nice to see a resurgence in success of the fall sports teams," he said.

Cross country takes strong finishes in recent meets

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

The Charlevoix cross-country boys' and girls' teams posted nice finishes at the conference meet Oct. 17 in Elk Rapids and the Elk Rapids Invitational Saturday, all the while preparing for the regional meet this Saturday.

The boys' team took second in the Lake Michigan Conference following East Jordan.

According to Coach Ken Plude, it looked like Charlevoix was going to win the race for a while, but in the end, East Jordan's experience took over and left Charlevoix in its wake.

Tim Daining and Gordie Selph took fourth and fifth in this race, placing them on the All Conference Team. Charlevoix runners Josh Popenhagen, Peter Gorkiewicz and Zach Dennis were named honorable mention All Conference.

The girls' team took fourth overall in the conference meet, with Katie Swenor taking the honors as All Conference champion and Liz Ulrich as a runner-up.

Coach Mary Plude said she was very proud of Swenor and Ulrich, who in addition to their All Conference honors also recorded their best times of the season.

Both teams also had good showings in the Elk Rapids invitational with the boys' team upsetting Benzie Central — ranked the fourth best team in the state. Charlevoix will face Benzie Central again this Saturday at the regional meet.

On the girls' team, Swenor and Ulrich mirrored their strong running in the conference meet for sixth and eleventh place finishes respectively.

"They are definitely ready for regionals and state," Mary said.

She added she would like to commend new varsity runners Stephanie Dickinson and Jen Westenbroek for coming up from the junior varsity team recently and running their best times of the season in Saturday's meet.

Junior Rayders finish on top

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

After starting the season with three losses, the junior varsity Rayders football team decided it wouldn't lose another game and ended the season 5-3.

"I want to commend the offensive line. They were outstanding this year from end-to-end. They just totally controlled the line of scrimmage for us," Coach Brian Certa said. He added the young Rayders last two games were the best performances by the team all year.

"They played with a lot of heart," he said. "After being 0-3, they could have laid down, but they didn't."

The young Rayders last two games of the season were Oct. 12 against Boyne City at home and Oct. 19 against Suttons Bay away.

In the Boyne City game, the Rayders won 40-14.

Leading the rushing were Jeff Urban with 16 carries for 128 yards and Nick Pizzurro with 15 carries for 94 yards. Quarterback Nate Teuscher threw four for 10 with a total of 105 yards.

Defensively, Dovovan Swanson had 15 tackles, Nick Potter recovered a fumble and Matt Kilkenny had an interception.

In the Suttons Bay game, the Rayders won 38-20.

Urban led the rushing again with 14 carries for 192 yards. Kilkenny was next with seven carries for 113 yards. Teuscher completed four out of eight passes for 110 yards.

Defensively, Todd Carey led in tackles with 13. Teuscher had nine. Interceptions were recorded by Carey, Teuscher and Josh Scott. Certa added Delos Lanterman also played very well on the defense against Suttons Bay.

In summing up the season, Certa was very proud of his team.

"They exemplified the true spirit of what a team is," he said. "They proved they were a good caliber team."

Golf team takes third place in state meet

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

The Charlevoix Rayders varsity golf team has taken third place in the state for division three.

The team scored a 655 at the state finals last weekend, placing Charlevoix behind Lansing Catholic Central who scored 645 and Grosse Ile, who scored 617.

On top of this, Charlevoix sophomore David Shearer individually took third in the state out of 500 golfers.

"We are ecstatic with the finish. This is the best Charlevoix golf team to my knowledge," Coach Jim Glynn said. "This gives them a new perspective at where they stand in the state."

Furthermore, Glynn attributes the success of the high school golf team to the Charlevoix Junior Golf program.

"It is an integral part of the success of the Charlevoix team," he said.

Shearer scored the lowest for Charlevoix with a total of 151 after two days of play. Craig Siwarga was second with 163, Jordan Nystrom had 170, Allen Brooks had 171 and Nick Cole had 178.

Action began on Friday with 24 teams in taking part in Division Three. At the end of Friday, Charlevoix was in third place with a total score of 324, allowing the team to join the top 12 teams on Saturday for the last round.

At the end of the day Saturday, Charlevoix had scored a 335. Combined with its score from the previous day gave the Rayders a total tally of 655, and a third place spot.

"The whole team golfed well. It is a team game with team scoring. If a couple of kids don't golf well, we don't go anywhere," Glynn said.

before you ever start your car, and then demands new skills once you're on your way.

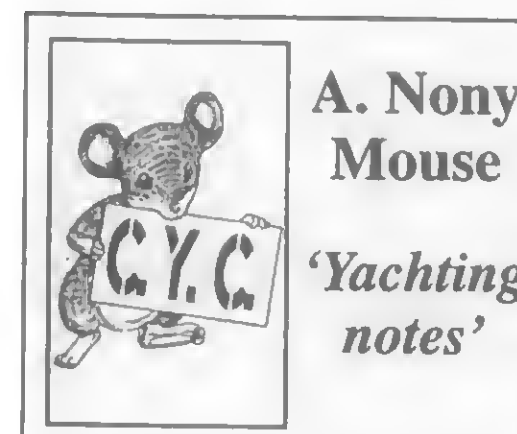

During the seminar the AAA Michigan traffic safety expert will help you prepare yourself for driving this winter. Learn how to improve your skills, what to avoid, how to prepare your vehicle and how to best use your anti-lock brakes.

Please RSVP at 547-3258 by Oct. 27.

'Yachting notes'

The beautiful mid-October evening was enjoyed by the lowest turnout of the Fall Series as many were experiencing early winter cold feet.

Still, 15 boats started and finished this, the final of the year 2000 Wednesday Races. The two finalists left in the P-26 Fleet continued their duel with CYGNUS crossing ahead of ORIGINAL SIN and thereby gaining a tie for the series. Each ended up with three firsts and three seconds, so no tiebreaker is available. Still A. Nony gives a tiny edge to SIN, as CYGNUS would be one point off if all six races counted (which they don't).

The Combined Divisions 1 and 2 ended up with the four first places of GOTCHA! breaking the tie with KAMIKAZE (at 10 points each) as both sat out the final race. Pete should be in a funk as any finish better than fourth would have given KAMIKAZE the series! The only starter, J-HAWK, nailed down third with 17 points. Blasen IV (21) and M3 (24) wrap up the standings.

Only BALD EAGLE came out in the JAM Fleet as FLASH rested on her record. They are also the only two JAM boats to qualify. FLASH with 7 and BALD EAGLE with 12 are first and second, respectively.

TOO RECKLESS, sailed by a more distaff skipper and crew, crossed the line in sixth place but immediately dropped the race and takes the J-22 Flag with 11 points to HUSSY's 12. HUSSY showed remarkable consistency with all finishes (including her drop) being either second or third. SUPERFLUOUS (13) captures third in the series with yet another first in this final race. Her three firsts are tops in the J-22 Fleet. SWINE FLEW was a bit out-of-the-money with 17 while the rest of the Fleet are well back: CRAZY HORSE 30, FIRST DATE 31, PALEFACE LITE (38) wins the tie with JUBBLIES (38), HIGH MAINTENANCE 41, ROCK STEADY over HS MOISTURE MISSILE on a 49 point tiebreaker, HOGTIDE 50, GECKO 59, HABANERO 62 and THUNDERSTRUCK 71.

See you all at the Awards Night, Nov. 4! The doors open at 6 p.m. Be there to pick up your awards - and you do have one, thanks to the Charlevoix Yacht Club Board; all contestants will receive a framed photo of their pride and joy under full sail! They will NOT be mailed. A. Nony hereby certifies that they are beautiful photographs.

Our next event is the ridiculous Charlevoix Yacht Club Halloween Party, starting at 6 p.m. on Friday.

Bring your ankle biters, if you don't have any; borrow one or two. (If that doesn't work, come anyway!) Costumes are encouraged, but don't sweat it - I wear one all year so I'll be wearing my normal mismatch.

LADIES! The First Annual Charlevoix Yacht Club Ladies Only Arena Race! While J-22s are preferred, sail what you have at 1 p.m. Sunday in Round Lake. The following week will see the first race of the traditional weekly Sunday Arena Races; culminating in the Charlevoix Yacht Club Cranberry Cup on Dec. 3.

A. Nony now signs off for the season (except to fill you in on the arena race results in early December). The Lord willin' and the crick don't rise, the mouse will be back with you in May of 2001 to, once again, break the ice.

Yachting Notes is submitted each week during the "warm" months by the Charlevoix Yacht Club. To contact the club, see its web site at www.charlevoixyachtclub.org or call 547-9170.

Another state-bound team for Charlevoix

By JEREMY MCBAIN

While not only making great finishes at the regional meet Oct. 28, several Charlevoix cross country runners are headed to the state finals.

After finishing second in the boys' regional, the entire Charlevoix boys' team will be going, as well as two runners on the girls' team who have qualified. State finals are Saturday at the Michigan International Speedway.

According to boys' coach Ken Plude, the second place finish was a great team effort, which ended in a great day for Charlevoix.

"I haven't made it to state with the boys' team since 1994. I had individuals, but not the whole team," Ken said.

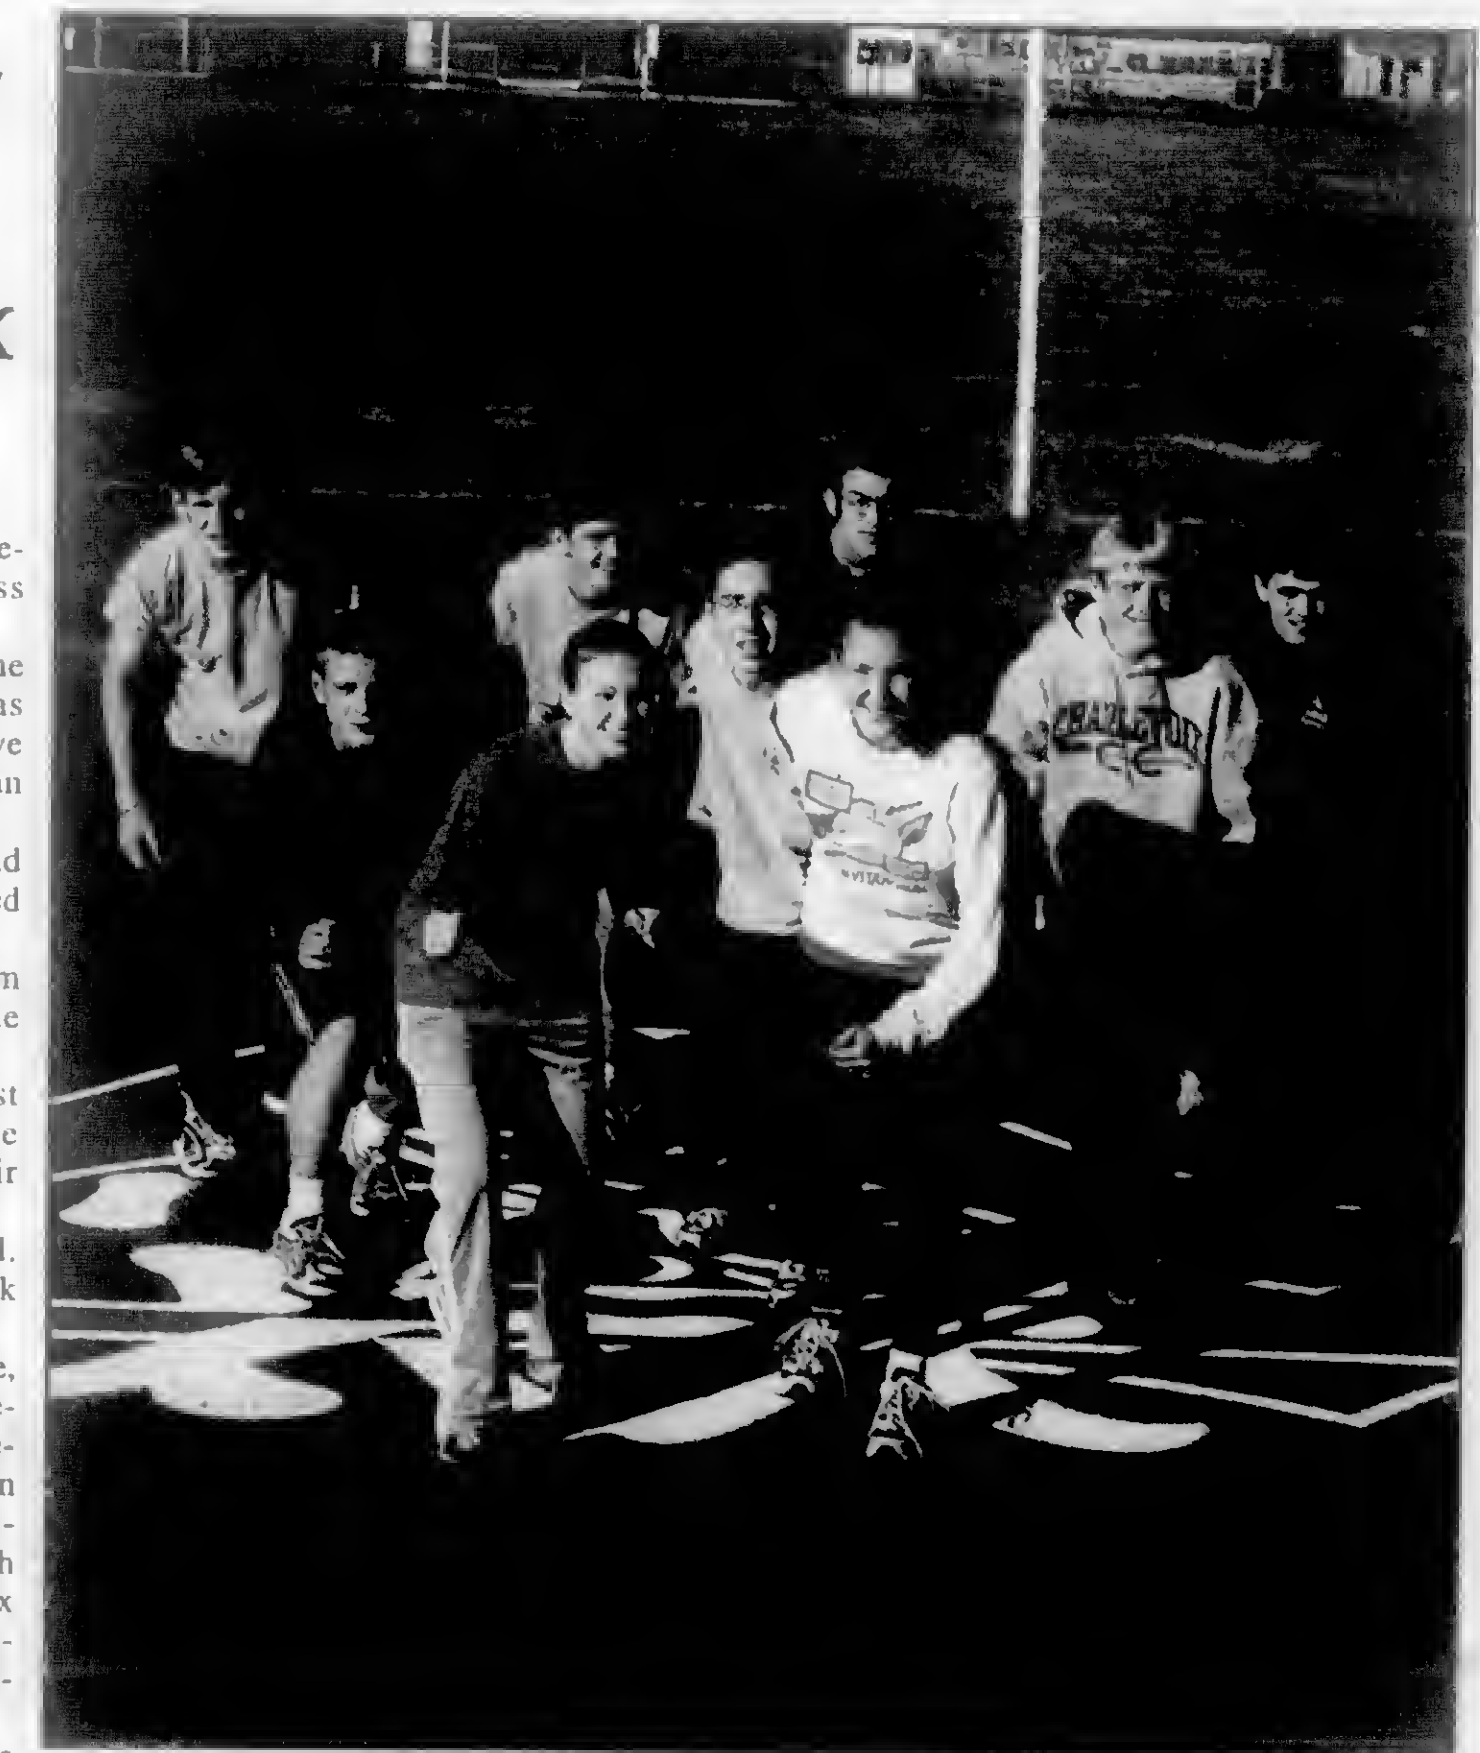

Charlevoix was beaten by Benzie for the first place slot in the region. But, according to Ken, the entire Charlevoix boys' team has moved up their best times by 10 seconds.

"We are showing signs of peaking," he said. "Right now they have us ranked tenth, but I think we are running a little better than that."

In addition to winning a chance to go to state, six of the runners on the boys' team earned all regional honors. They, and their finishes in the region, are: Tim Daining in fifth, Gordie Selph in eighth, Peter Gorkiewicz in ninth, Josh Popenhagen in tenth, Zach Hopkins in eleventh and Zach Dennis in thirteenth. The seventh Charlevoix boys' team runner, Zach Bajos, did not earn all-regional honors, but will still be going to the state finals with the team.

While the girls' team may not have placed as high as the boys, they still will have two of their runners going to the state meet.

OPINIONS

The editor's endorsements for the 2000 election

Jeremy McBain

Editor

Election season for editors is like a double-edged sword.

On one hand, we offer our readers many compelling political pieces that provide valuable information and may help readers make up their minds in the voting booth. On the other hand, endorsements force editors to cast aside their objectivity for at least one article and actually tell their readers who they like in the election.

In the process of doing our jobs, editors are forced to learn all they can about the candidates and issues. They can thus give readers knowledgeable endorsements based on all the issues and candidates, rather than endorsements based solely on the candidates' political party or the candidates' stand on just one issue.

So, here are some of my picks for the Tuesday, Nov. 7 election. Remember, these are only my suggestions and should not be taken so seriously that I get tons of hate mail because of them.

We'll start with the race for treasurer of Charlevoix Township. In this race, we have the incumbent Theda Williams — who recently switched to the Democratic Party — facing off against Republican challenger Margo Johnson.

Both women are very pleasant and very smart individuals, who would do great jobs if elected. But, while Johnson has a wealth of experience in the business world, Williams has about 14 years of experience as the township treasurer. Williams knows the duties of the township treasurer's post better than anyone and has proven to be an able and honest person in that position.

Therefore, I am going to have to go with the experience on this one and pick Theda Williams for Charlevoix Township Treasurer.

In the race for Charlevoix County Sheriff, we also find two men who are very smart and ready to do their duty for the county. These men are Republican incumbent George T. Lasater and Democratic challenger Edward R. Johnson.

While I believe Johnson is a very upstanding citizen who could do the job if elected, he doesn't come close in beating the experience Lasater has had as sheriff for over 20 years. So, again, I am going to have to go with experience here and pick George T. Lasater for Charlevoix County Sheriff.

However, I should note that a recent investigation by the Michigan Attorney General's office on Lasater found some problems that he will need to address, specifically with the way he files paperwork. I urge Lasater to make the necessary changes to his department to clean up these problems for the sake of the public.

Now, we get to the race for the First District seat between Democratic incumbent Bart Stupak and Republican challenger Chuck Yob.

While I must admit Yob has done a great job in giving Stupak a run for his money, I have found Yob's campaign tactics to be distasteful, untruthful and downright nasty.

Throughout this campaign, I have found Yob to be nothing more than a partisan attack dog. He has filled the airwaves and newspapers with advertisements and interviews that really say nothing but how much he hates Stupak and the Democrats. And the fax machine at our office is regularly filled with negative press releases from the Yob campaign, usually filled with unsubstantiated, vague or misrepresented claims about Stupak and his voting record.

Yob also has this tendency to not really say what he is going to do if elected to office and relies only on vague tag lines like, "I'm going to fight for our way of life." Usually, this is followed by him saying how he thinks Stupak is a bad politician.

In reality, Stupak has served the citizens of this district well. Yob's big contention is Stupak's support of a bill requiring background checks on guns bought at gun shows. Folks, I am a gun owner and I support the Second Amendment, but I do not see anything wrong in requiring background checks for guns bought at gun shows, especially when background checks are already required for guns bought anywhere else. This bill closes a loophole in the law.

I'm tired of these attack-dog partisan politicians who are so concerned about their party's power and agenda, they refuse to work with other parties on compromises to get the job done. Yob, to me, represents another one of these politicians.

Therefore, I support Bart Stupak for the First Congressional District.

In direct contrast to this race is the one between Democratic incumbent Andy Neumann and Republican challenger Francis "Brownie" Flanders for the 106th District state house seat.

These two men have been a delight to cover. They have waged honest and fair campaigns based on the issues — a welcome change to the usual nasty partisan fights. Both men are also very intelligent, full of good ideas, energetic and excited to do some work for the people.

I liked both men so much, I could not make a pick. So I had to call a staff meeting at the Charlevoix Courier to discuss the candidates. If only all elections could be like this.

After the two hour meeting, the staff was unanimous — both men were perfect for the job. We left the meeting even more undecided than when we went in.

Therefore, while I usually go with the incumbent in this sort of situation, the fact that Flanders is a resident of Charlevoix gives him the edge. While Neumann is a good representative, I believe Flanders can do a better job of representing the people of Charlevoix.

So, my pick for the 106 house seat is Francis "Brownie" Flanders.

With that I would like to wish all of the candidates good luck on election night. While I know there are many other votes than just these to be cast Nov. 7, these are the only ones I am giving endorsements on this year.

After all, the voters are what really matter to the candidates, not the endorsement of some small-town editor.

Letters to the editor

Vote Williams

Editor:
I have had the privilege of working side-by-side with Theda Williams, the township treasurer, for 14 years. I have known Theda since she and her family moved here 17 years ago.

Theda has proven to be a valuable, efficient, trustworthy and dedicated township treasurer, co-worker, board member and friend to township residents. I encourage you to vote to re-elect Theda Williams on Nov. 7 as township treasurer and allow her to continue working for you and your best interests.

A son's endorsement

Editor:
While this letter may sound like a unilateral harangue for Margo Johnson, it's really an effort to give insight into the complex ramifications of modern day bipartisanship. Awww, who am I kidding? It's a plug for my mom.

I could hardly believe it when she told me she was running for Charlevoix Township Treasurer. Retirement, it seemed, had just gone out the window. After that first split second of surprise, though, it dawned on me that it all made perfect sense. My mom had spent almost 32 years in the private business sector amassing volumes of experience from a multitude of assignments. What better way to put that experience to use than as your treasurer? Her diverse perspectives on all matters and commitment to improvement continue to motivate me. I know these attributes will serve Charlevoix Township well.

My mom has always had a strong sense of personal responsibility in her life. As a township board member, she can represent the citizens' views effectively because she listens, gets involved and she cares.

I am probably biased, but I really think your community is fortunate to have this opportunity to elect my mom as treasurer. She is motivated, she is committed and she will deliver as your treasurer and board member.

Article response

Editor:
Let me see if I have this straight. The taxpayers are losing $120,000 from the school budget because the school board and superintendent failed to do their homework.

Would you purchase land and start building a house before getting sewer or septic approval? Would you purchase land, build a house and front the cost of a sewer extension for the neighborhood? Would you purchase land without understanding all title and land use restrictions? Give me a break!

Write-in Skrzeczkoski

Editor:
This letter is to ask for your vote for write-in candidate for Eveline Township Supervisor, Dan Skrzeczkoski. I worked with Dan for two and one half years on the Charlevoix County Solid Waste Planning Committee. During that time, I noted that Dan always came to the meetings well prepared. He had read the materials, had placed yellow sticky-notes on pages needing further clarification, and often had prepared motions for discussion. He was, however, always willing to reward his motions to accommodate the ideas that came up during their debate.

After all, the voters are what really matter to the candidates, not the endorsement of some small-town editor.

Letters to the editor

The manner in which solid waste is handled in Eveline Township and Charlevoix County is a very important issue. Since Dan has served on the Township Board as trustee for the last 12 years and is presently serving as supervisor (completing Dave Wilson's term), he is up to date on the issues most important to our township. His experience will have a positive effect on our local government.

Here's how to vote for Dan: grab, stick and punch. (1) "Grab" one of Dan's stickers from Dan or one of his campaign workers. Also, the "Dan van" will be parked down from the Township Hall on election day. (2) "Stick" the sticker across the top of the ballot. (3) "Punch" number 142. It doesn't matter if you vote a straight party ticket. As long as you do these three things, it will override on this issue only.

For experience, dedication and hard work, Dan's the man. Let's get him elected as Eveline Township Supervisor on Nov. 7.

Vote Stabenow

Editor:
I'm voting for Debbie Stabenow for the U.S. Senate because: She's a seasoned legislator at county, state and national levels — is Eighth District representative in Congress.

Because: She's smart and insightful. Michigan newspapers describe her also as "energetic," "effective," "sensible" and "hard-working."

Because: She's an advocate for women and children, and an accomplished leader in the fight for safe, quality schools, lowering prescription drug costs, home health care and the preservation of Social Security and Medicare. She's enlightened! Barb MacArthur

School site is wrong

Editor:
This is a letter critical of the new high school process. After having written you before and not having had my letter published I have been led to understand that you are in favor of the new school construction. It is strange that after a career in the Army, in various parts of the world, trying to fight for the basic freedoms of man, that my home town newspaper does not seem to allow free speech.

As stated in my earlier letter, I am very much against the new school construction; I am one of many such people, in the fight against this unnecessary development.

There has been comment that being against the school is being against the best interests of our children. If this were simply concerned with a quest for knowledge and wisdom I might agree. However, I think there are many other mitigating factors involved in this situation which could hardly be cited as good examples. This is a new century, a chance for the whole world to correct some of the mistakes of the last hundred years. Among those were horrendous damage to the environment and unbridled spending. In almost any part of Detroit you can drive past rows of perfectly good buildings which have been "abandoned" in favor of a new location in the "country." Is it for the good of our children that we are going to pave our many acres of once fertile farmland and transport them past an empty school building just so they can have a pretty "new location" in Marion Center?

The designers of this project also seemed to have failed to consider the tremendous logistical and safety problems involved with an out of town location on an already overtaxed roadway. In case no one remembers there have been at least three deaths and numerous other accidents up and down the breadth of Marion Center Road during the last few years. I understand that the parking area at the school is going to be built to contain more vehicles than the projected total number of students. Why?

The school has continuously stated that they have "done nothing wrong" throughout this entire process. According to the State Election Commission that is not the case. Nor was beginning the work on the construction site without the necessary authorization or permits.

Joseph F. Seidel
US Army Retired
Marion Township

(Editor's note: We received a letter from Mr. Seidel a few months ago on this issue. Unfortunately, it was well over our 450 word limit for letters to the editor — as is stated in our letters policy on page 4 — and we sent him a letter back asking him to shorten it and resend his letter in. We never received another letter from him until this one. We contacted Mr. Seidel about the matter and he said he did not receive our letter asking him to rework his original letter.

As for his comments that the school started work on the site before getting the proper permits, according to Charlevoix Superintendent John Sturock, this is not so.

Sturock said, "We followed the process that all school districts in the state of Michigan follow and actually have been more scrutinized than any other school district in the state."

Thanks for the help

Editor:
There have been many occasions that I have been watching a Rayder football game and commented to my friends nearby, "I could never play this game because if I had the ball and saw all those big guys running at me, I would just give it to them and say, 'Here take it...I don't want it that badly.'"

There have been many times, since the August primary, that I have had similar feelings.

It's no secret that this year, I followed my conscience and switched from the Republican party to the Democratic party. I did it purely for reasons of integrity. This decision left me "holding the ball" so to speak, and running against some opposition in my campaign for re-election as Charlevoix Township Treasurer.

There have been times that I have been tired and scared, and ready to toss that ball, but I haven't. I have a great team and a whole lot of cheerleaders out there working for me and counting on me.

First of all, thank you to my family, who knows me thoroughly: My son Bradley, the Democrat who constantly tweaked my conscience for the past years; my husband Ron, the Republican who never once challenged my decision; and Ronda and Tony who are also my strong supporters and who take their political decisions seriously.

Thank you also to my very close friends who helped me maintain my sense of humor and kept reminding me that God's plan is greater than my own.

Thank you to all of the residents of Charlevoix Township who I met as I campaigned door to door. So many of you told me how willing you were to cross party lines, some of you for the first time in your life. Those of you who were not home, but called and gave me your support, were very kind.

Many of you requested yard signs and were willing to display them — so many that I ran out several times. Thank you for all the generous campaign donations I received, often from complete strangers. You demonstrated faith in me beyond anything I could ever have measured.

Thank you to those of you who told me I was "courageous" when I wasn't feeling that way. And thank you to those of you who held your ground in supporting me, even when you faced a little opposition of your own.

It's been a long "run" since August and I still have the ball. I'm not letting go now and with your help, we'll make it all the way.

John Roth Michael

John Roth Michael, 71, of Charlevoix, died Oct. 24 at North-ern Michigan Hospital in Petoskey.

John Roth Michael

A celebration of his life was Oct. 27 at Christ Episcopal Church in Charlevoix. The Rev. Margaret "Peggy" Nat-termann officiated.

John was born on Nov. 8, 1928, in Detroit, the son of Arthur and Marie (Roth) Michael.

He spent two years at Fort Collins in Texas, serving with the U.S. Army from 1947 to 1949.

John graduated from Valparaiso

University in Valparaiso, Ind., in 1953 with a bachelor's degree. He went on to graduate from Detroit College of Law in 1958 with a bachelor's of law degree.

On Aug. 28, 1954, he married Jeanne Camille Esford in Detroit. On Jan. 15, 1963, the couple moved to Charlevoix where John opened his law practice on Bridge Street.

He served as city attorney and assistant prosecutor for the city of Charlevoix.

John was an active member and president of the Charlevoix Lions Club and was past-president and member of the Chamber of Commerce in Charlevoix. In his earlier years, John was also an avid sportsman and coin collector.

The greatest love of his life was his family. Throughout the years,

Walter H. Russell

Walter H. Russell, 50, of Charlevoix, died Oct. 26 at his home in Marion Township.

An informal Remembrance Wake was given Monday at the home of his mother, Marjorie Russell, on Hurlbut Street in Charlevoix. After enjoying good food and fellowship, all were invited to join the family on Clipper-view for a final good-bye tribute to Walt, the way he enjoyed spending most of his free time — around a campfire with good friends.

Walter was born on July 6, 1950, in Charlevoix, the son of Walter Howard and Marjorie Rose (Engelhart) Russell. He spent his entire life in Charlevoix and attended Charlevoix schools.

He was proud to be a third generation mason by trade.

Walt was a devoted father, grandfather and husband and enjoyed restoring muscle cars.

Survivors include his wife, Barbara Russell; two sons, Justin J. (Megan) Russell and Josiah D.

John enjoyed the family farm, horse shows, high school football games and taking family boating trips.

Those who are closest to John will remember his great sense of humor and strong determination of life.

Survivors include his wife, Jeanne, of Charlevoix; five children, Julie A. Taylor-Boyd and her husband Mark, of Olympia, Wash., Steve E. Michael and his wife Susan, of Augusta, Ga., Lisa M. Hillis and her husband Ron, of Bremerton, Wash., and John Christopher Michael, of Charlevoix; seven grandchildren, Sarah, Savannah, Shelby, Ryan, Matthew, Jordan and Chris.

Memorial contributions may be made to the Spastic Paraphresis Fund.

Russell; his mother, Marjorie Russell, all of Charlevoix; one brother, Carney (Jeanette) Russell of Petoskey; two sisters, Ginger (Bob) Bischoff of Charlevoix and Jacklyn (Harris) Rosenberg of Arizona; three grandchildren, Tyler John, Kendyl Christine and Ethan Christian.

Although flowers are beautiful, the family prefers that memorial contributions be made to the Charlevoix Alano Club at 104 Mason Street, Charlevoix, MI 49720.

James David Bolhuis

James David Bolhuis, 61, of Arcadia, Fla. and formerly of Charlevoix, died Oct. 27 in Arcadia.

James was born on Dec. 20, 1938 in Charlevoix. He worked as a long distance trucker and then as an air conditioner mechanic for 20 years. Jim also served a tour of duty with the U.S. Navy.

He loved to scuba dive and water ski and just about anything else that had to do with the water. He was also a faithful Miami Dolphin fan to the end.

Survivors include his wife, Lee Bolhuis of Arcadia, Fla.; two daughters, Susan Troisi of Clearwater, Fla. and Judy Hurst of Arcadia, Fla.; four sons, James Bolhuis, Jr., and Joe Prusinski, both of Jacksonville, Fla. and Edwin and David Prusinski, both of St.

Augustine, Fla.; one sister, Ethel Grunch of Charlevoix; three brothers, Roy Bolhuis of Tulsa, Okla., Leon Bolhuis of Charlevoix and Alan Bolhuis of Grand Rapids; one grandchild and one great-granddaughter.

A private memorial service will be given at a later date.

In lieu of flowers, memorials may be made to your charity or church of choice.

Raymond Trentham

Raymond Trentham, 83, of Charlevoix, died Oct. 29 in Charlevoix.

A funeral service will be at 11 a.m. today, at the Bethany Lutheran Church in Charlevoix. The Rev. Michael Teuscher will officiate.

A burial will follow in St. Mary's Cemetery in Charlevoix.

Raymond was born on Dec. 9, 1916, in Gleason, Tenn., the son of Preston and Dollie (Adams) Trentham. As a child he moved from Tennessee to Lansing, where he graduated from Eastern High School.

On April 20, 1935, he married

Reatha Taylor in Lansing.

Raymond worked as a long haul trucker for the automotive industry and spent 15 years as a foundry worker where he became a supervisor.

In 1985, Mr. and Mrs. Trentham moved to Charlevoix to spend their retirement years.

Survivors include his wife, Reatha; four children, Gail (Fred) Hoisington, Lynn (Judy) Trentham, both of Traverse City, June (Tom) Riggle of Atlanta, Ga., Gene (Melanie) Trentham, of Onekama; one half-sister, Presteen (Robert) Blackshaw, of Lansing; one half-brother, Terry (Elona) Trentham of Gunn Lake; seven grandchildren, Kelly Hoisington, Kris Hoisington, Robb Riggle, Amy (Trentham) Dietz, Gwen Trentham, Brooke Trentham and April Trentham; seven great-grandchildren, Joshua Hoisington, Aaron Hoisington, Max Hoisington, Raymond Bumberry, Bradley Bumberry, Kaylieh Dietz and Allison Dietz.

In lieu of flowers, the family asks that memorial contributions be made to the American Heart Association. Envelopes are available at the Winchester Funeral Home.

Grandvue asks voters for .54 increase in mills Nov. 7

GRANDVUE

Space constraints, coupled with the facility itself being structurally outdated sparked the Grandvue board to act. They brought the matter before the county commissioners who subsequently approved the millage proposal deeming it worthy of voter's attention.

"I'm on the Grandvue board and I know that this (renovation) is definitely something they need. I look at four people stuck in a small room, when this is supposed to be their home away from home. Grandvue has tried to update itself but so many people are still cramped in small quarters," County Commissioner Shirley Roloff said.

The millage would allow Grandvue to expand and also to update.

Drury believes these improvements will allow Grandvue administration to not only better serve their residents but also to better serve Charlevoix County.

Population statistics for Charlevoix County show that 14.48 percent of county residents are age 65 and over. A percentage of these individuals may require services like those provided by Grandvue.

"This facility was built in the late 1950s and it met the standards of that time, but doesn't meet current standards. The rooms are too small for standard code. None of the current bathrooms meet handicapped standards; this would allow us to enlarge and add showers. We would also add actual rooms like additional dining rooms and added space for family visits. Currently, there is not enough space for residents to have their personal belongings, renovations could make their space more meaningful, more home-like," Drury said.

Charlevoix helps make CROP Walk a success

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Fifty-four Charlevoix residents showed their devotion to ending world hunger by lacing up their sneakers and walking six miles for the seventeenth Annual CROP Walk.

Charlevoix walkers raised $10,500 this year, which is $2,500 over last year's earnings.

"The funds raised show that Charlevoix residents are very interested in helping our local food pantry. One quarter of the funds raised come back to help the county," Charlevoix CROP Walk coordinator, Kay Smith, said.

Charlevoix, East Jordan and Boyne City walkers pool the sponsorship funds and then divide one quarter of their earnings three ways; this figure is the local share that will be allocated to each city. The remaining 75 percent is then distributed globally to devastated destinations like Honduras, a country ravaged by Hurricane Mitch.

Lucy Witthoef has been Charlevoix's top CROP Walk earner since 1994. Witthoef has been part of the campaign for nine years running and contributed $2,090 this year.

"This is a good cause and we walk because we care. We're helping needy people both abroad and most importantly at our local food pantries," Witthoef said.

Jill Washburn, 10-year CROP Walk veteran, was also one of this year's high earners. She brought in $700. Washburn sees the local benefit as an integral component of the walk.

"(I participate) to help hunger. 25 percent (of the funds earned through the walk) stays at our own food banks," Washburn said.

Aside from the local component, walkers stroll away from the event knowing that they have contributed to the quality of life of individuals beyond their immediate reach. In this sense, the CROP Walk is a vehicle for residents to touch the lives of others, such as Sharon Coen, a top earner, who raised $660 "to help fight local and world hunger."

Some walkers from this year's event have participated for many years while other top supporters like Steve and Jennie Martinus of Charlevoix who brought in $500 joined for the first time this year.

"We were able to collect $500, most of which was collected from the men and women Steve works with at Big Rock (nuclear plant). They were very generous," Martinus said.

Charlevoix coordinator, Kay Smith believes the local contribution to be particularly important as local, seasonal work can cause winter hardship for residents. "The sponsorship funds help in buying food for people that need it. In the summer when jobs are available less people are in need but when the tourist season drops off, the local need becomes more," Smith said.

GHB verdict leaves many questions

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

After a full week in court, on Oct. 24 a Charlevoix County Circuit Court jury handed down their verdict convicting Marc Guzikowski, 31, of Onkama of delivery of a controlled substance, but were not persuaded his actions were grossly negligent, thus issuing a verdict of not guilty of a second charge of involuntary manslaughter.

"This outcome could have been achieved in February without a trial. I'm never pleased with a conviction, but this (conviction of the delivery of a controlled substance) is much better than an involuntary manslaughter conviction. The seven year felony is not a homicide charge," Guzikowski's attorney, Gordon McLellan of Manistee, said.

The prosecution claimed Guzikowski provided a lethal dose of the illegal drug, GHB (gamma-hydroxy-butyrate) to David Hewitt, 44, of Charlevoix. The question for the jury to decide was whether his actions on the night of Oct. 21, 1999 were grossly negligent.

"(The defendant) testified that he had no idea it (GHB) was lethal. The prosecution did not have to prove the defendant intended for the deceased to die. The prosecution had to prove reckless conduct caused the death," 33rd Circuit Court Judge Richard Pajtas said.

An analogy may be drawn with alcohol related accidents causing death. In these cases the action of getting behind the wheel while intoxicated is considered to be grossly negligent.

Charlevoix Circuit Court Judge Richard Pajtas pointed to Guzikowski's testimony as the source of evidence from where the jury decided his actions were not reckless.

The defendant's testimony revealed that on the evening of Oct. 21 Guzikowski ingested a capful of the substance, the dosage recommended by a Florida man who had provided him with the GHB he called a "body building" serum.

He then provided fellow iron worker Brad Genson with a capful of the liquid. While the bottle was sitting in Guzikowski's Charlevoix motel room the decedent, Hewitt, took one or two swigs from the bottle. Guzikowski claimed he hollered, "Hey," and grabbed the bottle.

"The facts showed that the victim (Hewitt) picked it up (the Gatorade bottle holding GHB) and drank a lethal amount, not taking it by the capful as the defendant was offering it. This didn't rise to the level of gross negligence," County Prosecuting attorney Mary Beth Kur said.

The jury was not persuaded beyond a reasonable doubt that Guzikowski engaging in reckless conduct caused the death of the decedent. This decision was not made quickly and initially divided the seven-man, five-woman jury sending them into almost 12 hours of deliberations.

Pajtas commented on the initial verdict by the jury, "Initially the jury reached a verdict on count one (delivery of a controlled substance) but were hung on count two (involuntary manslaughter)."

The jury traveled into uncharted waters with this case, in fact the Charlevoix Circuit Court case marks only the second case in the State of Michigan involving the controversial drug, GHB. During deliberations family members and attorneys representing both the plaintiff and the defendant nervously milled about the halls of the Charlevoix County Courthouse while the jury discussed the intricacies of the case in closed quarters.

David Hewitt's widow, Judi Hewitt sat outside the court room during the long hours of deliberations hoping to hear the jury return with convictions on both counts. Judi believes Guzikowski's actions were grossly negligent and the repercussions of his actions should be prosecuted to the fullest extent.

"This (the death of David Hewitt) has destroyed my family. I have a 7-year-old little girl and a 16-year-old boy. We had just bought a brand new house before David was killed. I thought David was out with two of his best friends. She (Hewitt's daughter) knows drugs are bad, but she doesn't understand why someone would come up here with something that is literally poison and give it to people," Judi said.

Not only does the jury have to look closely at the many facets of the case, but local law enforcement officials have also felt the impact. The Charlevoix Police Department was first on the scene the morning of Oct. 22 and investigated the case. The infiltration of GHB and other substances into the area has lead Police Chief Dennis Halverson to reevaluate his approach to investigating crime scenes.

"We (the Charlevoix City Police Department) don't see it (GHB) that often to where you look for it every time. From an investigative standpoint our office will have to obtain some level of chemistry knowledge. This trial shows how important the crime scene is," Halverson said.

"This adds another level of knowledge the officer has to have in investigating. We had one previous GHB case at the Belvedere. Aside from GHB, ecstasy and others have been thrown in. From a training standpoint it's an area we need to keep current on to adequately investigate."

The delivery of a controlled substance charge carries a maximum sentence of seven years in prison. Guzikowski is scheduled to be sentenced at 9 a.m., Dec. 1 in Charlevoix County Circuit Court.

"At the sentence hearing everyone will be permitted to provide input, the prosecutor, Hewitt's widow, the defendant and the defense. There is a background investigation underway to obtain prior criminal records, education and employment information, family history and drug assessments. That information will be present in the investigation report. I will take into account all of this input to fashion the appropriate sentence," Pajtas said.

Two square off for County Drain Commissioner

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

Charlevoix resident Joanne Beemon of the Green Party thought she was going to be uncontested in her bid for Charlevoix County Drain Commissioner, that is until recently.

Beemon's contender for the position, Republican James Easley, an electrical inspector for the county, was removed from the ballot in September after it was ruled he did not get enough votes in the primary. But, Easley was soon replaced by Republican write-in and county building inspector, Ken Doty.

Doty, 42, of Boyne Falls, said he had talked about running a while back, but when the time came he was "unavailable," so Easley ran. Now that Easley is off the ballot, Doty decided he would run as a write-in.

Beemon, 54, said she is running for the position because she feels she is a good candidate with a wealth of knowledge in water quality and land issues. Beemon is also the director of the Charlevoix County Land Conservancy.

According to Beemon, the drain commissioner supervises all aspects involved in establishing and maintaining drain solutions and problems in the county. She sees this position as one that helps protect the natural waterways in Charlevoix.

"Water is essential to life. You just can't have sewage in your drinking supply," she said.

In the past, Beemon said, the mentality was that people could drain off anything into ditches and then run that into streams and lakes. This created pollution problems, she said.

"What we really need to do is slow the flow and ensure that no pollution is running into the water," Beemon added.

Her first project, if elected, will be to label all of the drains on streets and parking lots with warnings that anything dumped into them will run into the lakes.

"People just do not understand those drains go to the lake," she said.

Beemon added with the current increase in development in the area and the creation of on-site retention ponds, the need for a drain commissioner in Charlevoix is great.

Currently the position is part time and does not have an office.

But, Beemon sees the duties of the drain commissioner in Charlevoix expanding and the need for an office in the county building becoming great.

"That office needs to be open at least once a week. We need to work with people to establish drainage districts," she said.

ELECTION 2000

"Water is life, so my responsibilities would be to ensure the water of Charlevoix would remain pure."

Doty said his main goal is to get the office of drain commissioner set up in Charlevoix. While the county currently has no drains, he said there are two requests for drainage districts in the Boyne City area.

He said he has an extensive background in drainage issues with two years as an intern with the U.S. Department of Agriculture creating ponds, dams and drainage ditches and he has a wealth of knowledge about the drainage laws thanks to his position as county building supervisor.

Doty added he would like to get the drain commissioner's office established using the resources he already has in the county building department.

"We are familiar with dealing with state law. I deal with engineers and people on the road commission. I have a background for it and it keeps everything under one roof," he said. "If we keep it all in one department, we are not creating a position we are going to spend a lot of money on. I think it is a wise move for the taxpayers."

Once he has the office established in the county and open to the public, Doty said he is unsure if he would run for another term.

In addition to getting the office set up in Charlevoix, Doty said this is also an attempt to "put a little faith back into the building department." Doty, and Charlevoix County, were recently found guilty of violating the state whistleblowers act. This cost the county about $150,000.

In addition to his knowledge of getting the office established, Doty said he cares quite a bit about the environmental quality in the area.

Doty said he has grown up in this area, canoed the Jordan River and learned to swim in Lake Charlevoix.

"As to the development around it, I am very concerned," he said.

"We are not going to stop the development, but we can control it within the limits of the laws that are currently in place. I am not out to change those laws. I am there to work within those laws for the county and its citizens."

Recycling bins show up across county

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Large, green recycling bins wearing the Charlevoix County logo are currently lined up along the left side of the parking lot at the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department.

These dumpster look-alikes offer residents the opportunity to show their environmental interest.

According to Charlevoix County Planner, Larry Sullivan, recently the Cedar Ridge Landfill began reaching capacity. At the planning commission was in the process of revising the county solid waste plan and in an effort to make the plan comprehensive they conducted an attitude survey of county residents. The survey revealed community interest in beefing up the local recycling program.

"The new solid waste plan did recommend a strong recycling component and that additional drop-off sites be established. There was a pretty positive response in favor of recycling from those people surveyed," Sullivan said.

"(Recycling's) been a long time coming to Charlevoix; it's good to see it back in the area," he added.

According to Larry Levensgood, Recycling Committee member and environmental health specialist, in the past, recycling programs have operated in Charlevoix but were under private ownership (Three R's Recycling.)

Neumann, Flanders discuss health care, senior issues

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

For the last new story before the election, candidates for the 106th District Seat in the state house, incumbent Andy Neumann (D) and challenger Francis "Brownie" Flanders (R), discussed Medicaid, healthcare and ways to help seniors.

According to Neumann, one of the main problems with Medicaid is the way reimbursements are given out to doctors.

Andy Neumann

faster and in larger chunks.

Flanders also said the reimbursement process needs to be changed.

"What happens is doctors and providers are saying, 'You don't pay, we won't provide the service,'" Flanders said.

Francis Flanders

very critical of past federal programs that hired people to promote Medicaid, however that has now changed. "People need to know about these programs," he said.

Neumann also said more promotion needs to be done for these government health programs, especially MICHild.

"The state needs to do a better job of promoting that to working parents," he said. "They have to do something to make sure everybody has it."

On other health care topics, Neumann also said he is very concerned about the cost of health care in northern Michigan, specifically pharmaceuticals.

Neumann said he would support a plan that would greatly help out anyone over 60 years old needing drugs. Under this plan, the state would buy drugs in bulk — costing half of their usual price — and seniors would be able to purchase these drugs from pharmacies at cost.

"There is no cost to the state," he said.

According to Neumann, many other organizations and 11 states already do this.

Flanders said, while he usually hates to see the federal government involved in matters, making drugs cheaper for seniors could be one way the federal government could be helpful. He suggested using the social security system to keep track of seniors and track prescription coverage onto Medicare.

He added he would like to see the federal government contract out with a private insurance company to provide prescription coverage and fund it out of tobacco money.

While the candidates agreed on many health care issues, the one issue they differed on was the state Patients Bill of Rights.

Neumann said he believes this Bill of Rights needs to be reworked. "All of the insurance carriers are in favor of it, it didn't accomplish anything," Neumann said. He said the bill needs to give patients the right to sue insurance companies.

"Physicians say if someone comes to them with chest pains they can put them in the Intensive Care Unit. But, if that person needs to stay a second day, (the physician) needs to get approval from the insurance," Neumann said. "If insurance says, 'no' and they leave and have a heart attack, they can sue the doctor but they can't sue the insurance company."

But, according to Flanders, people already have the ability to sue their insurance company for service, what they can't sue for is malpractice.

"I guess I don't have a problem with that. If you let people sue for damages, HMOs will be bankrupt," Flanders said.

He added he believes if doctors think a treatment is right for their patient, they will press the issue with the insurance company.

In addition to discussing health care, the candidates also spoke about what they will do for seniors.

Flanders, who noted he is a senior, said from his visits to many senior centers in the area, he can clearly see these places need a little more funding for upkeep.

"These are places where seniors can go and have a warm meal and is also a social center for these folks. These places need a little more funding. They all need sprucing up, just a little bit. But there isn't any money," Flanders said.

He added there has to be some funding out there to help these centers out.

"If we had $2,000 a piece for these 10 or 12 senior centers, these people would be so excited," Flanders said.

Neumann said he has already been working on bills to help seniors in the area. One such bill, which didn't make it out of committee, would have given tax credits to family members taking care of a senior member of their family in their home.

According to Neumann, the federal government already allows this tax credit but the state of Michigan does not.

BALLOT LANGUAGE FOR NOVEMBER 7, 2000

HAYES TOWNSHIP: Road Repair and Maintenance Proposal

Shall the previously voted increase in the 15-mill limitation imposed under Article X, Sec. 6 of the Michigan Constitution on general ad valorem taxes within Hayes Township be renewed at one (1) mill ($1.00 per $1,000 of taxable value) for the period of 2001 through 2005 inclusive for the purpose of road repair and maintenance; and shall the township levy such renewal in millage for said purpose, thereby raising in the first year an estimated $106,431.00.

ST. JAMES TOWNSHIP: Proposal

This proposal will permit the Township to restore the Township's .8625 mills for airport operations and maintenance previously approved by the electors and now expired. The Headlee Amendment previously reduced this millage to .8329 mills. This ballot proposal renews the existing .8329 mills and restores the .0296 mills previously rolled back by the Headlee Amendment.

Shall the limitation on the amount of taxes which may be imposed on taxable property in the Township of St. James, County of Charlevoix, State of Michigan, be increased by eight-six and 25/100 cents ($.8625) per thousand dollars ($1,000) (.8625 mills) of the taxable value on all taxable property in the township for five (5) years, 2000 through 2004 inclusive, for the purpose of providing funds for airport operations and maintenance of the Township? If approved and levied in its entirety, it is estimated that the .8625 mills would raise an estimated $23,327 for the township when first levied in 2000.

COUNTY OF CHARLEVOIX: Charlevoix County Medical Care Facility Bond Proposal

This proposal will permit the County to borrow up to Seven Million Five Hundred Thousand Dollars ($7,500,000) to pay for renovation and construction of additions to the Grandvue-Charlevoix County Medical Care Facility. This renovation and new construction would correct building deficiencies, create a new Alzheimer unit and add hospice and respite beds.

Shall the County of Charlevoix, Michigan, borrow the principal sum of not to exceed Seven Million Five Hundred Thousand Dollars ($7,500,000) and issue its general obligation unlimited tax bonds therefore payable in not-to-exceed sixteen (16) years from the date of issue, for the purpose of renovating, improving, equipping, and furnishing the Grandvue-Charlevoix County Medical Care Facility and constructing, equipping, and furnishing additions to the facility and any necessary site improvements? The estimated millage to be levied in the first year that the levy is authorized, estimated to be 2001 is .54 mills ($.54 per $1,000 of taxable value) and the estimated simple average millage required to retire the bonds is .54 mills ($.54 per $1,000 of taxable value).

YOUR HEALTH

Diabetes may hurt eyesight

Dr. Kim Molter

'To your health'

There are approximately 16 million Americans with diabetes. All are at risk of developing sight-threatening eye diseases that are common complications of diabetes. Since November is National Diabetes Month, I would like to take this opportunity to tell you a little bit about diabetic eye disease.

The most common diabetic eye disease is diabetic retinopathy, caused by changes in the blood vessels of the retina (the inside back surface of the eye). Retinal blood vessels may swell and leak fluid, or abnormal new vessels may grow on the retinal surface. The National Eye Institute estimates that of the approximately 10.5 million Americans who have diagnosed diabetes, between approximately 40-45 percent have some degree of diabetic retinopathy.

As many as 24,000 people go blind from this disorder annually, making it a leading cause of blindness among adult Americans. Diabetics also tend to get earlier cataracts and are nearly twice as likely to have glaucoma (when the eye fluid pressure is increased, leading to optic nerve damage) as non-diabetics.

Often there are no symptoms of early diabetic retinopathy. The most common symptom is blurred vision but that may not be noticed until the disease is severe. There is also no pain associated with this condition. This is why regular eye examinations for people with diabetes is so important.

The National Eye Institute recommends that people with diabetes undergo a comprehensive eye examination through dilated pupils at least once a year.

Dilating the pupils allows the doctor to see more of the inside area of the eyes to check for signs of diabetic retinopathy. If you are a Medicare beneficiary, you may be interested to know that results of another recent study that stated that more than half of diabetic Medicare beneficiaries fail to get necessary annual eye examinations, despite having that insurance coverage.

This study also concluded that regular eye exams could reduce the risk of blindness due to diabetic retinopathy by 56 percent.

Diabetic retinopathy cannot be prevented, but your risk can be greatly reduced. Factors that increase the risk of developing diabetic retinopathy include poor control of diabetes, smoking, high blood pressure and pregnancy.

If treatment is required, thermal laser surgery may be used to control the abnormal blood vessels in the retina.

Finding and treating the disease early before it causes vision loss is the best way to control diabetic eye disease. So, if you have diabetes, make sure you have a dilated eye examination at least once a year.

At Eye Health of Charlevoix, we are able to provide this service and we think it is an important part of our job to tell you about your eyes and our findings during the exam, and to answer any questions you may have.

Our office hours are 8:30-5:30 Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday (closed Wednesdays).

Newspaper columnist talks about diabetes

Detroit Free Press newspaper columnist Susan Ager remembers the day when her life changed because of diabetes.

She was diagnosed with Type 1 insulin-dependant diabetes at the age of 10 in 1964. From then on, her mother measured her food and regulated everything she ate.

"Back then, Type 1 diabetics gave themselves one shot a day of insulin, that's how they treated it," Ager said.

When she went off to college at Michigan State University, Ager realized that for the first time in her life, she was in charge of what she ate.

"I was free, I realized I could eat whatever I wanted," Ager told about 45 people who gathered at Charlevoix Area Hospital Oct. 19 to hear her talk about her disease.

Ager found the soft-serve ice cream in the MSU dormitories to be more tempting than she could resist. For years she ate ice cream and injected herself with insulin to balance out her blood sugar levels.

Many years later, when she was 27, living and working in San Francisco, Ager received extremely distressing news. While having her routine eye exam, she was told that she had retinopathy, a deterioration of her eye sight from diabetes.

Ager found a physician who specialized in treating diabetics, and he was one of the first physicians who promoted home testing of individual patients' blood sugar levels by poking their own fingers.

Since then, Ager has been the master of her disease. She tests her own blood with a routine finger stick five or six times a day, watches what she eats, exercises five times a week, and until recently injected herself with insulin when needed.

About eight months ago, Ager found a new physician who encouraged her to try the new insulin pump. She finds it to be extremely easy to live with and much better than injecting herself with a hypodermic needle several times a day.

Ager encouraged those present to be determined to not let their diabetes rule them.

"Once I learned how to control my blood sugar, I felt that this pet of mine wasn't dragging me around on a leash anymore," Ager said.

Recycling in Charlevoix opens for business

RECYCLING

According to Levegood because the station operated in the private sector it was driven by market forces which lead to inconsistencies in cost passed on to the customer and what the station accepted.

The new program supported by county taxpayers utilizes the Emmet County Recycling Station which is fully equipped to handle the recycling process from the bin filled to the brim to the bundle that goes to market. The station expanded in 1993 and again in 1997 using $500,000 in funds generated from the sale of recyclables.

Recycling station public works director Elisa Seltzer explains, "We spend money to get the product to market and they send money back.

Environmentally and economically it is a win-win."

The station uses a sorting and packaging process that begins at home with consumers. Here is a list of materials accepted at the Charlevoix location: Aluminum, aluminum foil, aluminum trays, aluminum cans, number one and number two plastic bottles, newspaper, magazines, catalogs and clear glass. According to Seltzer 90 percent of bottles and jugs are number one or number two. The Charlevoix site will also soon be seeing a cardboard receptacle.

Separating these materials into the proper labeled bins reduces the level of contamination in each load and increases that load's market value.

There is very little missing from this list of accepted refuse that we dispose of regularly, still newcomers to the recycling game may be left behind in the cloud of confusing terminology like number one and number two plastic bottles. Levegood explained the bottom of plastic containers are marked with a 1 or a 2.

Levegood has a limerick in order to remember which the transfer station takes and which aren't accepted, "Don't send us your big mouths, send us your scrawny necks."

Butter tubs and large plastic tubs of ice cream may fall under number one or number two, but are non-recyclable at the Emmet station. There are, however, ways to make use of these plastic containers, as they make great Tupperware.

In terms of plastics many feel guilty throwing away large laundry and dishwashing detergent bottles — these can now be recycled locally.

In fact, Tide bottles are actually turned back into Tide bottles. The plastic is melted down and a new bottle is formed from the product. However, don't throw in your motor oil or anti-freeze bottles, they contaminate the load.

There are workers who sift through the sizable loads and make sure all is well so recyclers can help make their lives more pleasant by following guidelines like: the no motor oil rule, pulling labels from tin cans and rinsing the containers.

"We ask you to take off the labels so we don't have paper flying around and causing problems," Seltzer added.

Interested participants can check the new bins out at 1000 Grant Street, 24 hours a day, seven days a week. For more information contact Shirley Roloff at 547-6169 or Nancy Ferguson at 547-2285.

DIDJA SEE ANY GHOSTS, SKINNY

'CAUSE THERE WUZ LOTS OF 'EM OUT FRIDAY NIGHT

We Seen a Witch, Too, A Ridin' Right Over Th' Chimbleys On a Broomstick

Halloween in Charlevoix, while not characterized by the wild and woolly behavior of former times, was yet well enough observed to be interesting.

Though no serious depredations were committed, gangs of happy roisterers roamed the streets, soaping the windows, piling queer stuff up in queer places and keeping a sharp lookout for further opportunities to stir up excitement.

Somebody's Ford Roadster was pushed out into Bridge Street and blocked traffic at the intersection of Clinton Street until removed by the patient and we imagine somewhat sympathetic authorities. Some youngsters in a Ford touring car had a great time rolling an empty oil drum between their front wheels up and down Bridge Street, while a gang of assistants paced the sidewalk and set the drum in position to be picked up again whenever it got unmanageable and rolled away.

Some of our citizens came in for special attention on the part of the merry makers and their lawns and porches presented the appearance of No-Man's Land after a hard battle or the wake of a Kansas cyclone in the cold gray dawn of the morning after.

One fellow from the country left his Ford outside the Charlevoix Hotel for a few moments while he went into a store. When he came out again, everything seemed all right but it wasn't. He cranked and cranked and cranked some more and finally, a broad grin of understanding stealing over his features, he reached in and untwisted the carburetor valve and presently rolled away with traces of the grin still remaining and Lizzie sputtering fitfully. The "gang" was nowhere in sight of course.

Meanwhile, the small fry were enjoying themselves at various parties arrayed in sheets, false faces and paper hats shivering delightedly at ghost and witch tales, huddling together in blissful terror at the places where the wails and groans come in and casting frightened but anticipatory glances at the doors and windows where eerie shapes might appear at most anytime.

In various gatherings of their staid but no less enthusiastic elders in several of the city's homes, bridge and "500" whiled away the evening, or perhaps Mah Jong. In short, everybody celebrated — the nature of their merry-making being gauged according to age and tastes rather than enthusiasm.

POOR BRAND OF SCHOOL SPIRIT

BOYNE CITY CANCELS GAME ONCE SCHEDULED

Aver Charlevoix Team Are Rough Players and Seek Newspaper Notoriety

The question of a football game between Boyne City High School and Charlevoix High School, and Boyne City's replies to our request for games, has aroused a great deal of comment here recently.

It was observed with great amusement the article published in the Grand Rapids Herald, dated October 18, which originated in Boyne City and her football team were very disappointed in not being able to secure a game with Charlevoix this year, and that they (Boyne City) never considered a season complete without handling the "boys at the foot of the lake" a good drubbing.

The brand of school spirit that has been followed in Charlevoix makes it impossible to answer a letter received from Boyne City, canceling the game that was scheduled with Boyne City last Saturday, in the same manner that it was received. Never in the history of the school has the team manager told an opposing team that they deliberately played a dirty game. These statements were made with reference to last year's game, when Boyne City came here for a so-called practice game which was to prepare them for the future bigger games. Boyne City was on the small end of the score and unfortunately one or two of their men were slightly injured, due absolutely to the breaks in luck. Football is a rough game, a well known fact, and those participating in it must be able to stand a little roughing around. It is not a game for girls or small boys. This was the only reason given by Boyne City for not wanting to play Charlevoix. Another, not stated by them, was that Charlevoix defeated Traverse City 20-0. We are sorry that the Boyne City boys do not play rough games, but we are sure that we can get enough of our girls together to arrange a sociable little game of "puss in the corner," or some other like game, which all could enjoy. Surely the girls wouldn't play rough. We would be glad to arrange a party of this kind for Boyne City, but undoubtedly would have to get the written permission from all of the Boyne City mothers before we could get them here.

Boyne City never has, nor never will, turn out a team that Charlevoix will not meet, even if they do beat Traverse City 20-0, and they will never complain of the opposing side playing rough. Nor do they cancel a game once scheduled rather than chance defeat.

In answer to Boyne City's article in the Grand Rapids Herald, we wish to say that we would very much appreciate the "drubbing" that would complete Boyne City's season, and that the "boys at the foot of the lake" are more than willing at any time to play Boyne City here, there, or on a neutral field.

A record number of voters in Charlevoix County turned out to voice their choice for both local and national elected officials Tuesday.

Charlevoix County Clerk Jane Brannon said the 65 percent voter turnout in the county was larger than any she has ever seen.

"There is more stuff that people seem to be interested in, I guess. I think the presidential race is the big promoter," she said.

According to Mary Ann Chew, who volunteered to lend a hand at the Charlevoix Township Hall, this year's voter turnout was certainly high.

"I think we are going to have a big count. It's been a busy, busy morning, which is great," Chew said in reference to Charlevoix Township's vote count at 12:30 p.m. which was 352 voters and close to 300 absentee voters.

Local winner, Green Party candidate JoAnne Beemon, was able to withstand the last minute write-in campaign of Republican Kenneth Doty — Beemon now fills the post of Charlevoix County Drain Commissioner.

Beemon is the first elected Green Party official in the State of Michigan, she received 86 percent of the vote, out-polling Doty 5,349 to 892.

"As a Green Party candidate I dared to challenge the political machine of Charlevoix County, things are not business as usual. More important than corporate profit are fair wages and family well-being, more important than the gross national product is clean water and air. These are the things the Green Party stands for, a sort of new hope that I am proud to be a part of," Beemon said.

Attendees at Northern Lights get a taste of the 'Big Easy'

By JULIE MUSILEK

As attendants of the Fifth Annual Northern Lights celebration strolled into St. Mary's school Saturday evening it was as though they had stumbled upon Bourbon Street during Mardi Gras.

The dinner, dance and auction celebration was decorated floor to ceiling with everything from masks and beads to lobsters.

"This was the fifth year; every year the event has gotten a little bigger," promotions chair Vickie Daman said.

"This is like the St. Mary's prom and everything came out very well. We were very pleased."

Authenticity was the word of the evening. The dining room was dripping with Mardi Gras' signature colors; purple, green and gold. According to britannica.com, the colors were chosen in 1872 by the King of Carnival. Purple stands for justice, green for faith and gold for power.

One hundred and eighty three ticket holders wearing elaborate evening threads, wandered from room to room signing their names and assigning bids to various auction pieces.

Dinner fit the decor and the theme. Chicken gumbo soup with andouille sausage was served followed by the entree: seafood, crayfish newburg wrapped in a pastry shell formed into a fish shape — a blend of French and Cajun cuisine to fit the charm of the event.

After the Up North Big Band played some tunes and guests worked off their dinner on the dance floor, the auction began.

Former student faces trial

An 18-year-old former Charlevoix High School student will be facing a jury after a recent arraignment in Charlevoix County Circuit Court on criminal sexual conduct charges.

Nathan Charles Cleary is accused of one count of criminal sexual conduct in the third degree for allegedly having sex with a 13-year-old Charlevoix girl.

In Michigan, it is against the law to have sex with a person 13-15 years old.

According to court records, the incident allegedly happened at a Charlevoix apartment on June 15, 2000.

After his arrest on Sept. 8, Cleary has been free on a $500 bond. A condition of the bond is that he have no contact with the girl.

Charlevoix attorney Mark M. Muniak was appointed by the court to defend Cleary.

A jury trial has been set for 8:30 a.m. Dec. 18 in the circuit court.

Criminal sexual conduct in the third degree is a 15 year felony.

According to Charlevoix High School Principal Gary Grundman, Cleary was a student at the school last year, but failed to report to classes this year.

The senior center has done some major updating on a meager budget allowing for extra space for crafts and computing.

However, more funding is needed to allow all visitors access to the facility as the lower level is not handicapped accessible.

"It's amazing how much work can get done on so little funds. The renovations offer our visitors more opportunities, the feeling in the center is better, people are working together better," Senior Center Director, Ginnie Schairbaum said.

According to Schairbaum, the basement wasn't in use until recently.

In January of 2000 improvements began being implemented through the financial support of grant writing agencies and in-house fundraisers.

With only $3,500 the basement which was once a lifeless storage area has been transformed into a recreation center where seniors and other visitors enjoy everything from line dancing to learning introductory computer uses. The line dancing floor was donated by a summer resident and senior center regular who wanted to bring dance options to the center.

"Forty people have already got their hands on a computer and have learned something, but they need practice, that is why we opened the lab and are expanding the hours the lab is available. We have people who come in and eat lunch who are in wheel chairs. If they want to work on the computers they can't," Schairbaum said.

Those charitable political campaigns

It's interesting to note how much money is spent on modern political campaigns.

Just look at the recent political election. Millions of dollars were spent throughout the country to try and get Joe Public to get out of the house and vote for some smiling politician in a nice suit.

In the presidential election, the total raised for each of the major party candidates, was well over $40 million.

Locally, the candidates for the first congressional district seat in Michigan raised an estimated combined total over $1 million. The candidates for 106 House seat, Francis "Brownie" Flanders and Andy Neumann, also raised a heck of a lot of money. Flanders raised a little over $40,000 while Neumann raised over $130,000.

This money comes from donations to the candidate by private individuals, corporations and big political action committees. While in the past people may have donated because they liked a candidate, it seems today these donors are using this money to "suggest" various types of policy they want the candidate to endorse.

There is a journalism saying that states, "If you want to know which way a politician is going to vote, look at their campaign contributions in the last election."

So, what do these candidates actually need all this money for? This year, it seemed they needed this money to create negative television ads that distort the truth and make their challenger look like Satan's offspring.

No wonder we are having a problem with voter apathy in this country.

With all this money being raised by politicians, you would think charities have no problem raising millions of dollars. Citizens, corporations and political action committees seem to have plenty to give away.

However, many charities have money woes every year forcing them to limit the amount of help they can give, while the candidates waste a large majority of their money on tarnishing the image of their challengers to get a vote.

What an interesting country this would be if charities had millions of dollars donated from individuals, corporations and political action committees to help people, while political candidates had to beg for the scraps.

What happens to the leaves that are raked into the street?

Roger Knutson
'Ear to the ground'

Among the annual problems or opportunities we face if we own a few trees is what to do with the leaves.

This seems to have been a particularly good year for leaves, at least judging from what I have raked up so far. Trees in climates like ours actually produce more leaves than do otherwise equivalent trees in warmer climates. A tree is faced with the problem of growing at a maximum rate with the seasons and climate available to it. Trees living where the growing season is short do marginally better if they make less wood each year and put most of their energy into making more leaves. With a longer growing season fewer leaves can accomplish the necessary food production for a tree.

So, it's not just your imagination: trees in Charlevoix do produce more leaves than those down-state.

The community where I lived before moving to Charlevoix considered leaves to be the problem solely of the property owner. We were enjoined to remove them in our own way and we had an almost annual community argument about if we would be allowed to burn them and when we could do that. I was pleased to find that Charlevoix considers the leaf disposal problem to be a whole community concern, rather than the sole responsibility of each citizen.

What relief it was to be able to just rake or blow the leaves to the curb and have them disappear. Depending on how much you worry about such things, you may have wondered just what happens to those leaves that are vacuumed up at your curb.

Charlevoix Street Superintendent John Martin and his troops are accomplished in leaf removal. They are also accomplished in leaf renewal. All the leaves picked up along our streets go into a compost making operation and, in the course of time, are turned back into the soil they came from. That seasoned compost is available at the street department for any citizen who wants some for their yard.

The making of compost, the turning of leaves back into soil, is — in the natural world — the accomplishment of an entire ecological community. That means everything that eats leaves or parts of them and everything that participates in the decay of leaves. In the less natural world of Charlevoix's urban forest, the intervention of the street department is required, but the outcome is the same.

Our whole community makes, moves, composts and redistributes the tons of leaves our trees produce each year. A healthy forest is one in which each year's production of leaves is carefully composted by the living inhabitants of the forest and returned to the cycle of life. We should be pleased that our social community does pretty much the same thing.

Letters to the editor

Thank you

Editor:
We would like to express our thanks to Sheriff George Lasater and to his Sheriff's Department of Charlevoix, for their dedication in the line of duty.

Approximately one month ago, our Veterans of Foreign Wars 1153 Post Home on US -31, was broken into. There was tremendous and extensive damage (approximately $8,000) done to our building: to doors, cabinets, walls, office equipment and even a refrigerator-freezer, when the burglars used crow-bars to pry open every door and cabinet in our building ruining the doors and surrounding areas.

The break-in occurred in the very early hours of the morning, and was not discovered until approximately 3 p.m. on a Friday, when several of our members arrived to set up the hall for our bingo games that evening. The investigation team led by Sergeant Donald Sproul was expedient in arriving on the scene when notified of the break-in. They did an outstanding job in the thoroughness in assessing the damages and investigating the problem, enabling us to be able to conduct our bingo games that evening. The co-operation between responding units and agencies was to be noted and highly commended.

After the initial investigation,

Sheriff Lasater had caused his staff to patrol regularly and frequently to check for any potential problems in the area of our building. They continue to do so, but of course they can not be at each location 24 hours per day.

We would like to thank and commend Sheriff Lasater and his staff for their diligence and a professional care of all property in Charlevoix County. We feel very fortunate to have such dedicated men in service for us in Charlevoix County.

Let council know what you think

Editor:

The issue of whether to sell a city-owned 9 acre parcel of property just southwest of M-66 and west of Ferry Avenue, which contains a portion of the old Medusa Railroad Spur, is again before the City Council. This topic was previously addressed in the Charlevoix Courier, Aug. 23.

The property is currently being appraised and has been under study by Joanne Beemon, of the Charlevoix County Land Conservancy. She has recently sent a letter to the council which advocates the value of this property for the community.

A.J. Witthoef, councilman from the Third Ward, has also been contacted with regard to establishing a committee of community representatives who will study the possible uses of this area for the public.

Potential ways in which this land might be used are the follow-

Letters to the editor

Schools could use this area for classes in ecology and environmental studies. The high school would like to use the Medusa Spur for track and cross country ski training. The hospital is interested in how this spur could be used by patients who need mild forms of exercise to recuperate from various illnesses and surgeries. Religious groups could use this area to teach the spiritual and inspirational value of nature. Most importantly, this acreage would provide a place for the public's recreational use, since additional hiking and biking paths could be provided.

As the growth of development continues in the Charlevoix area, the public needs to have a voice in deciding the fate of one of the last green belt open spaces in this vicinity.

We need to decide whether clearing and filling of this land and construction of buildings on it is in the public's best interest. Is there a point when excessive development of the land leads to a decrease in the attraction of this beautiful Charlevoix area?

Write to your city council person or Charlevoix Township representative, and express your views. Remarks may also be addressed to the City Council, at City Hall, P.O. Box 550, Charlevoix, MI 49720.

The City of Charlevoix Fire Department presented this year's Fire Prevention theme, "The Great Escape" "How To Get Out Alive," teaching the children from Pre-K through sixth grade the way to get out of a house "Alive," Oct. 16.

The kids had to crawl out of a bedroom filled with actual "safe" smoke. The bedroom door is hot to the touch, so the children had to find another way out. They are taught to unlatch and open the bedroom window, and crawl out to safety. We have several different window models that allow the children to practice opening them in a controlled environment.

A special thanks to the sponsors that made our program successful. Joseph Schwartzfisher

Charlevoix County CROP Walk final results are in Final results are now in from the Seventeenth Annual Charlevoix County CROP Walk, which was Sept. 30.

The goal of 150 walkers and $17,500 in pledges was met by the group who walked. Walkers totaled 152 and money in the amount of $18,948.30 was earned.

Diana Walls, Boyne City chairperson, reported 37 walkers from that area who brought in the amount of $4,400. Marge Teske, who chaired the East Jordan portion of the project, cited 55 walkers and $4,048.30. Kay Smith, Charlevoix chairperson, states that 60 people from Charlevoix participated and earned $10,500. Lucy Witthoef of Charlevoix obtained pledges in the amount of $2,090.

A feature of this walk is that 25 percent of the money earned returns to the three local food pantries in these communities to help fight hunger in Charlevoix County. The rest of the money is used to fight hunger on a world-wide level.

The three chairpersons wish to thank all those who walked, those who made pledges, those who drove walkers back to town or helped in any other way, and the Boyne Valley Lions Club, which served a luncheon to walkers at the Ironton Congregational Church.

Center to host spaghetti dinner for needed funds

SENIORS

The improved lower level is equipped with everything from new walls, carpet and flooring to new lighting. According to Schairbaum six volunteers came down to the center and installed the carpeting and the drywall. However, in the far left corner sits a vacant elevator shaft waiting to be filled by an operational elevator.

"Our priority is to finish the downstairs and get access to it. We have enough money to go down, but we can't get back up," Schairbaum said.

Also awaiting the generosity of the community is a brand new water heater recently donated to the center. The water heater currently sits idly in the furnace room awaiting the arrival of a skilled volunteer willing to hook it up.

Schairbaum urges residents who once donated to the center, but following the passage of the senior citizen millage halted donations, to understand the center is, not reaping the benefits of the millage.

"We want people to continue to donate. We need to pay our electrical costs and heat bills. We get no operational funds at all from the millage," Schairbaum said.

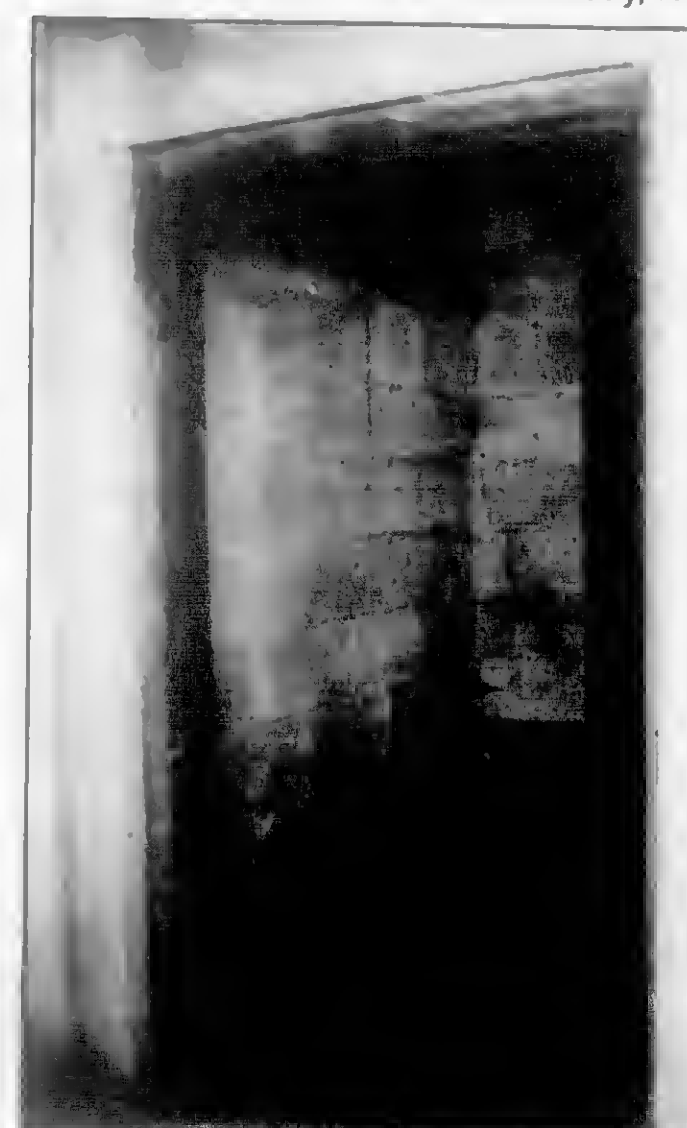

Aside from computing opportunities, line dancing and crafts the center offers wood carving and calligraphy. All of these programs are funded through donations and executed using volunteer efforts.

"We have more fundraising events planned. We need even more carpeting and lighting. We have the measurements and a bid but we still need the funds. The spaghetti dinner will raise funds for the elevator and other center renovations," Schairbaum said.

The senior center all-you-can-eat spaghetti dinner — to raise funds for the center — will run from 12 to 4 p.m., Nov. 11 at the Charlevoix Senior Center, 06906 Norwood Road (adjoining the Carpenter Field baseball/softball diamonds.)

According to Schairbaum, this event is an opportunity for the community to show their support for the center, to check out basement renovations and to purchase crafts made by center visitors.

Hospice offers help to get through the holidays

The holidays can be a difficult time for those who have lost a loved one in the not-too-distant past.

Charlevoix County Hospice, in partnership with the Northwest Michigan Community Health Agency, are teaming up to offer a "Handling the Holidays" program for anyone who feels the need for help in getting through the holidays.

The free session will be at 7 p.m. Thursday in the large classroom on the lower level at Charlevoix Area Hospital.

"This program is open to anyone who feels a need for help to get through the holidays," said Margaret Lasater, Hospice Community Assistance Manager.

"Participants will hear of simple plans to handle some of the stresses associated with the holidays and they'll receive a wonderful booklet that contains a holiday planner and other useful tools to use."

Whether your loss has occurred in the past few months or the past few years, the holidays can bring about feelings of loss and sadness, added Fran Hilal, Hospice Supervisor with the Northwest Michigan Community Health Agency.

The Rev. Buzz Wallis and the Rev. Carl Litchfield, Hospice spiritual advisors, will talk of "the Grieving's Holiday Bill of Rights" and COPE.

Participants who have questions about the free program, or any hospice services, may call the Charlevoix County Hospice at (231) 536-2842.

Drivers should prepare for the winter season

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Abnormally warm fall weather may be masking the encroaching threat of winter, but AAA representative, Len Price of Traverse City offered some helpful hints to equip Charlevoix drivers with winter defensive driving techniques.

According to City Police Chief Dennis Halverson the number of motor vehicle accidents in Charlevoix greatly increases in the winter months.

"Typically in December we will have around an average of one accident per day in the city of Charlevoix. The most common hazardous action is failure to assure a clear, safe distance ahead — rear ending," Halverson said.

"A lot of factors come into play. The worst time period for accidents is in the beginning of the winter when drivers' habits have not yet changed. In the winter when the roads are slippery we have to change our driving habits."

As we begin to see cooler temperatures creep in its time to start making preparations for your safety on slick northern Michigan roads, starting with a look at your car. Here is a short checklist each automobile traveling during winter months should be subject to.

• First, check your battery and have the terminals cleaned at a service station or clean them yourself with baking soda and a wire brush. There is nothing worse than going to start your car on a chafing winter morning and finding your battery is tapped.

• Your vehicle's anti-freeze should also be checked. It may be time to have the anti-freeze flushed out and replaced with fresh coolant; this can also be checked by an attendant at a service station.

• Thirdly, a tire check may mean the difference between landing in the ditch and safely negotiating your way down the road.

To check your tires' tread, Price offered a penny trick. Take a penny and stick Abe Lincoln's head down into the tread. If you can still see his head you are in need of new tires. If his head is buried into the tread it is adequate. The penny trick should be performed in three places across the tire. Drivers are good to go if Lincoln's head is buried in at least two of the three places.

Tire replacement can be very pricey so those in the market for new tires can evaluate a few factors in making their decision.

According to Price, in most cases, tires with sufficient tread do not need to be replaced with snow tires. A money saving option is to purchase snow tires for the front two wheels rather than all four.

Get your vehicle ready for the wrath of winter

WINTER

Price does not recommend that individuals replace only the front two wheels if they do a considerable amount of highway driving.

"If you live out in the country and you know your road is the last to be plowed or your driveway is steep you'll want to buy more aggressive tires," Price added.

Other check points include: Inspecting headlights, windshield wipers, belts and hoses, fluid levels and tire pressure. You need the right amount of air in your tires to ensure good traction.

Once your car is ready for the road, Price offers some interesting driving tips.

Many cars today are equipped with ABS brakes, but their drivers do not have a clue how to properly operate them.

"An ABS braking system is much better than ordinary brakes. It is the greatest invention since power steering and can save lives if used correctly," Price said.

According to Price, the biggest barrier to the correct use of the ABS system is trying to teach an old dog new tricks. Most drivers were taught to pump the brakes in the snow — threshold braking. Those with regular brakes should still follow this rule of thumb.

According to Price, those with ABS brakes should press their foot on the brake and if the car starts to slide, push harder. AAA encourages motorists to practice winter driving with their braking system by heading out on a road with shallow ditches during the first major snowfall and practicing braking.

"Those with the ABS system should push harder when the pedal vibrates. Keep pushing hard to keep them activated. With ABS brakes if you hit the pedal correctly your car will stay on a straight line and you will have the opportunity to steer and avoid the car in front of you, even on ice," Price said.

Other easy to follow AAA instructions include: Changing your pace by slowing down, leaving headlights illuminated at all times and closely watching motorists coming at you.

"That person can lose control in a hurry. Two-lane roads are the most dangerous type of road. Passing cars are only three feet from contact — your safety space is three feet at 55 miles per hour. A little drift is all it takes," Price warned.

AAA also would like to teach drivers whose vehicles have a manual four wheel drive option in what conditions four wheel use is both necessary and safe.

"If you have four-wheel drive don't bet your life on it. It is nice when driving through heavy snow at speeds up to 35-miles-per-hour, but if traveling 45 or 50-miles-per-hour on hard packed snow in four-wheel drive the back end of the vehicle wants to pass the front end and it will spin," Price said.

With these tips in mind and a survival kit in the trunk, winter driving will hopefully be a safer, less frightening experience for Charlevoix residents.

Northern Lights a success

ST. MARY'S

According to St. Mary's Principal Janet Troppman, this year's big sell was a "Castle Dinner" for six couples, catered by Grey Gables and scheduled to take place in May of 2001. The bid on this unique opportunity climbed to $2,050.

However, Troppman and Volovsek pointed to the raffles as the evening's big hit.

Troppman bubbled with excitement as she explained the raffles from the purchasing of the keys to enter the raffle, right down to the final eight possible winners who tried their luck at the locked box in hopes of finding themselves in New Orleans or wearing an elaborate diamond studded bracelet or taking home a new set of various tools.

The goal for this year's event was to raise $48,000, $8,000 above last year's earnings. Final tabulations were being calculated Monday and Troppman believes funds will be closer to last year's figure.

According to Troppman, aside from the reported great food, fun, entertainment and elaborate raffle prizes the focus of the evening is in helping the kids.

"It's for the children of St. Mary's. The funds raised will go toward operations of the school, textbooks, utilities, teacher salaries and teaching supplies. We are able to keep tuition low and we make up for it through fund-raisers," she said.

Both Troppman and event co-chair Marie Volovsek praised their 100 volunteers as integral components in this year's success.

"We couldn't have gotten this event together without the talent and hard work from all our volunteers. Their work ethic made my job as chair very easy," Volovsek said.

This year was the first Northern Lights that was given at the school. Previous celebrations have taken place at the Knights of Columbus. This was also the first year that St. Mary's hosted a Friday preview for those who could not attend Saturday's event.

"Friday's preview went very well. The Northwest Academy band played. It was a relaxed social event," Troppman said.

St. Mary's to host second annual homeless sleepout

About 100 children and 50 adults from the area will discover what it is like to be homeless for a night at the St. Mary's of Charlevoix Second Annual Homeless Awareness Sleepout Friday.

Starting at about 7 p.m., people from throughout the area will be gathering in the parking lot of St. Mary's Church in Charlevoix to stay the night in a cardboard box. They will also be gathering donations for the Covenant House in Michigan through pledges.

The sleepout will wrap up at 8 a.m. Saturday.

The Covenant House assists youth who have nowhere else to turn and attempts to meet the needs of homeless and at-risk youth in communities all over the country. The centers provide outreach, crisis care, vocational and educational training, mother/child care and substance abuse programs.

Three representatives from the center will be joining the participants in the Charlevoix sleepout to share their stories of working with homeless youth and why these young people ended up on the streets.

Patty Furtaw, coordinator of the youth ministry, said participants had a wonderful reaction to last year's event.

"They said they have a better understanding of the homeless," Furtaw said.

For more information on the event, call Furtaw at 547-6438.

boys' cross country team, "The boys did what we expected. We ran our race and ended up fifth."

The Charlevoix boys' team was ranked in seventh place going into the meet, but Ken previously said he and the team expected to do better than that.

"The boys had a very good day. Three years of working has paid off; now it is looking better for the future," Ken said.

Only one of Charlevoix's six runners from the boys' team that went to state will graduate this year.

Ken added when most of the team were freshmen, they told him they wanted to bring back the "glory days" of Charlevoix cross country.

"They have accomplished that," he said.

Individual finishes and times at the state meet out of 250 runners were: Tim Daining, thirty-fifth, with a time of 16 minutes, 37 seconds; Peter Gorkiewicz, forty-fifth, with a time of 16 minutes, 51 seconds; Gordie Selph, sixty-fifth, with a time of 16 minutes, 59 seconds; Zach Hopkins, eighty-fourth, with a time of 17 min-

Know the facts about diabetes in November

Each November the Charlevoix Area Hospital makes an effort to educate the public about the symptoms of diabetes and to help people learn how to take care of the disease and prevent its complications during National Diabetes Awareness Month.

Anyone is at higher risk for diabetes if they are 45 or older, overweight, have a family history of diabetes and do not exercise. A woman who has delivered a baby more than 9 pounds and has had diabetes during pregnancy is also at higher risk, along with people of Native-American, African-American, Hispanic and Asian ethnic backgrounds.

Know the warning signs. These include extreme thirst, frequent urination, blurry vision, unusual tiredness, recurring infections, tingling or numbness in hands or feet. Inform your doctor if you have any of these.

The American Diabetes Association recommends that everyone be tested for diabetes by age 45. Ask your doctor for the test. It requires only a simple blood test. Some communities offer free blood glucose screening for those over 18 years old.

What will happen if diabetes is left untreated? It can lead to serious complications, such as heart attack, blindness, kidney failure or leg amputation. Thanks to new technology and medications, diabetes is easier to manage.

With early diagnosis and teaming up with a diabetes educator, one can learn to self-manage their diabetes to stay in control of diabetes and not let it control you. They can provide the expertise and support one needs along with the dietitian, physician, foot doctor, pharmacist and eye doctor to live a healthy life.

This year the American Diabetes Association is placing emphasis on preventing foot, eye and heart complications. You can call (800) 342-2383 to obtain free information on free screening in your area and on taking care of your diabetes.

For information on diabetes self-management education contact Peggy Spang, Registered Nurse and Certified Diabetes Educator at Charlevoix Area Hospital, 14700 Lakeshore Drive, Charlevoix, MI 49720 or call 547-8571.

While a new face and party will be filling the position of drain commissioner in the county, a familiar face will stick around in law enforcement. Incumbent candidate George T. Lasater will be sworn in for his seventh, four-year term as Charlevoix County Sheriff.

"Charlevoix County residents have been very supportive of my efforts to make this a sheriff's office they can be proud of and that is responsive to the needs of the citizens of Charlevoix County. I will devote all of my efforts and the efforts of the staff to continue meeting the challenge that we are faced with. I personally feel very humble that the citizens have continued to give me and the staff this vote of confidence over the last 24 years," Lasater said.

Overall, Lasater received 8,465 votes to Democratic challenger Edward R. Johnson's, 3,682.

Johnson said, "I'll run again. Thank you for the support I did get."

Also relevant to county voters is the passage of a county-wide tax proposal to benefit the Charlevoix County Medical Care Facility (Grandvue). 8,149 voted in favor of the proposal while 3,661 opposed the tax increase.

"We will start right away to finalize our building plans so that we can begin construction in the spring. It (the funding) will be a wonderful thing. It will have an immediate impact on Grandvue residents, family and staff and will also have long-term beneficial effects for the community," Grandvue Administrator Penny Drury said.

Contested positions for townships across Charlevoix County resulted in a mixture of incumbents retaining their seats and in some cases the election of new township officials.

Democratic incumbent for the position of Charlevoix Township treasurer, Theda Williams, handily kept her seat with a 565 to 339 win over Republican challenger Margo Johnson.

"I'm grateful that the people trusted me enough to give me another chance to serve them," Williams said.

In Eveline Township Republican write-in candidate for supervisor Daniel Skrzeczkoski beat out Republican Norman R. Miller by a vote of 430 to 369.

Hayes Township had no opposed seats for the Township Board, but residents did agree to a 1 mill, four year road repair and maintenance proposal by a vote of 635 yes to 295 no.

In Peaine Township Republican incumbent for the position of township supervisor John W. Works, Jr. raked in the vast majority of the votes defeating write-in candidate Donald Spencer in a 112 to 30 win.

"I am really happy, this is a real vote of confidence in the work I have done over the last four years. I am doing this job because I want to make a difference," Works said.

In a close race in Peaine Township, Democratic incumbent candidate for township trustee Frank J. Blatt was defeated by Republican candidate Judith Laner who received 84 votes to Blatt's 80.

Residents of St. James Township approved a tax increase of .0296 mills to raise funds for airport operations and maintenance.

While the results for the entire 106th District were not in before press-time, county numbers revealed that voters seemed to back Democratic incumbent Andy Neumann of Alpena as their representative of choice in the state legislature. Neumann out-poll local resident and Republican candidate Francis "Brownie" Flanders by a vote of 6,827 to 5,258.

"I am very happy. You work very hard and in some instances are unsure of how the citizens view you. This gives me great confidence. The first thing I plan to look at is the health care issue in an effort to protect the rights of patients and doctors. And I will look at the appropriations process and fight for more dollars to come up to Michigan," Neumann said.

Flanders said, "I'm sorry the results turned out the way they did. We worked very hard and had the support of a lot of people throughout the district."

The position of representative in Congress for the first Congressional District also seemed to be going to Democratic incumbent Bart Stupak who defeated Republican candidate for the position, Chuck Yob, in Charlevoix County by a close margin of 6,491 to 5,679.

Simulator helps prepare area nurses for real life

A patient is wheeled into the operating room with numerous internal injuries, but most significant is a severe trauma to his neck and throat.

He was riding an ATV through a field when he struck a wire fence. How does the anesthesia provider anesthetize this patient without being able to get a tube down his windpipe? And how long would the Operating Room nursing staff keep trying before calling in a surgeon?

These and many other critical real-life scenarios were acted out during an unprecedented educational opportunity of Certified Registered Nurse Anesthetists (CRNAs) that involved testing their techniques on a human-like mannequin "simulator" this past weekend at Charlevoix Area Hospital.

"Stan the Man," as he is called by the industry technicians who lead the clinical simulation training and educational programs, is a state-of-the-art simulation mannequin that allows for training clinicians at all levels of medical education. Stan was "the patient" for the two-day training, and CRNAs from several northern Michigan hospitals honed their skills by treating the simulator during various scenarios of possible operating room emergencies.

Much like the invaluable training pilots receive by reacting to all types of possible situations in a flight simulator, the Human Patient Simulator (HPS) allowed CRNAs to gain experience in anesthesia crises and situations.

Sophisticated mathematical models of human physiology and pharmacology determine automatically the mannequin patient's response to various actions and interventions. The mannequin simulator is hooked up to a heart monitor, or hemodynamic screen, and a control screen for the anesthesia machine or ventilator. Everything functions as if the mannequin were a live person with respiration, blood pressure, pulse and all other vital signs.

The only other hospital in the state of Michigan that has hosted this program is William Beaumont Hospital in Detroit, said Connie Jones of Medical Education Technologies Institute (METI). Jones travels around the United States conducting the educational program at a rate of about 25 each year.

Arranged by Michael MacMillan, CRNA, and Director of Anesthesia at Charlevoix Area Hospital, the program is called Novation's Education in Anesthesia Techniques (NEAT). Novation is the company that provides the mannequin simulator. All those who participated received continuing education credits.

Participants included MacMillan, Ken Forrester, CRNA from Charlevoix Area Hospital, Joe Hawkins, Pharmacist at Charlevoix Area Hospital, Nancy Johnson, Sandra Gibbs and Bruce Ward, all CRNAs from Northern Michigan Hospital in Petoskey, and Barb Burg of Ludington Memorial Hospital in Ludington.

Leading the value-added program was Donald Pierce, M.D., and NEAT director. Assisting with any questions was Marty Clements, sales representative for Datex/Ohmeda, the company that manufactures the anesthesia machine used during the educational program.

Topics covered throughout the two-day intensive training method included Difficult Airway Management, Anesthesia for Major Vascular Surgery, Challenges on Obstetrical Anesthesia, Challenging Cases of Hypotension, and Challenging Cases of Hypoxemia.

The mannequin simulator was invented by J.S. Gravenstien, who was inspired by the training methods used by flight crews on commercial airline flights. Gravenstien is a world-renowned anesthesiologist who was a passenger on a commercial flight when it had to be evacuated.

He was so impressed at the crew's preparedness and their ability to handle the situation without panic, that afterward he said to the crew members they must have been through this situation before.

"No," they told him. They had only trained with simulation.

Gravenstien went on to invent the device that allows medical personnel to learn in the same fashion.

Township looks at zoning changes

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

The Charlevoix Township Planning Commission heard some public comments on its proposed amendments to the Charlevoix Township Zoning Ordinance, Oct. 26.

The new ordinance claims to offer residents a more polished product.

"This is a situation where we are primarily organizing the ordinance. A lot of good information wasn't easily understood; we tried to organize and structure the new ordinance to make it more understandable," Fred Hoisington, who is writing the ordinance for the township and is director of planning for Gosling and Czubak of Traverse City said.

Charlevoix Township Zoning Administrator Bob Rajewski added, "Not a lot has changed but has mostly been rewritten. The ordinance has not just been updated, but the whole thing has changed. We are mostly bringing the wording up to date and making sure everything is legally proper."

According to Hoisington the new ordinance reduces the number of districts, "zones," in Charlevoix Township from 17 to 12 for easier administration of the ordinance. There were four commercial districts in the old ordinance, which may be grouped into one district in the new ordinance.

Jerry Pool, Charlevoix Township resident and president of the environmental group WATCH, raised concern related to the reduction in commercial designations. His concern surrounded the possibility of heavier uses being permitted to butt up against a residential district.

At the meeting, members of the planning commission assured attendees that this grouping did not include "heavy" commercial uses. In the proposed ordinance, these "heavier" uses fall under an industrial classification.

Other concerns were raised as to how Charlevoix Township plans to accommodate the service class many of whom currently commute to work in Charlevoix, but cannot afford to live here.

Under the proposed ordinance, the vast majority of residential land in Charlevoix Township falls under R-1, one family dwelling district. The proposed ordinance would stipulate that the minimum lot area permitted in R-1 would be 15,000 square feet. In R-2, the one and two family dwelling district, the minimum lot area is reduced to 10,000 square feet. The third residential division is R-3, manufactured home development district.

The proposed ordinance states, "The purpose of the Manufactured Home Development District is to provide an affordable housing alternative in manufactured home developments where appropriate and consistent with the general character of the Township."

There is also a fourth residential distinction, the PRD district, or the Planned Residential District which allows for "mixed housing types" and "clustering housing."

Aside from residential and commercial designations other changes are being proposed. Changes within the ordinance itself include the addition of 13 pages of definitions to aid in ordinance users understanding. Also included is a shoreline protection section and an access management section.

The access management section was hailed by Hoisington as a useful long-term tool in reducing congestion by proposing to limit access to highways.

The new ordinance reads, "The minimum horizontal distance between any two accesses on the same side of the highway, whether streets or driveways, as measured from their centerlines, shall be 500 feet."

County planner Larry Sullivan pointed to an inefficient situation where this new zoning rule would have alleviated congestion.

Sullivan takes a hard look at the post office driveway and believes that if the Kmart parking lot were to adjoin the post office, congestion would be reduced. This type of thinking is what the ordinance would require. Businesses either must adhere to the aforementioned size requirements or can work within ordinance limitations by sharing driveways.

New off-street parking requirements address the number of spaces that must be provided and the dimensions and configuration of those spaces.

Also included in the ordinance is a home-based business section which would allow home-based businesses by right, rather than by special use permit, but with more standards. Home-based businesses are listed under uses permitted with special restriction.

The proposed ordinance also reduces the number of uses under the special use permit as compared with the old ordinance.

According to Hoisington, the special use permit section now encompasses "more major uses." Things which would require a special use permit include, telecommunications towers, sexually oriented businesses, mining of sand and gravel, transfer stations, wind energy conversion systems and mixed use development.

There is also included a new provision for enforcement of violations.

The ordinance states, "The zoning administrator shall investigate each alleged violation and shall send to the alleged violator by registered mail a written notice specifying all violations and ordering him or her to correct the violation within 60 days of the notice."

"I don't really see the ordinance as having been rewritten. The changes being made are being done for the residents and will make it much more easily understood by those who have to live by the rules," Hoisington said.

The Charlevoix Township Zoning Ordinance is currently sitting in the county planning office awaiting review at the County Planning meeting Dec. 14. The Charlevoix Township Planning Commission is also looking to amend the township's master plan and will have a public meeting November 15 at Stroud Hall to hear public comment.

The rocky history of the south point area

Marilyn Boss

'Days gone by'

The thousand acres on south point, or two mile point — as many Charlevoixians know it — has been using its rock in one form or another for many a year.

During the early part of the century, it was known as the Charlevoix Rock Products Company and was served by a railroad spur that crossed US-31 south of the Flight Deck bar. Some large holes were dug to get the rock out and they also made lime there, as limestone was in abundance. The kids in my generation referred to the area as the old lime kilns. The ruins were standing there for years and we used to go out and have picnics with our group of friends when we were in high school.

Piles of rubble had formed steep, short hills, ideal for taking an old $85 Model T coupe, which we owned in the 1950s, up and over the moguls. There were trails all through the area and that little T handled the moguls with ease, as it had a high ground clearance. We would put the kids in the car and would go over those moguls like you would ride a roller coaster. It was lots of fun, even though I remember one time we got caught at the top of a particularly pointed one.

Dale remembers an old sign nailed on the front of a barn that sat south and west of the present senior center on Norwood Road that read, "Property of Newgo Portland Cement Co." The Norwood Road at that time, continued past the old township hall and came out at Pat McKeown's corner on US-31. The railroad was taken out at the beginning of World War II, as the iron was needed for the war effort.

Medusa Cement, headquartered in Cleveland, Ohio, acquired the property in 1928 and for many years sent Charlevoix Township $400-$500 per year to maintain the shore drive that they owned. This drive began at the Charlevoix sewer plant and continued to just a few feet short of the parking lot at Bell's Bay. This was a distance of about three miles of roadway. People could drive this road until 1965, when they decided to build the present plant.

The railroad had to be installed for the second time across US-31 and the city had to find an alternate route to bring it to the point. They had bought the adjoining property and the old railroad bed was under the new airport runway.

Every day, about 4 p.m., when our kids got out of school, we would take our station wagon out to the point and take movies of the construction. There were big Euclid trucks which were used to haul the rocks that were being dug out to make the canal. Great massive power shovels were used to dig out the blasted rock and load the trucks. To describe their size, one truck was brought downtown for the Venetian Parade and was so huge, the box just fit under the stoplight. We were all mesmerized watching the action each day as the work progressed. They left the end of the pit toward the lake closed, so water wouldn't come into the working area. It was quite awesome to view the work from ground level, as we looked down at the scene below us.

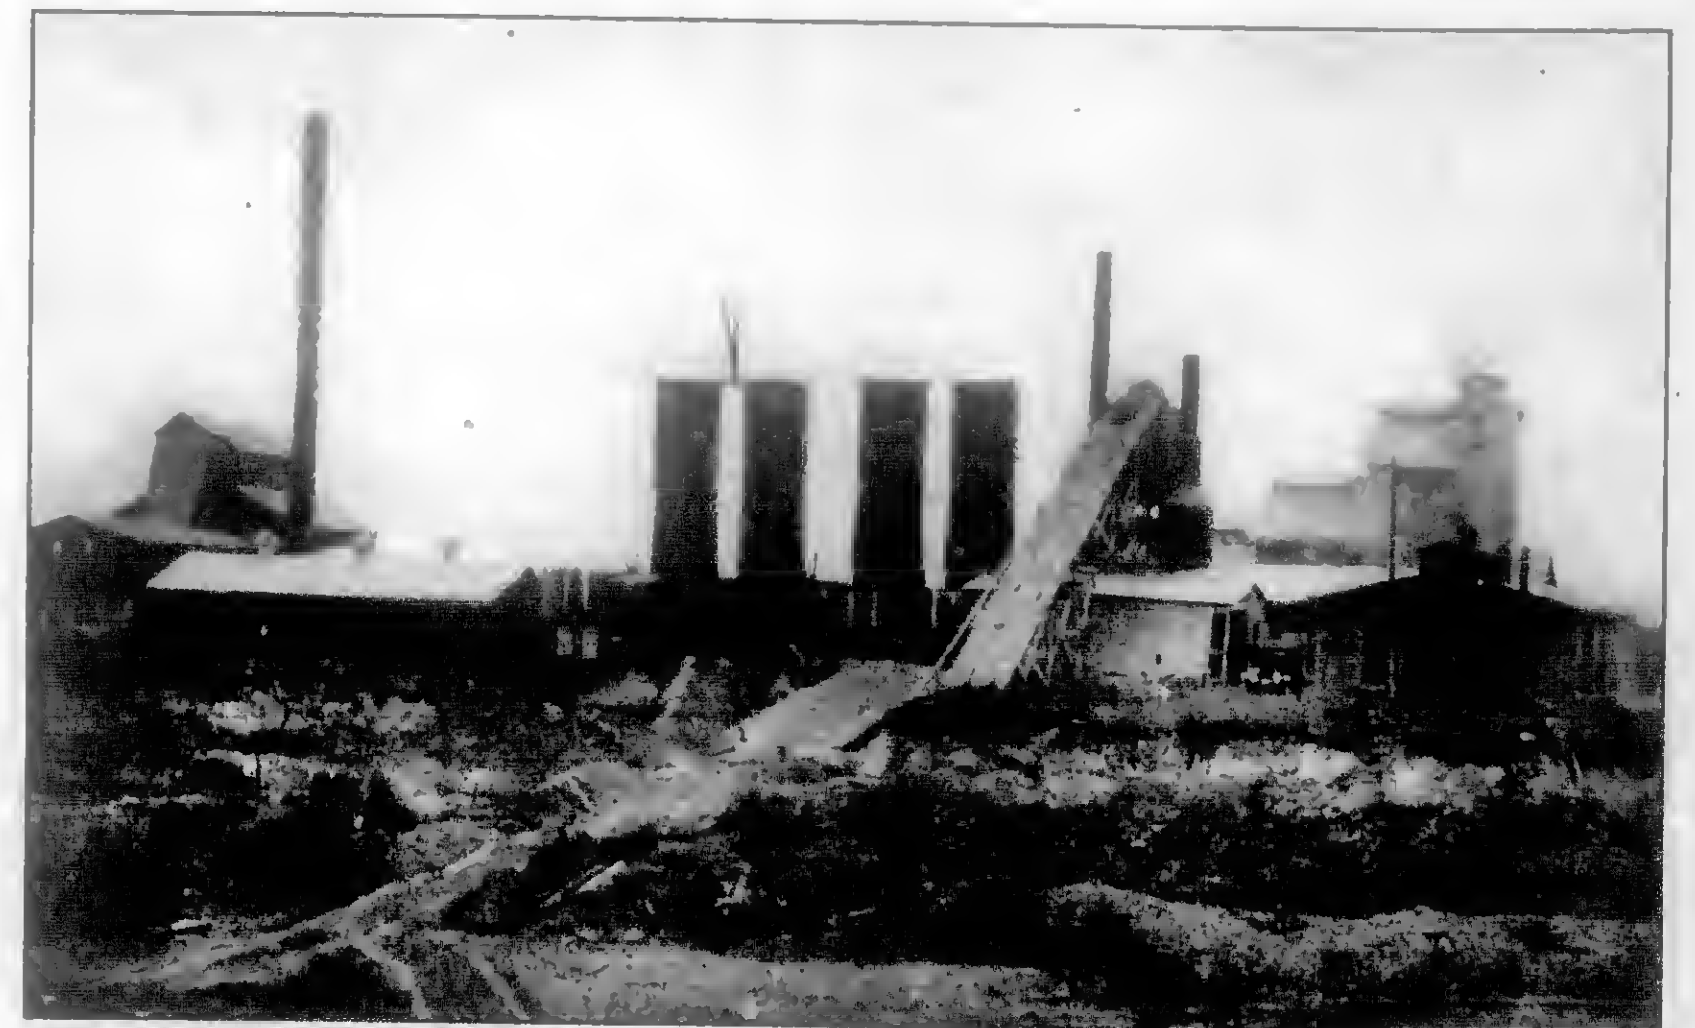

Credit should be given to the late Jake White, a local commercial fisherman, who convinced the engineers to cut through the end of the point. His plan was to make the canal in the direction it is today, because of the prevailing winds. A breakwater was built by towing two old ship hulls to the area. They were filled with stone and cement to weigh them down and keep them on the bottom of the lake. When the silos were built, forms were made and they were moved upwards daily, with a continuous pour, so there were no joints. This site may be another Bay Harbor-type resort complete with an inland harbor occupying the old quarry, when the plant is no longer operating.

The new plant was completed in 1967 and during that summer, many families transferred here from their plants in adjoining states. In 1979, a group of local citizens from Charlevoix Township, where the plant is located, forced a referendum vote as they did not want Medusa to be able to expand. As a result, another huge Charlevoix controversy developed.

Dale took the side of Medusa, as there were many Charlevoix workers employed there and jobs were needed at the time. He spent many donated days working out of an office which Medusa rented in the Kusina complex to win the controversy.

Dale helped sort out which people would most likely vote favorably, so the plant could put on their needed expansion. The vote was overwhelming in favor of the plant. No one was paid for their time. Continued next month....

Vicki Voisin honored by Legal Assistant Associations

Vicki Voisin, a certified legal assistant employed by the Charlevoix law firm of Joseph, Corcoran, Telgenhof & Barnes, P.C., has been honored by two Michigan legal assistant associations.

On September 22, 2000, at the Annual Meeting of the Legal Assistant's Section of the State Bar of Michigan, Voisin received the Section's 2000 Mentor Award which honors an individual who has made an outstanding contribution to the legal assistant profession.

Legal Assistant's Association of Michigan (LAAM), at its Annual Meeting in October, named Voisin the recipient of the Association's first Legal Assistant of the Year Award which was named the Vicki Voisin Award in her honor.

The Vicki Voisin Award will be presented annually to recognize and acknowledge a legal assistant employed in the State of Michigan who has demonstrated long-standing commitment to, and support of, LAAM, the National Association of Legal Assistants (NALA), and NALA's Certified Legal Assistant (CLA) credential. Further, a candidate for this award must have made a significant contribution to the promotion and recognition of the legal assistant profession in general and LAAM in particular on a local, state and national basis.

That Voisin would be honored by her peers in this way is most appropriate. She has been employed as a legal assistant since 1978. A graduate of Central Michigan University, she received her CLA credential from NALA in 1984. She has also received her CLA Specialist credential in real estate.

Voisin has held several offices in both NALA and LAAM. This past July she completed a two year term as NALA President. With Headquarters in Tulsa, Oklahoma, NALA represents over 18,000 legal assistants nationwide through its individual members and affiliated associations.

Voisin has had articles published in numerous professional journals and spoken on both a state and national level on the topics of legal assistant ethics, the value of membership in a professional association, the CLA credential, and the promotion of the legal assistant profession. In addition, she was a contributing author when NALA published the Third Edition of its Manual for Legal Assistants.

Business Briefs

Oleson's planning to expand:

The familiar Oleson's grocery store in the shopping center at Bridge and Antrim streets is about to become larger. Much of the expansion will involve incorporating space in an adjacent shop that has been vacant in recent years. Mr. D.J. Oleson, vice president of the chain, was quoted as saying that the store will increase its area by 50% to 15,000 square feet, along with new flooring, raised ceilings, and renovated aisles. He also mentioned that the increased space would allow Oleson's to offer its customers more in products and variety. Work on the project is scheduled to begin in January, and complete in June 2001. Along with the expansion in facilities, Mr. Oleson stated that there would be a staff increase from its present 20 employees up to around 30 to 35.

In many cities, stores and businesses looking to expand are leaving downtown areas in favor of outlying locations. We commend Oleson's for its commitment to continue operating in the downtown area.

Changes approved on Harbor project Bike/snowmobile path proposed along site

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

At the Nov. 6 meeting of Charlevoix City Council, members approved changes concerning the Harbor Industries project which will cost an additional $103,410.

According to City Manager Mike Weisner, the state will fund 79 percent of the project and the city will pick up the remaining 21 percent. The local share is $21,716.10.

The majority of the project's cost stems from the installation of a bike/snowmobile path along a route which in the past has typically been used by snowmobilers. The high cost of the path, $98,310 includes: materials, Grade A concrete poured six inches thick and 10 feet wide and excavation.

"It (the proposed bike path route) is used now as a snowmobile route. The bike path development from Petoskey to Bay Harbor has seen a lot of use. I think the bike path/snowmobile area could be popular in the community," Weisner said.

The proposed bike path will stretch from the airport entrance to Carpenter Street. According to Weisner, the path may be extended further in the future. Contracts presented to council show work on the path will be started in spring of 2001.

The two remaining change orders are interrelated. A temporary storm pond was created at the southwest corner of the Marion Center Road/US-31 intersection. The pond was put in at the same time that the new intersection and related road work were being done this past summer.

According to Weisner, in lieu of Turnout large for elections in Charlevoix area

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

While the Nov. 7 election in Charlevoix had a record turnout of voters, residents seemed to favor incumbents and Republicans with their votes.

About 65 percent of the registered voters, or 12,712, took part in the election throughout the county. Their reasoning for voting was various.

"I vote because I feel I am part of what is happening. I've missed only one or two elections in my life, it's important to me. I like the family care renovations proposal (Grandvue). We don't do enough of that," Charlevoix resident JoEllen Faith said at the polls.

"I vote because it is my duty as an American citizen," Charlevoix Township resident Dr. John Lignell also said on Nov. 7.

Other important issues for voters were: the presidential elections, the state supreme court and Proposal One — a proposal that would have amended the state constitution to allow school vouchers.

County voters also seemed to favor Republicans over Democrats in this election, with 2,913 (59 percent) voting straight Republican Party ticket to 1,859 (38 percent) voting straight Democratic Party ticket.

For president and vice president, voters favored Republicans George Bush and Dick Cheney over Democrats Al Gore and Joseph Lieberman 7,017 (56 percent) to 4,958 (40 percent). For state senator, they picked Republican Spence Abraham over Democrat Debbie Stabenow, 7,272 (59 percent) to 4,588 (37 percent).

But, county voters seemed to approve of the jobs of some Democratic incumbents in office. They voted to keep Democrat Bart Stupak as the representative for the First District with 6,491 votes (52 percent) over Republican challenger Chuck Yob who received 5,679 votes (45 percent).

Future firefighters?

Children are always fascinated by fire engines, as the preschoolers at Charlevoix Children's House proved during a recent visit by Firefighter Joe Schwartzfisher of the Charlevoix Fire Department. While learning about fire safety, the children at the Montessori school experienced a "smoky" room and the delight of sitting in the driver's seat of the big truck. (Courtesy photo)

Man shocked back to life by quick thinking EMT

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Charlevoix resident Eugene Tower will be able to spend more time with his wife Nancy thanks to the heads up thinking of local EMT Bob Roloff.

Without warning, while pulling into the Glen's parking lot Oct. 1, Eugene Tower, a local elderly man, collapsed from sudden cardiac arrest.

Nearby, Fire Department and EMS personnel, Bob Roloff responded within minutes, shocked Tower and saved his life. Roloff and his wife are the only two local EMT's equipped with defibrillators in their non-ambulance vehicles.

"Bob eats and breathes EMS and he spends the money to do it. Seconds make a difference in cardiac arrest," Shift Commander for the Charlevoix City Fire Department, Joe Schwartzfisher said.

The American Heart Association attributes the majority of cardiac arrest cases to abnormal heart rhythms or arrhythmia. Ventricular fibrillation is the most common of these arrhythmia. In cases of ventricular fibrillation the heart's electric impulses become disorderly and cause the heart to stop abruptly.

Victims lose consciousness, as did Tower.

The heart association's findings state that if a normal heart rhythm is not restored within five to seven minutes death generally results. There is however a therapy for sudden cardiac arrest, defibrillation.

When Roloff "shocked" Tower, the electric shock delivered to his heart stopped the abnormal rhythm and restored a coordinated rhythm and normal pumping action to the heart.

According to the heart association each day nearly 1,000 Americans suffer cardiac arrest. More than 95 percent of them die because in most cases defibrillators arrive too late. The heart association advocates that all emergency vehicles be equipped with a defibrillator.

Schwartzfisher explained that low, local population numbers won't justify the cost of the equipment.

Charlevoix EMT workers employ a commonly used strategy known as "The Chain of Survival." The American Heart Association promotes the use of four crucial links in employing strategies to help victims of cardiac arrest survive.

The initial step is "early access to care" — in Charlevoix this step can be achieved by calling 911 to activate emergency response personnel. Then, "early cardiopulmonary resuscitation," — properly administered CPR can add a few minutes to the time needed for successful defibrillation. Thirdly, the heart association advocates "early defibrillation," which is exactly what Roloff was able to administer. Lastly, "early advanced care," patients who have suffered cardiac arrest and underwent successful defibrillation may require further medical attention on the way to the hospital.

Charlevoix EMT Bob Roloff was a lifesaver recently thanks to the defibrillator he carries in his vehicle. (Photo by Julie Musilek)

"It was an extraordinary experience my husband had with (Roloff.) My husband went into cardiac arrest at Glen's, someone called 911, (Roloff) was in the vicinity and he saved my husband's life. We feel very fortunate he happened to be in the area and he knew what he was doing," Eugene Tower's wife, Nancy, said.

For more information about cardiac arrest and fighting heart disease and stroke check the American Heart Association's web site at www.americanheart.org.

Charlevoix Area Hospital group makes donations to food pantries

Charlevoix Area Hospital employees, volunteers, physicians and friends collected more than 1,118 pounds of food for the annual Michigan Harvest Gathering recently.

The food was evenly distributed between five area food pantries: Charlevoix, Boyne City, East Jordan, Central Lake and Ellsworth, and will help families throughout the hospital's service area.

This is the third year that the hospital's staff and volunteers have participated in the program that contributes to local food pantries, and keep the donations within the local area. The food drive was sponsored by Charlevoix Area Hospital's HERO Committee, which stands for Hospital Employees Reaching Out. The HERO Committee is a group of hospital employees who have pledged and donated more than $160,000 to the hospital's expansion campaign.

OPINIONS

A few ways to stay active in the community

Jeremy
McBain

'Just a thought'

It sure is quiet around town.

The tourists have become a rare sight, dual-residents are heading to warmer climates and many seasonal stores have boarded up for the winter. To prepare for the coming cold, locals can be seen bundling up in layers and gathering ever-increasing piles of firewood.

Like an old bear, Charlevoix is getting ready for its long winter nap.

But, before residents settle down for the winter, filled with snow shoveling and cleaning off windshields, they have a few events during the next few months to keep their excitement levels up.

First there is this presidential election mess. While preparing for the winter, many Charlevoix residents have become news-junkies waiting to discover who the next president of the United States will be.

Whoever it will be, due to the close vote and this mess in Florida, I truly believe that the winner will have no bragging rights. The next president must understand the nation is divided and they must go into office with humility and a desire to bring the nation together.

There is no room at this time for some silly party-politics, but enough of this serious stuff.

Everyone is also getting ready for that always fun and exciting holiday season. Residents are running to the stores to gather food for visiting members of their families and climbing around on ladders outside their homes to put up twinkling lights that will decorate the night sky.

Charlevoix residents will also be spending some time having fun during the holidays, something they are very good at doing. They will gorge themselves on delicious food, toast their family and friends and play outside in this northern Michigan winter wonderland.

To help get them in the holiday mood, residents can attend the annual Charlevoix Christmas Tree lighting on Nov. 24. Starting at 2 p.m., residents can help decorate the Community Christmas Tree in East Park with waterproof hand-made ornaments.

The tree will be lit up at 6 p.m. for all to enjoy this holiday season.

And on Dec. 2, Charlevoix's merchants will get into the holiday spirit with a Christmas Open house, filled with many activities and plenty of gift ideas for the family.

Added to all of this is a special event that is a once in a lifetime occurrence. Many people thought this event took place last year — and many wrongfully celebrated too early.

The next New Year's Day will mark the official start of the new millennium, 2001.

That's right, unlike what you may have heard, the new millennium did not start with the year 2000. Almost every scientist on the planet and every government — including the United States of America — agree that the millennium starts with 2001.

So, we at the Charlevoix Courier decided we would help the community celebrate this event and give future residents a reminder of what Charlevoix was like at the turn of the new century and the new millennium.

Starting at 11 a.m. on Dec. 2, we are asking that all of the residents of Charlevoix and its surrounding area to gather in East Park for a special community photo. A picture of this gathering will be taken at about 11:30 a.m. by the famous and always professional photographer....me.

This picture will be published in full color on the front page of the first edition of the Charlevoix Courier in the new millennium, scheduled to hit the streets on Jan.

Who knows, maybe 100 years from now, this edition of the Charlevoix Courier will become a valuable collector's piece fetching a hefty price at a fancy New York auction. And because you kept your copy and passed it down through the generation of your family, they have a valuable treasure, that could be displayed in the Smithsonian Institute.

Or maybe my imagination is getting away from me.

The bottom-line is; this picture will be a great way for the community to create a lasting record of who we were and what we looked like at the end of 2000. Regardless of whatever price it fetches at a fancy auction, it will truly be a treasure to future generations of Charlevoix residents.

Minority may be right

Editor:
This is an abridged version of the letter which I submitted on Aug. 28. Hopefully it meets your criteria:

"Sir, I disagree with your comments that a minority cease complaining about the school construction site and concede to the decision of the masses. I have recently retired from the Army; during my visits home during the last 20 years, I have seen the whole nature of Charlevoix change. Development has been rampant and restraint appears to have been almost nonexistent. If opposition to 'sprawl' had been more ardently expressed beforehand, there might be a much more sensible approach to the whole school construction program now.

I say this because I have seen first hand the results of a very similar set of circumstances. My first assignment was to West Berlin, in what was still occupied Germany. It was a city with a wall around the western parts, erected by the East German government. The authorities had put up the wall 'for the good of their citizens too.

East Berlin had regular elections; and as a matter of fact, there was a great effort to ensure that as many people voted as possible. But you know the funny thing? Except perhaps for the dogcatcher, every election and every issue was already decided. Those in authority used the 'elections' to rubber-stamp what had already been determined. I see a very strong correlation between then and now.

There was also an East Berlin minority who expressed their dissatisfaction with what was so blatantly wrong. Many of them never were seen again; I don't think that will happen here, but I certainly don't feel as comfortable as I once did when I go to town. All were derided, some served long prison terms for expressing the obvious. All was perfectly proper, because there had been an 'election' and the 'people' had expressed 'their' thoughts through the power of the ballot. Sound familiar?

I saw a lot of both sides of the Berlin Wall and the people it controlled. Do you know where those in charge lived in the East? Far from the wall, in homes that differed little from the finest homes in Charlevoix. I don't believe that any of the school board or senior school administration lives anywhere near Marion Center Road. I wonder why, or why not?

The Wall disappeared in 1990 after years of terrible strife; because a minority kept complaining. How much longer will Charlevoix be subject to uncontrolled development before someone says enough? I for one, say that time is now."

Voters need the Electoral College

Editor:
Our nation is experiencing a profound challenge. Some blame the Electoral College. Senator Elect Hilary Clinton has called for its abolishment. Carefully consider the words Alexander Hamilton wrote to the People of New York State on March 14, 1788, Federalist Papers No. 68.

"The mode of appointment of the Chief Magistrate of the United States is almost the only part of the system, of any consequence, which has escaped without severe censure, or which has received the slightest mark of approbation from its opponents."

We need to reform our current system. My approach differs from that of Senator Elect Clinton, because I believe the wisdom of our founding fathers should be taken as the starting place.

Consider:
The desire of the founders was to increase the probability that the office would be "filled by characters pre-eminent for ability and virtue."

The desire was to develop a system that should be "opposed to cabal, intrigue, and corruption."

See LETTERS, page 5

Letters to the editor

LETTERS

"It was equally desirable, that the immediate election should be made by men most capable of analyzing the qualities adapted to the station, and acting under circumstances favorable to deliberation, and to a judicious combination of all the reasons and inducements which were proper to govern their choice..."

Do we elect such men? Is this a failure of the system designed by our forefathers or our corruption of a well designed system? We have moved to a point where two political parties select unknown individuals not to deliberate but vote for the party nominee. Electors should be accountable to the people who elected them. This loss is the real error in our current system.

The election for two consecutive terms of William Jefferson Clinton clearly shows that the American people today are indeed woefully unqualified to select a man "pre-eminent for (both) ability and virtue." Few would question President Clinton's ability, but he has become the first President to ever face disbarment for acts perpetrated in office.

We need the Electoral College: The sound bite, professional image creators, the spin doctors etc. make it far more probable that we are less capable today of making sound decisions than at the time of the founding of our nation.

Many decry their choices for president. The subversion of the Electoral College often prevents the most qualified persons being considered for the Presidency. What is the answer? The American people must demand to vote for Electors who are known, and who would enter into true deliberation as envisioned by the founders, and elect the most qualified Chief Magistrate of this great nation. The alternative is to fall into the trap of those who want to destroy the very aspect of our Constitution that was seen by our founders to be the best part of this grand experiment.

We need to restore the Electoral College to its proper place where every citizen can vote for an elector with the requisite intelligence and traits to select a person for the presidency who will indeed be "pre-eminent for ability and virtue."

Limit campaigning

Editor:
The big day is over, but not proven who is to be our next president.

Most people are weary of elections — 12 months or even 18 months of the campaign "news" over and over again. There is no debate — just a continual assault on our senses, our memories, our beliefs in an attempt to polarize and manipulate for power.

I think there should be a deadline on time for campaigning, say 60 days.

Also, why do politicians have to spend millions — or is it now trillions — on their campaigns? It is shameful that there are thousands and thousands of hungry, homeless persons in the most prosperous country in the world.

Thank you for listening.

New string music education

Editor:
Something fantastic is happening in our community...right under our noses!

The new string music education program led by Karey Johnson promises to enrich northern Michigan for many years to come. Karey is teaching violin, viola and cello to elementary students attending Charlevoix Elementary, Shay Elementary, Petoskey Montessori, Otawa, Central, Sheridan and Lincoln Elementary Schools and Harbor Light Christian School. Students at St. Francis Xavier are also participating in the program as are many home schooled students.

Karey is new to our area and brings to northern Michigan a wealth of experience and a high degree of expertise. She left a very successful program in Kalamazoo where for over 10 years she operated a string academy and conducted three youth symphonies. Karey was also affiliated with the Kalamazoo Junior Symphony, known nationwide as one of the best of its kind.

These beginner programs at our elementary schools will produce string players who may be future members of the existing Crooked Tree Youth Orchestra. The Youth Orchestra is in its second year and is comprised of young people of all ages from Charlevoix, Cheboygan and Emmet counties. Many professional musicians have devoted hours of their time to this endeavor including Bing Farrar, a retired music educator and bassist, John Van Patten, a professional violinist and music teacher at the art center and Dr. Bob Pattengale, a retired music professor and very talented harpsichord player.

I have seen first hand the faces of these kids as they make their music. I have heard the quality of their sound and it is magical and heart-warming. The arts should be an outlet for all kids, some of whom might otherwise find themselves dabbling in undesirable activities. We are very fortunate to have this program available to us and we should embrace it and support it with enthusiasm just as we do our top notch sports teams, OM teams, bands, choirs, debate teams and theater programs. Ideally, every child should feel that they are talented in something and every child should know what it means to be a team player. This program goes a long way toward meeting that ideal for our children. In times where it seems that much of what we hear of in the news is sad, distressing and depressing, it is refreshing to see so many positives here in our community.

Please join me this Sunday at 3 p.m. in the Ross Stokes Theatre at the Crooked Tree Arts Center for the first performance of the 2000-2001 season of the Crooked Tree Youth Orchestra. You will not be disappointed...this group is top grade!

Horton Bay schoolhouse on its way to national registry

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

This past spring the future of the over 100-year-old Horton Bay Schoolhouse was uncertain, but the building has since found security in the community where it stands — the schoolhouse is in the final stages of being designated as a national historic site.

"Historical buildings are tangible links to the past that give a community a sense of identity, stability and orientation. It is our intent to preserve this link for the community as a whole and for persons visiting the area," member of the Restoration/Revival of the Horton Bay Schoolhouse Committee, Doris Robinson said.

Being listed in the National Register of Historic Sites offers residents and visitors of Horton Bay the opportunity to trace part of the evolution of local education by visiting the one-room schoolhouse built in the late 1800s or for school aged children by having class at the schoolhouse for an afternoon.

"We hope to eventually be open for educational purposes, 'A Day at a One-Room Schoolhouse' — we would invite classes to the school," Robinson speculated.

National Registry Program Coordinator Robert Christensen explained the acceptance of the site into the registry, saying, "This was the last of three one-room schoolhouses in Bay Township. The school was in use for 80 years. It was built between 1886-1887. It is also a well-preserved example of a late 19th century schoolhouse.

This is the third building in Horton Bay to be listed in the National Registry. This (the listing) is primarily something to signify we consider it historically important and that we encourage proper care and maintenance of the structure."

As was recorded in a Narrative Statement of the Significance of Horton Bay District No. 2 School, the construction of the school itself exhibits characteristics of Nineteenth Century Michigan Victorian Vernacular architecture — the ceilings are tall, 14 feet high, as are the windows and the roof is steep.

As you approach the school, a glance up reveals the school bell nestled into the cupola. Each morning a student would ring the bell beckoning kids of all ages to school and announcing the beginning of the afternoon's studies.

Visitors who have been educated in the modern system may be surprised when they see that unlike modern schools, which are divided into classrooms, this one-room schoolhouse is true to its name — all instruction took place in one room. Documents record that towards the end of the Nineteenth Century, kindergarten through eighth grade students were schooled in the single room.

For 80 years, kids of all ages would file in and head to the cloak room where they could hang their coats on hooks and place their lunch above on the shelf.

When snow flurries coated the students on their trek to school they would stand in the front of the schoolhouse and broom the snow off of each other.

According to Robinson, memories like these form a legacy well worth preserving for future generations. Also in-line with commemorating the past is a pictorial display pertinent to the area — a story to be set up with photos and memoirs within the building itself.

Charlevoix Library looks to its users to plan future

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

The Charlevoix Public Library is short on space and looking to expand, so library staff members brainstormed with members of the community to decide the direction the library will take in meeting the changing needs of the community.

According to Friends of the Library member Mary Ann Chew, 70 to 80 people attended two community forums on Nov. 2.

"We have space and building problems. The basic purpose of the community forums is to find out what people in the community would like to have done. We will return in January or February with a report of what people wanted," Chew said.

According to Chew, after these initial stages of information gathering are completed, Engberd Anderson, the architect chosen for the project, will come in and draw several different plans for the community to review.

"Every step of the way the community will have the opportunity to give input. Hopefully we will end up with a nice addition or a new building somewhere else downtown," Chew said. Chew reported that the main message sent by the community was that the people wanted the library to remain downtown. The board plans to focus on meeting that want.

Other requests included increasing the library's computing capabilities, so more people could retrieve e-mail and do research on-line. Chew estimated that the six computers currently allowed for public use are occupied 95 percent of the time.

A third addition the community would like to see is a porch area equipped with chairs for outdoor reading. Community members also foresee the implementation of study carrels for quiet use or for tutoring.

Not only did public participants ask for an increase in reading space, but also would like more reading material. Those present at the community forums look forward to more books in general and more books on tape.

The library has addressed the option of expanding at the site of their current location on Clinton Street and has also thought of relocating to the current site of the Charlevoix Middle School.

About 100 take part in annual St. Mary's sleepout

Charlevoix Courier Wednesday, November 15, 2000 — PAGE 9

On the night of Nov. 10, approximately 100 youth and adults gathered in St. Mary's parking lot in Charlevoix to experience a night in solidarity with the homeless.

This event was the Second Annual St. Mary's Homeless Awareness Sleepout. The purpose of this night was to raise an awareness about the realities and the causes of homelessness. It was an evening for the church community to come together to unite in prayer for the plight of the homeless and to become educated about the realities of the situation.

Parishes who participated in this sleepout included: St. Mary of the Assumption, Community Reformed Church, First Congregational Church, United Methodist Church (all of Charlevoix), St. Patrick's Parish in Traverse City, Cheboygan Catholic Community, Holy Childhood in Harbor Springs, St. Michael's in Roscommon and St. Mary's in Gaylord.

All of the youth and adults who participated spent the night outside in the parking lot sleeping in cardboard boxes. The participants were not allowed any food during the thirteen hours of the event and they were only allowed juice or water.

Even though the night was cold and conditions were uncomfortable, all of those participating realized that one night outside in a box could never simulate what it would be like to be a homeless person. It raised an awareness and a compassion for those who do not have the resources that most people take for granted: a warm home and food on the table.

Three crisis counselors from Covenant House of Detroit joined the youth and adults for the evening.

Since its inception, Covenant House has helped over 400,000 youth. The purpose of Covenant House is to assist youth who have nowhere else to turn. They attempt to meet the needs of the homeless and at-risk youth in communities all over the country.

The counselors shared their stories of working with the homeless youth of Detroit and the reasons why these young people end up on the streets.

The youth and adults who participated collected pledges before the event for Covenant House, and were able to present the counselors and Covenant House with over $4,600 to help with the problem of homelessness among young people.

YOUR HEALTH

Watch out for carbon monoxide this winter

Edward Newcomb, M.D.

'To your health'

The cold winter months are just beginning and our furnaces and fireplaces are starting up again. It is during these days that we spend more time indoors and become more susceptible to carbon monoxide poisoning.

Carbon monoxide is a colorless, odorless and tasteless toxic gas that is a by-product of incomplete combustion of fuel. Any fuel burning tool or appliance such as furnaces (non-electric), gas water heaters, fireplaces, gas stoves and ranges, gas dryers, gasoline powered tools, automobiles and cigarettes are all sources of carbon monoxide.

The mechanism by which carbon monoxide causes its toxic effects is by becoming dissolved in the blood stream and interfering with the blood's ability to carry oxygen to body tissues such as the heart and brain. Carbon monoxide competes with oxygen for the same portion of the hemoglobin molecule and binds more strongly than oxygen does.

Once carbon monoxide gets in the blood stream it takes many hours for it to be cleared from the body. The strong affinity for the blood cells and the long time to clear is the reason that poisoning can slowly occur over a period of time and also why it can take hours to get over an acute episode of toxicity.

There are some of us who are more sensitive to the toxic effects. Unborn children and infants, individuals with anemia, chronic lung disease or heart problems are more likely to develop symptoms of carbon monoxide poisoning.

The initial symptoms one may develop as carbon monoxide levels increase are non-specific and may be easily confused with much less sinister illnesses.

Headache, nausea and dizziness are usually the first symptoms and often are attributed to "having the flu." If exposure continues, the symptoms progress to worsening headache, nausea, sleepiness, vomiting, confusion and disorientation. At very high levels loss of consciousness and even death may occur. Symptoms vary widely depending on exposure level, duration and the general health of the individual.

Prevention is the key to avoiding carbon monoxide poisoning. Make sure that appliances are installed and working according to manufacturer's instructions. Have your heating system, chimney and flue inspected by a qualified technician on a yearly basis. Do not operate gasoline powered engines in confined spaces and choose vented appliances when possible.

The installation of a carbon monoxide detector has now become the most important part of poisoning protection. Carbon monoxide detectors vary slightly from manufacturer to manufacturer, either installed to your house's electric circuits or battery operated. Make sure that any detector you are anticipating purchasing is UL listed to assure reliability.

The Consumer Product Safety Commission recommends a detector on each level of a residence, or at a minimum, one placed on the sleeping level and one in the area of a gas burning appliance (i.e. furnace.) In general the detector should be placed high on a wall near the ceiling and not within 5 feet of a gas fueled appliance or near cooking or bathing areas to minimize false alarms.

If your detector goes off, what should you do?

The first priority is to ask everyone in the home whether they are feeling ill — have any "flu-like" symptoms. If the answer is no, turn off all gas burning appliances or equipment, ventilate the area (open window or door) and attempt to reset the alarm. If the alarm will not reset or resounds, call a qualified heating and ventilating contractor to inspect your system or try a different alarm in the same area.

If anyone is symptomatic, evacuate the house to a safe location and call 911. The best initial treatment for carbon monoxide poisoning is fresh air. EMS will be able to evacuate anyone from the home that could not leave on their own, will administer oxygen and transport victims to the hospital. There, 100 percent oxygen will be administered and carbon monoxide levels will be measured. Depending on the individual, and the level of carbon monoxide in the blood, will determine the type and length of treatment.

Just as it is recommended that you check your smoke alarm monthly to make sure it is functioning properly, the same policy holds true for your carbon monoxide detector. Dr. Edward Newcomb can be contacted at the Pine River Medical Center located at 14734 Park Avenue in Charlevoix. His phone number is (231) 547-6554.

Schoolhouse named as a historic site of the state

The restoration committee has already set the wheels in motion to ensure their goal of reviving the schoolhouse is met.

Since June the restoration committee has made great strides in making the schoolhouse a useful community facility. Robinson explained that the structure was recently equipped with a new roof — a project that began in July and is now in the final stages of completion.

The interior of the building has also been repainted and holes and seams have been repaired. The painting of the structure was done by Charlevoix County inmates under the supervision of Charlevoix County Sheriff's Deputy Earl Muma.

Robinson explained that the committee is currently in need of more funds and that she hopes to see more donations. The project's pace depends on funding.

The immediately needed repairs, like the furnace and the septic, will probably be done next summer.

"The committee is doing its own fundraising. We need $20,000 to get the building in good shape. Renovations still in need of funding include: a septic system, a well, a furnace, flooring and some front porch renovations," she said.

The Horton Bay Schoolhouse may soon become a national historic site if all of the proper paperwork is approved. It is currently a state historic site. (File photo)

Those looking to get inside and have a look for themselves will have to wait for warmer temperatures. The school house is only open to the community and the public during warmer months.

Christensen explained that the State Preservation Review Board approved the inclusion of the Horton Bay Schoolhouse as a historic site on Oct. 13, but its inclusion in the national registry is pending further review by the Department of the Interior.

The Department of the Interior has 45 days following the receipt of approval to ok the inclusion. Christensen said that this secondary review is "usually just a formality."

Library plans for future LIBRARY

Anderson will evaluate the site and see if the middle school would be an appropriate location.

Chew cited the age of the building as a possible deterrent to using the middle school, as those old floors will have to withstand the weight of the shelves loaded with books.

"Sometimes it is more expensive to renovate a building built in 1927 than it is to build something new," Chew said.

Advocates for library changes hope to see Anderson's proposals by spring or summer of 2001. Chew said funding for the project will be gathered in the form of grants, community donations and a possible bond proposal.

In the meantime, the library is hosting several weekly events including Children's Saturday Programs and Activity Hour. Chew asks that any volunteers willing to share their special skills approach the library staff with their ideas.

These enrichment classes are funded through an ongoing book sale at the library. The book sale has earned $4,000 since July 8.

The library has also created a historical web site revealing interesting data from Charlevoix's past. To view the information go to www.charlevoix.lib.mi.us on the web.

The library has also made their card catalog available online.

Harbor Industries project undergoes some changes the placement of a permanent retention pond at the airport, the temporary pond has fulfilled its purpose and is no longer needed. This city-owned land parcel on which the temporary pond was placed will now be filled to make the parcel marketable.

"Filling the pond will allow us to make the lot a buildable site. We have not yet put the lot up for sale and I don't know when council will decide to do that," Weisner said.

The change order language submitted to council references the fill's time frame "to be done after storm sewer is completed," Weisner said. This "storm sewer" is not the same sewer extension being discussed to service the site of the new high school, he added.

According to Weisner, the third change order is a safety measure. Fencing and gates will be installed around the permanent detention pond located on Airport land in an effort to keep kids and animals out of the pond.

Costs associated with this part of the project total, $22,791.90. Like the filling of the temporary pond, the installation of gates and fencing are subject to the progress of new storm sewer installation.

Charlevoix varsity golfer named all-state

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

Charlevoix High School sophomore and member of the varsity golf team, David Shearer, was recently named to the All-State Golf Team for division three.

Shearer was chosen for the team through his outstanding golf scores, tournament finishes and personal character.

"To just be one of the best of the best is outstanding," said Golf Coach Jim Glynn. "David is just an outstanding young man in all aspects."

According to Glynn, the all state team is chosen by a panel of golf coaches. This panel narrows down nominations from throughout the state to 55, then blanks out the player's name and school and they pick from everything that is written about the player.

"They are pretty much as unbiased as they can be," Glynn said. "They don't want to base it just on scores, but also on the kid's integrity and honor."

In his nomination of Shearer, Glynn wrote, "David (Shearer) has a hard work ethic and it is shown in his scoring. His sportsmanship and behavior on and off the course are exemplary. His honesty and integrity are without hesitation."

Shearer said he was pretty excited about the honor, especially since he is only a sophomore.

"I hope it means good things," he said.

As for his future plans with golf, Shearer said he is hoping to win the state title next year and the year after that. He added he wants to thank everyone that has helped him out.

Glynn added, "(Shearer) has a bright future as a golfer. I can't see him getting worse, I only see him getting better."

With the turn of a bridge key

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

The bridge over the Pine River Channel in Charlevoix is clearly one of the most recognized symbols in the area and, since its inception in 1870, the bridge has played an important role in Charlevoix.

Just half a block from downtown off of Park Avenue in Hoffman Park, bridge watchers can get a beautiful view of the Pine River Channel and the bridge. Additionally, the park commemorates the rich history of the bridge by displaying some pieces of its past.

The park's display includes ornate railings which, according to a park plaque, hail from the 1901 swing bridge and were donated by Mildred Campbell. The railings have since been re-incorporated into the city as park fencing. The plaque also reveals an image of the swing bridge built in 1901, complete with a brief account of its history.

And now there is a fresh addition to the artifacts: a newly restored bridge key.

Because the bridge key played an important role in the evolution of Charlevoix, John Iddings Gaskin, bridge key restorer, saw his work in reconditioning the key as an opportunity to recognize its place in history. Gaskin, who was born in Charlevoix on Sept. 1, 1914, initiated this project as a community gift.

"I feel an association with the City of Charlevoix. This was a piece of history that survived. The location of the key looks over the new bridge, it's nice to have this part of history which was part of my enthusiasm for going ahead with the restoration," Gaskin said.

Gaskin explained that the key was used for bridge number three, the first swing bridge, built in 1879 and operated until 1899. The key was the only method the bridge operator had of opening the bridge.

According to David Miles of the Charlevoix Historical Society, bridge number three took eight minutes to open and close.

Opening and closing the bridge using a key may seem simple: You insert the key, turn it and the bridge opens.

However, this key was not your typical four inch metal key with a serrated edge. This key sports a 16 foot, oak handle and a four and a half foot steel shaft.

It took at least two people to turn the key, Miles said. If a boat needed to pass and no one was around to help the bridge operator turn the key, he would march into the saloon and grab a guy off his bar stool to help.

The Harsha House archives documents bridge number four as going into operation in 1901 after a year-and-a-half of work.

place also has to concern itself with power outages. Currently it is equipped with back-up generators, air compressors and even the old key idea — a hand crank that takes many people to operate.

SCRAPBOOK

Charlevoix Courier Wednesday, November 15, 2000 — PAGE 23

Charlevoix in the 1800s

This is the earliest photograph of Bridge Street known to exist. Taken halfway up the south hill, looking north, it shows the explosive growth Charlevoix experienced from 1872 onward. That year alone saw the construction of what amounted to half the buildings then in town. Just three years prior to that, the number of buildings could be counted on two hands. The faint rectangular upright figure at the end of the street is probably the first swing bridge, which would date the photo between 1879 and 1884 when the next oldest known photo shows the trees in much fuller growth. The likely date for this photo would be the early 1880's.

This and many other photographs documenting the history of Bridge Street may be viewed at the Charlevoix Historical Society's Harsha House Museum, 103 State Street, from 1-4 p.m. Tuesday, Wednesday, Friday and Saturday and 1-9 p.m. on Thursday. Of particular interest is a set of 25 views of the entire west side of Bridge Street, from Antrim Street to the bridge, as the buildings looked in 1934. (Photo donated to the Charlevoix Historical Society by Shirley Lusk.)

Searches of cars, lockers at school may be OK

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

As the Charlevoix school board proposes a new measure to maintain a safe campus, the American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU) and the Michigan Association of School Boards (MASB) present conflicting arguments as to whether the policy impedes upon the fourth amendment.

The school board's November agenda included a preliminary reading of a new policy that would allow school administrators to search not only the students' lockers but also their vehicles.

"It's a reaction to a law that passed; we are taking the law in and making sure the school policy meets the letter of the law," Superintendent of Charlevoix Public Schools, John Strock said.

Board makes few changes to contested school policy

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

After engaging in weeks of discussion over whether or not to change the high school's extracurricular policy, the Charlevoix School Board found very few changes were needed.

In the final stages of policy discussion school board officials were divided as to whether or not they felt a more strict out-of-season penalty was needed for students engaging in extracurricular and co-curricular activities who behaved inappropriately.

Assistant high school principal and athletic director Keith Haske advocated keeping the in-and-out-of-season distinction untouched, operating under the "why fix what isn't broken" principle.

District Champions

The Charlevoix High School girls' varsity basketball team took the much sought after district title after a win Friday night against East Jordan.

The win did not come easy to the Rayders. They had to fight the East Jordan girls into overtime in a very physical game that saw some of Charlevoix's best players fouled out in the second half. For more on this game, see page 16.

Charlevoix, Northwest band students named to honors

BY JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Charlevoix area students musical know-how shined brightly Nov. 6 at the district two honors band competition, when seven students from Charlevoix High School and Northwest Academy were awarded coveted positions in the band.

According to Northwest Academy music instructor, Gary Stutzman, the honors band is made up of the best young musicians in northern Michigan from Benzonia north to the bridge, east to Grayling, continuing northeast to Rogers City and north again to the bridge.

"The district two honors band has been in existence for several years, it is a way for the better players from each school to audition for a spot. The size of the band is determined by the number of outstanding players. This year there are about 75 to 80 players in the honors band," Stutzman said.

Nine of Northwest's 26 advanced band members tried out for the honor's band, and six were accepted. Each of the students who are now part of the honors band said their inclusion "is an honor."

Three students received first chair designation — Marcie Bennett of Charlevoix High School was awarded first chair flute, Rachel Bellairs, a sophomore at Northwest Academy, will fill the first chair trumpet position and CJ Toton, also a Northwest sophomore, was awarded first chair baritone.

"I know the judges were blown away by Rachel (Bellairs). To be a sophomore and get first chair is a real honor," Stutzman said.

Four other Northwest students were also given positions in the honors band. Sophomore Carolyn Bellairs will be playing second part flute, freshmen musician Kristy Trudeau will be playing bari sax, sophomore Craig Wellscoff will be positioned second chair playing trombone and freshmen Joe Sievertson will be playing second chair position, alto sax.

"The competition gets the kids performing at a higher level and helps to improve the quality of our band. These kids are dedicated to playing their instrument and consider it to be part of their school experience," Stutzman said.

The honors band will be performing at the Petoskey Middle School at 3 p.m., Dec. 3 under the direction of conductor Ken Fenley of Clare.

Man killed hunting wasn't wearing orange

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

A 60-year-old Algonac man was killed Nov. 15 in a hunting accident on Garden Island, near Beaver Island in Lake Michigan.

Jerome Walter Beyer was shot in the leg while hunting on the island by a fellow hunter. According to Medical Examiner Dr. Reed Freidinger, the bullet hit an artery and Beyer died soon after he was shot.

Beyer was a retired Battalion Fire Chief from the Detroit Fire Department. He served with his department for 32 years.

Charlevoix County Sheriff

George T. Lasater would not release the name of the man who shot Beyer, but did say he was an adult from down state. Lasater added the incident is still under investigation, but is being considered an accident at this time.

Authorities were contacted about the incident by cellular phone at about 3 p.m. that day by one of the hunters Beyer was with. A coast guard helicopter from Traverse City airlifted Beyer from the island and transported him to the Charlevoix Area Hospital.

The Coast Guard was assisted by the Charlevoix County Sheriff's department, Beaver Island EMS and Charlevoix EMS.

Lasater further added Beyer was not wearing "hunter's orange" at the time of the accident.

OPINIONS

School board should respect Bill of Rights

Sometimes it is amazing how often the folks in government forget the Bill of Rights.

Take the Fourth Amendment of the Bill of Rights. It states, "The rights of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers, and effects, against unreasonable searches and seizures, shall not be violated, and no Warrants shall issue, but upon probable cause, supported by Oath or affirmation, and particularly describing the place to be searched, and the persons or things to be seized."

What this basically means is American citizens are protected from authority figures who want to search their personal items without a valid warrant and probable cause. Such as, a police officer can not search your vehicle when he or she pulls you over without your consent or probable cause to search. To get probable cause, they must basically see the illegal item in full view or activity taking place.

Pretty simple, isn't it? But, this amendment is just one of the many that are under attack on a daily basis.

For example, recently the Charlevoix School Board proposed a new rule that would give school officials and law enforcement officers the ability to search the vehicles of students on school property without the student or the parent's OK.

School officials say they can search the vehicle if they suspect some illegal item or activity is inside. They call this reasonable suspicion, not probable cause, and it can be based on the allegations of another student, the student's history or who the student's friends are.

According to the American Civil Liberties Union, this rule reeks of violations of the Fourth Amendment — and others — which could possibly set the school up for civil lawsuits in the future. It seems to us that after already facing down several lawsuits over the new high school the school board would want to avoid further lawsuits.

Furthermore, the allegations part is kind of reminiscent of the good old days of the Salem Witch Trials. You know, the ones where several people were put to death based on the false allegations of others.

The most baffling part about this is: it is a rule that is being proposed by a government institution that teaches children, among other things, about the Constitution and the Bill of Rights. To create a rule that possibly goes against this teaching is hypocritical to us.

We urge the Charlevoix School Board to not pass this proposed rule. A school, funded by tax dollars, is the last place we want to see possible attacks to our cherished Bill of Rights.

Schools should teach students about the constitution and how to love it, not how to live in a totalitarian society.

When was the coldest winter in Charlevoix?

Roger Knutson

'Ear to the ground'

How cold will the winter be? Everyone wants to know and no one can tell us.

The only partial guide to what might happen is some historical perspective. How cold has it been, and when was it that cold? I'm not talking about the winter of 1965 or the extremely cold winter of 1932, nor even the coldest years of the 1890s, which some called, "a little ice age." There was a very cold period in the 1500s as well. But all of them pale to insignificance when compared with the winters, and even summers, in Michigan about 13,000 years ago.

What were our coldest winters like? Between 12,000 and 13,000 years ago, the place we now live in was covered with the southern edge of an enormous continent-wide glacier. No one has recorded just what it looked like, because few people were around at the time, but evidence from a number of sources, including some long, narrow hills just south of Charlevoix, suggests that the ice was thousands of feet thick; about as thick as the distance from Charlevoix to the new school site. That much ice melted very slowly.

Two thousand years after the ice was covering what is now Charlevoix, it had melted a few hundred miles to the north. Ten thousand years ago, you could have visited the southern edge of the glacier in the western upper peninsula. There you could have walked next to an ice wall that may still have been more than a thousand feet high.

The winds off the surface of the glacier would have cooled the climate dramatically, in both summer and winter. In winter, the front of the glacier may have moved south a few feet or even as much as a mile and in summer it would have melted back to the north.

Those dramatic winters occurred only about 150 human lifetimes and only about 50 tree lifetimes ago. While there is little evidence that humans were here at the time, fossils show us that very large animals were abundant. Wolves and bears almost the size of a present day moose were the carnivores. And all those arctic plants were being eaten by Mastodons the size of elephants and ground sloth 6 feet tall and 12 feet long.

It would have been an interesting time to live here. But I'm afraid the snow shoveling in the winter would have done in most of us, if the bears, wolves and saber-toothed cats hadn't already.

How was the climate in Florida at the time? Much like it is now, but Florida itself would have been considerable larger since the oceans were about 300 feet lower than at present. Most all of that once valuable southern real estate is now under water in the Gulf of Mexico.

Next time someone reminds you of the really cold winter of 1932, you can tell them that was nothing compared to the icebox that was Michigan for thousands of years.

Thanks to the voters
Editor:

As the challenger and "runner up" in the Charlevoix Township Treasurer election, I want to express my deepest gratitude to my family, friends and all the voters in the township. In my mind, I did not lose — I simply did not win the election.

This, my first ever campaign, was more fun than I could have imagined. It was a tremendous learning experience; I made many new friends and I provided a choice to the voters. Rather than allow the opportunity to slide by, I followed through on my commitment to get involved in this community and contribute on the most personal level — even at my own risk.

I campaigned hard and fair! I followed the law to a "t" and behaved honorably in all my efforts. It is my hope that one day all of our country's candidates can honestly say the same thing.

Thanks again Charlevoix Township voters!

Inspirational democracy

Editor:

I am inspired, rather than discouraged, by the events of our current day. We have here an opportunity to better express the divine, finely tune, refine, this great unfolding of democracy. The recent vote for the presidency brings to mind our historic root in the search for truth and impartiality. As far back as biblical history and even in older cultures, the truth was sought through the casting of lots. Sometimes the outcome was prophetically known by one or more of those involved and the casting was for unquestionable proof, as in the case of Jonah. At other times, it was not at all certain and lots with prayer were used as a just way of finding God's Will concerning human endeavor.

Metthias and Justus may well have known their worthiness, but a fair choice needed to be made manifest to the elect. Faith, trust, righteous desire were, and still are, the basic sure foundation in decision making. Perversion of motive bred gambling, luck, chance in societal development. It took a millennia to reach our current perfect state of representative democracy and daily we hone its edge in search of the flawless or divine consummate justice.

Reminded recently by a famous and wise evangelist, Billy Graham, of the endorsement of God's Will, not candidates, I joined the thousands, yea millions, in prayer for the next president of these United States. "Of, by, and for the people" certainly states the sanctity of each vote, clearly measures up the human will to the divine. It is an easy step to the validity, sacredness, irrevocable voice of the majority popular vote, its righteousness, fairness, its finality. It is a step towards freedom we must take to ensure the breathing, living nature of our republic. I therefore have this to ask of all its citizens — that you join me prayerfully in requesting of both our fine candidates and the Electoral College, that they yield, concede to the majority popular vote, once it is established beyond doubt. At this point, we know not for sure whom that will favor as Oregon and some of Florida are still in question. In my humblest opinion, it will favor and bless both candidates as well as this great nation "one nation under God."

Thank you educators

Editor:

I am writing this letter in honor of National Education Week which is Nov. 12-18. This week is intended to remind people of the importance of education and to honor those who dedicate their lives to teaching others.

In northern Michigan we are fortunate to have many excellent schools that are staffed by devoted professionals. We are fortunate to have schools where respect, safety, kindness and high achievement are the norm. Our schools are characterized by happy, respectful students who are striving to achieve high standards set by caring adults. One cannot underestimate the positive influence these caring teachers, administrators, teacher assistants, cooks, secretaries, custodians and bus drivers will have on the lives of kids in northern Michigan. Our students not only learn subjects, but they also learn about life and how to be responsible, well adjusted citizens.

As an educator, I am thankful to be a part of the lives of the many kids who come through my door and share their personalities and ideas with me. As a new parent, I am thankful my son will have the opportunity to grow up and go to a wonderful school where he can learn and prosper. Thank you to all of the educators who dedicate their lives to helping kids.

Thanksgiving memories

Editor:

November has always been my favorite month. Maybe because I was born on Nov. 7, 1915.

On the farm in Barnard on Nov. 6 my dad was plowing "new land" down by the creek. An old hen turkey and her brood had been feeding on his oats and grain all summer. He felt he had "one of them coming." He picked up a pine knot and hit one of the young gobblers. He slit its throat and hung it in a tree. Later he took it home and dressed it out.

The next day I was about to make my appearance. My Aunt Libby Shapton and Doctor Wilkinson were called. While I was being delivered Aunt Libby had the turkey roasting in the oven. The aroma drifted into the bedroom.

"What is that wonderful smell?" asked the doctor. "I'm roasting a turkey, would you like some?" Aunt Libby replied.

My grandpa John Smith lived on the hill, his farm adjoining ours.

One Thanksgiving he had shot eight partridge. My mother had stuffed them with sage dressing and had them roasting in the old kitchen range. I can still see her opening the oven door and bringing out those round, plump partridges for Thanksgiving dinner.

Back in those days "security" was a wordshed full of dry wood, a basement full of potatoes, carrots, apples and canned fruit. We always had a couple of young pigs ready to butcher when the weather got cold.

The cattle were in the barn and the silo was full of corn for them.

We brothers were anxious to take the hound dog rabbit hunting and to set a few traps for muskrat and mink to make a bit of money.

That's how it was back in the old days in Barnard.

Forum was valuable

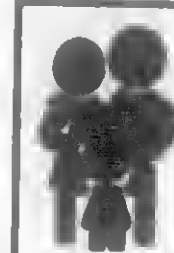

Editor:

The Charlevoix Library Board and the Friends of the Library would like to thank the community and the Charlevoix Middle School students for their participation in the community forum.

This brain storming session with George Lawson generated many exciting ideas for future plans for the library. All ideas have been recorded and will be used by the architects for future proposals. When Lawson's Needs Assessment is completed the community will again be invited to share their vision of what the future library would be like and to review the architect's proposals.

The Library Board and the Friends appreciated the many thoughtful suggestions given at the forum. The enthusiasm and ideas for future library plans was very valuable.

Holly Daze kicks off at country club, hospital

The Charlevoix Area Hospital is getting into the spirit of the season through its annual benefit Holly Daze this weekend.

Over the last eight years of the event, most of which revolves around an auction of designer Christmas trees, volunteers have raised over $40,000 for the hospital. This year's benefit will support the 2000 Emergency Room Project.

The trees being auctioned off for Holly Daze are being displayed at the Charlevoix Country Club through Nov. 28 and at the Charlevoix Area Hospital through Saturday.

On Saturday a silent auction of the trees will take place at the hospital and on Nov. 28 a live auction will be given at the country club.

Students graduate from conflict resolution classes

BY JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Forty-three fourth and fifth grade Charlevoix Elementary School students graduated from the New Mexico Conflict Resolution program Nov. 14 — the graduates were trained to help maintain school safety.

"This is a true mediation program that is good for the school and good for the kids who join. The program is one more tool to help keep the school safe," Charlevoix Elementary School counselor, Gayle Gennett said.

According to Gennett, the elementary school's conflict resolution program is not a reaction to the Columbine tragedy or to numerous incidents of school violence which have occurred across the nation. For instances such as those, the schools have implemented a district-wide crisis management plan.

This conflict resolution program was integrated at the elementary school in the spring of 1995. The first conflict managers are currently freshmen in high school.

"This is a good program for kids, they are given a role and a responsibility to live up to and rules to follow. They respond well to this," Gennett said.

Since the program's beginning its aim has remained constant — teaching students conflict coping mechanisms that do not involve violence.

"The program is one more tool to help keep the school safe."

Gayle Gennett,
School counselor

Parents of Charlevoix school-age kids watch their children walk over to their bus or into school, trusting that their safety is secure but knowing that things can get rough on the playground and in the halls.

The conflict managers work in teams of two along with appointed playground supervisors to police the grounds during lunch and recess. Their goal is to ensure students are treating each other respectfully.

"It is helpful for younger children to see these kids in uniforms because they feel safer," Gennett said.

Program graduates can now be found wearing green shirts and matching hats with an owl logo printed on each and labeled with their new official school standing, Conflict Manager.

Gennett pointed to ways in which these "conflict managers," as kids themselves, have a unique perspective during incidents of conflict between students.

"A child who has played soccer or basketball understands the squabbles that may occur on the basketball court or the soccer field and where the kids involved are coming from," she said.

These students demonstrate ways to end conflicts in non-violent ways as part of the New Mexico Conflict Resolution program at the Charlevoix Elementary School. The students celebrated graduation from the program Nov. 14 (Photo by Julie Musilek)

Consumers awards grants to employees' organizations

The Consumers Energy Foundation has awarded $2,500 in grants to community organizations to recognize the volunteer efforts of four Big Rock Point Restoration Project employees.

The Volunteer Investment Program recipients are:

- Charlevoix 4-H Soccer Club. The $900 grant recognizes the volunteer efforts of operations department employee Herman Madison and administrative supervisor Sue Amstutz. In the past year, Madison and Amstutz performed more than 110 hours of volunteer work as head referee and referee scheduler, respectively. The grant will help pay soccer fees and support the purchase of equipment.

- Charlevoix Cub Scouts/Tiger Cubs, Pack 11. The $700 grant recognizes decommissioning worker Jerry Shea. Shea serves as the pack's den leader. The grant supports the purchase of supplies and helps pay dues for children needing financial assistance.

- Banks Township Firemen's Association. The $500 grant honors certified fuel handler Joe Melin. Melin volunteers as an emergency medical technician and firefighter. He also visits local preschools in full firefighting gear to familiarize children with the sight of a firefighter. His visits are a result of studies that indicate many children die in fires because they hide from firefighters. The grant will be used to support the purchase of an all-terrain, amphibious vehicle for off-road and water rescues.

- The Good Samaritans of Antrim County. The $400 grant recognizes the volunteer efforts of training coordinator Eugene Drenth. The organization provides food and clothing to needy families. Drenth volunteers more than 75 hours a year to the organization serving on the board of directors. The grant supports the purchase of food and will assist clients with winter heating bills.

Some grants were doubled as a result of the Consumers Energy Foundation's CEEPSACER Program. CEEPSACER (Consumers Energy Employees Providing Service Around Children's Essential Resources) was established a part of Consumers Energy's commitment to America's Promise — The Alliance for Youth, led nationally by retired General Colin L. Powell.

Seniors top list for coveted flu shots

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Even with the nation wide shortage, some elderly Charlevoix residents were able to receive the sought after flu vaccine on Monday when the Charlevoix Senior Center hosted a vaccine administering clinic equipped with 280 shots.

"Because of the flu vaccine distribution problem those 65 and over will receive the vaccine first," Suzette Daly of Northwest Michigan Community Health Agency said.

Charlevoix Area Hospital employee health nurse Bernadette Cole said there is a nation wide shortage of the flu vaccine and even hospitals are turning away patients looking to be vaccinated.

"We (the hospital) are short; we aren't doing any public doses at this time. It doesn't look like the Charlevoix Area Hospital will be able to do the, "free to the public" immunizations we have done in the past," Cole said.

"(This) is kind of extreme. People who really need it (the vaccination) are missing it due to the shortage," she added.

Cole said that the shortage is a result of difficulty in growing the strains which consequently slowed the rate of production.

As we get further into the flu season, which began in November, this reality poses a major problem for many "high risk" Charlevoix residents, like local seniors.

The Center for Disease Control and Prevention defines high risk candidates for vaccination as being those who are 50 and over, or are residents of long-term care facilities, or have a serious long-term health issue, or have weak immune systems or are women past the third month of pregnancy during flu season.

While the center for disease control says that the best time to receive a flu shot is from October to mid-November, Cole believes early December is still a safe window of opportunity.

"We do have until Dec. 1 to be fairly safe at getting our immunizations and developing our antibodies," Cole said.

The center for disease control says that the vaccine begins providing protection two weeks after it has been administered and will last for up to one year.

Daly of the Northwest Michigan

Community Health Agency remains optimistic that all those in the four counties covered by the health agency (Antrim, Charlevoix, Emmet, Otsego) who want to be vaccinated will have that opportunity.

Daly also speculated that by week's end the health agency should have received the rest of their doses and urges interested parties to phone the health department at 1-800-432-4121 to find out from where the vaccine will be administered.

Basketball team takes district title, stopped at conference

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

In the classic heart-stopping style of championship basketball, the Charlevoix girls' basketball team pulled off a 59-56 win over East Jordan Friday for the Class C District championship.

East Jordan capitalized on the trouble the Rayders were having with scoring throughout the game, only making about 28 percent of the on-the-court shots and 9 percent of the free-throws. On top of that, most of the top scorers for Charlevoix were fouled out in the second half.

But, Charlevoix Coach Jason Otter wasn't scared, even as the game went into overtime.

"I never had a doubt. I have a lot of confidence in the girls," Otter said. "We find a way to win and that's what we did Friday night."

And thanks to big shots by Krista Swenor, Kathryn Ricks and Ashley

"I never had a doubt. I have a lot of confidence in the girls."

Jason Otter,
Girls' varsity basketball coach

Ager, the Rayders captured that all-most elusive win.

"I think those (shots) kind of wiped (East Jordan) out," Otter said. While Otter admitted that the team had some problems with their scoring Friday, he added Charlevoix was still able to get the shots they needed.

"I am really pleased with the effort overall," he said. While the team may have had a low percentage of successful tosses, Charlevoix still had four players with double-digit scores. They were: Meghan Vogel, Danielle Vogelheim, Jennifer McClellan and Leslie Hoffman.

Swenor had eight boards and four steals and Vogel added 11 boards and six steals to the statistics. Vogel, Vogelheim and Hoffman fouled out in the second half.

As for having some of his top players foul out, Otter said the team knew going into the game that it would be a very physical match.

"We knew they would really be out to get us," he said.

However, the Rayders were stopped from capturing the regional title Monday night in a hard fought game against Lincoln-Alcona. Charlevoix lost 58-51.

"I'm really pleased with the year. I think it was a building block for the future of the program," Otter said. "I love this group of kids. They all played real hard."

Junior golf elects officers, reviews plans at meeting

The Charlevoix County Junior Golf Board met recently to elect officers and conduct necessary business to conclude the 2000 Junior golf season.

Officers elected for 2001 include: Denny LaCroix, president; Tom Bickersteth, vice president; Sam Supernaw, treasurer and Nancy LaCroix, secretary. The remainder of the board membership is Bob Beaumont, Gordon Boydston, Jim Conlin and Francine Martin.

In addition to accepting the financial report for the past season and the final revenue report from the program's fund-raiser, the Supe' Invitational Golf Classic, the Board reviewed the plan to offer a text book program for former junior golfers that plan to go on to college.

Winning applicants must have had at least three years in the program and must have established themselves as role models for the younger junior golf participants.

Local golf enthusiasts who would like to make contributions in memory of loved ones or because of their support and belief of the goals of the program can do so by contacting Supernaw at 547-9661.

Dean Davenport, executive director, also announced that the association had received a much needed golf cart as a gift from former resident,

Denny Hilligan.

Hilligan's father, Jim — long time Charlevoix resident and golfer — passed away recently and his golf cart has been donated to the Junior Golf Program to improve the teaching and monitoring of the juniors when they meet at the Charlevoix Municipal course, which does not have carts.

The season, the fifth for the program, again proved highly successful. There were nearly 200 young golfers enrolled and the Charlevoix High School golf team reaped the good fortune of having golfers from the program as they responded with a third place finish in the state tournament.

Honored

Charlevoix Area Hospital recently honored 39 employees at the 2000 Service Awards, at the Rowe Inn in Ellsworth, for their combined 470 years of service to the hospital.

Among the employees recognized were five women who each worked 25 years at the hospital. Those five were: Julie Ciuk, Registered Nurse and House Supervisor; Eileen Danbert, Billing; Cheryl Jacobs, Cardiovascular Lab Manager; Nancy Loeffler, Registered Nurse in Obstetrics; and Linda Schoof, Registered Nurse in Intensive Coronary Care Unit.

Controversy surrounds school policy

"To me the extracurricular and co-curricular policy has been sending the right message to kids," Haske said.

Students involved in activities associated with the school hold those activities as important parts of their identity and do not want to jeopardize their position on a team or in a club, Haske said.

The proposed change would have eliminated the in and out-of-season distinction whereby out-of-season first violators would lose 50 percent of the eligibility for the next sports season rather than the 20 percent stipulated by the current policy.

At the Nov. 13 school board meeting the changed policy was passed, but wasn't in existence for long. Minutes later the board passed an amended policy which left in place the old rules.

The board's efforts were however not made in vain. Even though the controversial in and out-of-season changes were not kept, policy clarifications were inserted. Clarifications made include changes to the self-disclosure policy and to the appeals process.

"After reviewing the self-disclosure policy there was some concern about what self-disclosure was and there was some controversy last spring over that. We tried to clarify that," Haske said.

"We also tried to make the appeals process more unbiased by choosing the appeals panel from outside of the immediate circle; they now come in and can judge an appeal without any bias," he added.

School board member and Charlevoix City Police Chief Dennis Halverson talked with high school administrators and students on this issue. Halverson's findings reveal that the problem did not necessarily lie in the policy itself but perhaps in confusing policy language and inadequate enforcement.

"The students that I talked to weren't as concerned with the penalty; they were actually more hard-lined with regards to percentages. They were more sensitive to consistency — looking for the school's response to these types of violations as being consistent, fair and even-handed," Halverson said.

Upon passing the amended version of the policy, the board agreed that there is no perfect policy.

Snowshoeing...

A sport for the entire family!

All Great Canadian traditional snowshoes are hand made by Huron Indians in Quebec, Canada. Only the finest full grain rawhide (babiche) is woven over select northern ash wood frames. Each snowshoe receives three separate coats of high grade polyurethane. Full grain rawhide is more water resistant and easily returns to its normal shape after usage. It is the lacing of choice over split leather lacing.

Board considers searches of vehicles, lockers

SEARCH

According to Bill Scharffe, director of bylaw and policy for the Michigan Association of School Boards, the law referenced by Sturrock is the Statewide School Safety Information Policy established through a New Jersey court case. This new legislation required Michigan schools to integrate specific search wording into their student policy.

The law does require schools to integrate locker search wording but Scharffe said integrating vehicle searches is optional. Charlevoix's proposed policy utilizes this option.

"The vehicle search is optional language that many districts are adopting. Kids are getting wise and not bringing items against school policy into their locker, they are leaving it in their car," Scharffe said.

"For schools who have open campuses (Charlevoix High School does) the vehicle search policy is a good idea. Kids are coming and going in and out of the building."

However, legal director for the American Civil Liberties Union of Michigan Michael J. Steinberg strongly disagrees.

"Some schools throughout the state have been riding roughshod over students' rights. The purpose of a school is to teach students how to be part of a democracy and to teach them their constitutional rights," he said.

"Some schools have been pursuing this aim through draconian measures and in turn teaching the kids to participate more in a totalitarian form of government. This is a trend that disturbs us at the ACLU."

Locker searches under this policy are considered justified, as the locker itself is the property of the school district. Vehicle searches fall under the same rationale, because they are parked on school property.

High school assistant-principal and athletic director Keith Haske claims the state law is probably aimed at intercity schools, where more incidents of violence have been seen.

"This is all a reaction to safer schools issues, trying to give more power to the administration to prevent those things from happening," he said.

Haske foresaw instances where students, parents and school officials smelled, heard or saw a student breaking school policy as search justification.

Justification in this case highlights the standard to which the school administration is held. Under the court case New Jersey v. T.L.O., school officials are held to "The aim is not to create a police environment, but some actions are in direct conflict with the educational environment."

Dennis Halverson,
School board member and city police chief

"reasonable suspicion," unlike police officers who must prove probable cause.

However, the application and interpretation of the standard, "reasonable suspicion" has led to conflicting viewpoints of the policy's constitutionality.

"The ACLU bristles every time a school board passes searches of any kind. They are rather zealous," Scharffe criticized.

"Schools are not the mall, or the video arcade. Schools are schools and by the decision in New Jersey v. T.L.O. the reasonable suspicion standard was established. The schools have a lot of latitude in searching a person, vehicle or locker."

The policy wording allows the administration to search a student's locker or vehicle based on their associations with known policy offenders and based upon past disciplinary problems.

On both counts the ACLU finds the policy in violation of the fourth amendment.

"There is a part of the policy that suggests a student would have to submit to a search based solely on past disciplinary problems or associations. Such factors don't give rise to reasonable suspicion necessary to constitute a search," Steinberg said.

"The mere fact that someone got in trouble before doesn't give reasonable suspicion to search them. If someone is a friend of a person known to use drugs by itself is not enough to search an individual under the fourth amendment."

Scharffe of the MASH disagrees with the ACLU and said that if a school has a student who is an offender with prior weapons, alcohol or drug infractions that it would be easy for school administration to establish reasonable suspicion.

School board member and city police chief Dennis Halverson assures both students and parents that the actions of the school board are solely safety measures.

"This is a reaction to trying to make the school safer especially in terms of weapons and to a lesser extent controlled substance issues. The aim is not to create a police environment, but some actions are in direct conflict with the educational environment," Halverson said.

The proposal is subject to a second reading at the Dec. 11 school board meeting before becoming policy.

STATE OF MICHIGAN DEPARTMENT OF ENVIRONMENTAL QUALITY SUPERVISOR OF WELLS

IN THE MATTER OF:

THE PETITION OF MCN OIL & GAS COMPANY FOR AN ORDER OF THE SUPERVISOR OF WELLS AMENDING THE WILSON 28 UNIFORM SPACING PLAN AS ESTABLISHED BY SUPERVISOR'S ORDER NO. (A) 8-3-97, AS AMENDED, CONSISTING OF PARTS OF SECTIONS 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, AND 34, T32N, R6W, WILSON TOWNSHIP, AND PART OF SECTION 36, T32N, R7W, SOUTH ARM TOWNSHIP, CHARLEVOIX COUNTY, MICHIGAN.

CAUSE NO. (A) 8-3-97

NOTICE OF HEARING

Take notice that a contested case hearing will be held before the Supervisor of Wells (Supervisor) in the city of Lansing, Michigan, on the THIRTEENTH DAY OF DECEMBER.

BER (DECEMBER 13) 2000, BEGINNING AT 9:00 A.M. IN THE EAST BALLROOM OF THE HARLEY HOTEL, 3600 DUNCKEL, JOLLY ROAD EXIT OFF U.S. 127, LANSING, MICHIGAN. The hearing will be conducted pursuant to Part 615, Supervisor of Wells, of the Natural Resources and Environmental Protection Act, 1994 PA 451, as amended (NREPA), MCL 324.61501 et seq.; the administrative rules, 1996 AACRS, R 324.101 et seq.; and the Administrative Procedures Act, 1969 PA 306, as amended, MCL 24.201 et seq.; MSA 3.560(101) et seq.

The hearing is for the purpose of receiving testimony and evidence pertaining to the need or desirability of issuing an order in the matter of the petition of MCN Oil & Gas Company (Petitioner), 1652 Keane Dr., Traverse City, Michigan 49686.

Petitioner seeks an order of the Supervisor approving a proposed decrease in size of the Wilson 28 Uniform Spacing Plan (USP). The USP was established by Order No. (A) 8-3-97, effective August 8, 1997, for development of the Antrim Shale Formation pursuant to the applicable spacing order, Order No. (A) 14-9-94. The area of the USP established by Order No. (A) 8-3-97 comprised 3,969.21 acres (Original USP Area). The Original USP Area is described as follows:

E 1/2 and E 1/2 of SW 1/4, Section 27; all of Section 28 except N 1/2 of NE 1/4 and NE 1/4 of NW 1/4; all of Section 29 except S 1/2 of NW 1/4 and W 1/2 of SW 1/4; NE 1/4 of Section 30; all of Section 31 except NW 1/4; all of Section 32; all of Section 33 except SW 1/4 of SW 1/4, all of Section 34 except N 1/2 of NW 1/4; T32N, R6W, Wilson Township; SE 1/4 of Section 36, T32N, R7W, South Arm Township, Charlevoix County, Michigan.

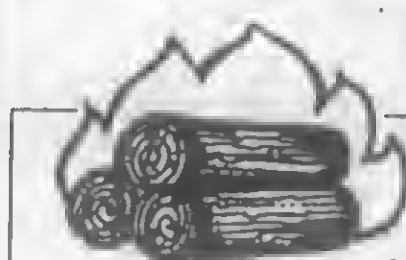

The operator of the USP has drilled, completed, and tested a total of 16 Antrim Shale Formation wells on the Original USP Area. Petitioner asserts that the wells it plans to continue producing will not adequately, efficiently, and economically drain the entire Original USP Area. Petitioner recommends that the acreage within the Original USP Area, which Petitioner believes cannot be drained, should be removed from the USP. Petitioner proposes that acreage removed from the USP shall no longer receive royalty or other proceeds on production from the wells on the USP.

The area proposed to be deleted from the Original USP Area (Deletion Acreage) totals 1,480 acres and is described as follows:

E 1/2 and E 1/2 of SW 1/4, Section 27; S 1/2 of NE 1/4, W 1/2 of NW 1/4, SE 1/4 of NW 1/4, SW 1/4 and W 1/2 of SE 1/4, Section 28; E 1/2, N 1/2 of NW 1/4 and E 1/2 of SW 1/4, Section 29; NE 1/4, Section 30, T32N, R6W, Wilson Township, Charlevoix County, Michigan.

The area proposed to be retained within the Revised USP Area totals 2,489.16 acres and is described as follows:

E 1/2 of SE 1/4, Section 28; all of Section 31 except NW 1/4; all of Section 32; all of Section 33 except SW 1/4 of SW 1/4; all of Section 34

Snowmobilers reminded to obey city laws

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

City police chief Dennis Halverson fielded some phone calls last week from angry citizens complaining of disruptive snowmobilers.

"Snowmobile season generates a lot of complaints from citizens. These complaints are not about all snowmobile users, but a small percentage tend to be a bad reflection on all," Halverson said.

As the season quickly approaches snowmobile users can arm themselves with the law in order to assure a safe, hassle-free ride.

"We are after voluntary compliance from the snowmobile community, not enforcement," Halverson said.

City law mandates that snowmobiles not be driven on privately owned property unless approved by the property owner and that snowmobiles not be operated in the city of Charlevoix before Dec. 1.

Snowmobiling in the city of Charlevoix is permitted from Dec. 1 to March 31, but between the hours of 11 p.m. and 7 a.m. snowmobiles are not to be operated within city limits.

Bridge Street tops list for accidents in 1999

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

Using 1999 crash data from the Charlevoix City Police Department, a recent investigation by the Charlevoix Courier determined Bridge Street is the most dangerous street in Charlevoix for drivers.

Out of a total of 181 accidents in 1999, Bridge Street was the site of 99, or 55 percent, of accidents in the city. Of the total accidents in the city in 1999, 33 of them resulted in an injury and 20 of these were on Bridge Street.

Also using this data, the Courier found the top five most dangerous intersections in 1999 were: Bridge Street and M-66, with 13 accidents; Bridge Street and Garfield Street, with 12 accidents — one of these accidents was a fatality; Bridge Street and Carpenter Street, with 11 accidents; Bridge Street and Clinton Street, with 10 accidents; Michigan Avenue and Pine River Lane, with seven accidents.

Charlevoix Police Chief Dennis Halverson said he was not surprised by the findings.

"There is high commercial activity on Bridge Street and a sheer volume of not only north and south traffic, but east and west traffic. I think it is reflective that the major intersections have a major number of the accidents," he said.

And, while being in an automobile accident is certainly dangerous for the occupants of the vehicle, it is also costly for drivers in Charlevoix. According to Halverson, the average accident in Charlevoix creates about $2,500 in damage per automobile.

One of the basic problems facing drivers on Bridge Street is when they make a left turn. Since there is no room for a center turn lane, drivers create conflict and congestion when they are stopped in the lane.

The danger in this situation is heightened when there are two vehicles making opposite left turns at the same time, Halverson said.

Proposed township zoning changes affect master plan

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Charlevoix Township zoning administrators are in the process of revising their master plan in order for the township's new zoning ordinance to meet the projections of the plan.

"We had a public hearing to bring the master plan up to what we had rezoned. We had a commercial area behind Kmart which we rezoned to R4, and R2 (both residential districts) along the railroad extension," Charlevoix Township zoning administrator Nancy Rajewski said.

Rajewski commented that the board felt that residential land use in this area was preferred to boat storage building use previously considered. She also said that the board was able to get the density down to acceptable levels.

Much discussion has taken place over the land use of the property adjacent to Kmart and the need for "affordable" housing in Charlevoix. Rajewski said that the area by Kmart is going to be all residential, but she questioned the housing's affordability.

"A little more affordable housing (will go in by Kmart) but that depends on how much you make. The housing is not low-income housing. My understanding is that each will cost $105,000 to $120,000; I don't call that low-income housing. You would have to have a good chunk of money to make the payments and down payments," she said.

According to County Planner Larry Sullivan, who has not yet seen a final draft of the Charlevoix Township zoning ordinance or its master plan revisions, this lack of "affordable" housing is a harsh reality facing many service workers in Charlevoix.

Sullivan said this problem is forcing many into multiple family dwellings, like apartments.

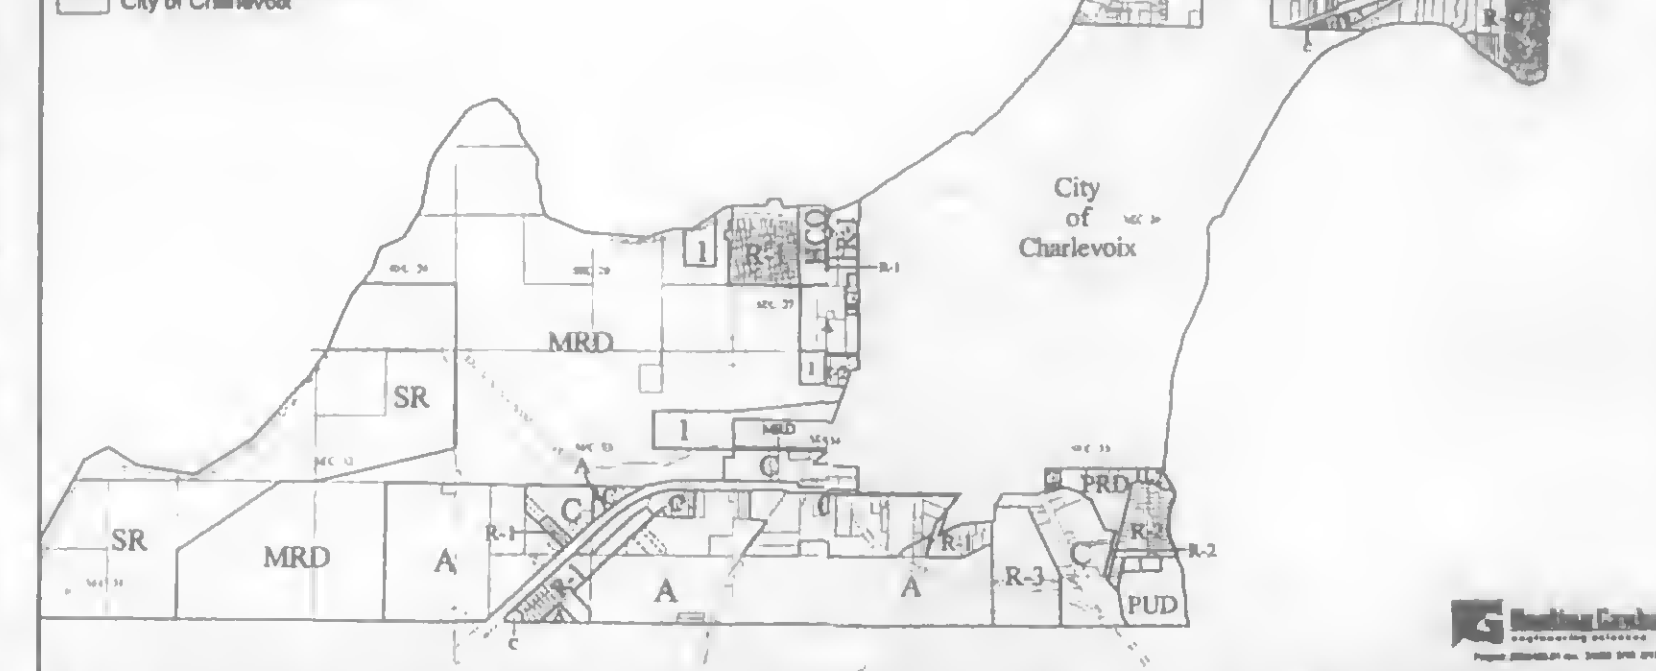

"I would like to see a concerted effort to meet the needs of segments of the population. I think the need is not one specific employer. There are a broad range of people precluded from housing. I've talked with a number of people who are priced out of Charlevoix County's housing market," Sullivan said.

On Dec. 6 the planning commission is expected to recommend the master plan changes to the township board. After this, the zoning ordinance will be presented to the county planning commission, to discuss at their December meeting.

It is expected to be on the township board's January agenda for final approval.

Some random thoughts at the start of winter

Jeremy
McBain

'Just a thought'

Winter is a very thoughtful time of the year for me.

There are many little ideas running around my head at this time of year, just wanting to see the light of day. So, I thought I would give these nagging little thoughts a chance to taste the cool northern Michigan air this week with a column I will call, "Random Thoughts."

• Remember, 11 a.m. this Saturday is the Charlevoix Community Photo in East Park.

The staff of the Charlevoix Courier is inviting everyone in Charlevoix to come on out for this group photograph. It should be a memorable event and create a lasting reminder of who we were at the real beginning of the new millennium.

For those of you who do not know, we will be taking a picture of the group at about 11:30 a.m. but are asking everyone to start gathering in the park at 11 a.m. The picture will be published on the front page of the first edition of the Charlevoix Courier.

Hopefully the snow or rain will hold off so we can get this shot. Maybe — if we cross our fingers really tight — it will even be sunny and warm.

• This time of year creates quite an emotional battle within me.

I'm not really a winter person so the early darkness of the days, the cold in the air and the snow on the ground tend to put me in a grumpy mood. However, with it being the holiday season there is a certain cheerfulness to the air. This, of course, lifts up my spirits and puts a smile on my face at times.

It's like two people living inside of me battling to be on top. Thus, it creates wonderful mood swings that keep co-workers, friends, my wife and even my cat on their toes.

To top this off, winter is the time of year when I really have no other hobbies than work. In the summer I play my bagpipes, swim, lay on the beach and take long drives. These tend to not work well in the winter. My bagpipes like too freeze up, the lake is a little to chilly for swimming — same for the beach — and those long drives have a more treacherous tone when the road is covered with ice.

Some people ask, "Why don't you take up a winter hobby, like skiing?"

I usually answer, "Gee, why wouldn't I want to stick slender sleds on my feet and slide down a tree-covered mountain at high speeds?" They usually leave me alone to my grumpy ways after this.

• I received a phone call from a person who disagreed with my editorial last week. The editorial stated the school's proposed policy on searching vehicles in the parking lot without probable cause was a violation of the Fourth Amendment. This person, who shall remain nameless, argued this rule is in the best interest of the safety of the students and the public and parents would sleep better with it.

My response: The East German government used to argue that the building of the Berlin Wall was in the best interest of the safety of its citizens too. When are we going to stop putting our constitution at risk to create laws and rules politicians think will make people feel safer?

He did have one good argument though. This caller said he thought this rule was just like the rule that states you have to go through a metal detector and have your bags x-rayed before getting on an airplane.

If you don't want to go through this metal detector then you can't get on the plane, thus, if you don't want your car searched, don't park in the high school parking lot, he argued.

Good point. The difference is, if a student refuses to cooperate with this search of their vehicle, they are not just told to park off school property, they can also be punished with suspension.

So, they are not given a choice and if they do not cooperate with this totalitarian rule, they will be punished.

The caller and I agreed that we disagreed on this subject and left it at that.

By the way, instead of calling to disagree with me, I invite readers to submit a letter to the editor. I would rather all of the readers see me proven wrong in print, than just having it done over the phone.

On a side note: this proposed vehicle searching rule at the high school goes for anyone who parks on school property, not just students. Remember that the next time you are attending a basketball game.

• To finish this column off, here is a little reminder for anyone — business or otherwise — submitting information for an event to the Charlevoix Courier for publication.

The deadline for this information is 5 p.m. Friday and all releases must include a contact name and phone number. If you give us fair warning of the event, we can give you until Monday to get the information to us.

We cannot promise when an announcement will run or where it will run in the newspaper, but we try as hard as we can to run the information as promptly as possible.

Sometimes if the announcement has a picture with it, we are able to get the information in, but not the picture, because of space constraints. This does not go for wedding and engagement announcements — we will always publish a picture with these announcements.

Pictures submitted with announcements are kept at the Courier office until the person who submitted the picture comes to claim it.

The news department generally sticks to publishing events being sponsored by a non-profit organization or benefiting a non-profit organization. If it does not benefit a non-profit organization or charity, we generally do not run events taking place at a local business. Those usually work best as advertisements.

Also, try and get information about your event to us at least two weeks ahead of its scheduled time. Sometimes we want to give the event more coverage, but cannot because we were not informed of the event until an hour before it began.

And lastly, please, please, please do not rely on us as the only source to get the information about your event out. Sometimes, an announcement will be missed by us because we are really just human beings who occasionally mess up.

Editor:

I've been thinking about the upcoming Thanksgiving Holiday, and the volunteers of Big Brothers Big Sisters automatically come to mind. I'm always grateful for the volunteers who walk through our door — people from all walks of life with a variety of strengths and gifts to share. But, probably the most valuable gift they share is their time.

Time seems so precious these days. People are committed to their families and full-time jobs, and still seem to find time to give back to their communities. I wonder sometimes how we make time for it all, and I recognize that even one hour of someone's energy is important.

So, just out of curiosity, I quickly estimated the number of hours that our volunteers contribute each year to our organization. I included our community and school-based mentors, people who organize our monthly activities, and volunteers who help with fund-raising events.

I estimated that the volunteers of Big Brothers Big Sisters of Northwestern Michigan will contribute at least 20,800 hours in the year 2000 and will help us serve over 300 children and youth. That translates into over 10 full-time positions. At a rate of $14 per hour (the current rate per volunteer hour) our volunteers are collectively contributing $291,200 to our communities through their time. And their contributions will be even more this next year as we continue to expand our programs.

I've been conservative with my estimates, not even counting the Bowl for Kids participants — the individuals who spend time collecting pledges from their families and friends. Jerry Zeits is one of these special people. He's participated in Bowl for Kids for several years, raising over $5,000 this past year. Over the years, Jerry has raised more than $25,000. There is Raelene Collins who was matched to her Little Sister for over two years and spent time with her every week. fort to involve college students as Big Brothers and Big Sisters.

I haven't counted every corporation, contributor, or volunteer in my estimate, but I count them in my heart this Thanksgiving along with every organization, service provider, staff member, youth, child, parent, and family who has ever contributed to this worthwhile program. We are truly thankful.

Votes should count

I would like to say if any votes should be counted it should be our young people who are away from home in USA for us in USA.

I give up to even think of this. The ones to vote must be those in faraway places and let it pass our minds come another time to vote. Things must be different.

Think of how many have never voted. To think about how many do not vote is upsetting.

Every year Vacation Properties Network sponsors a Benefit Golf Scramble and donates the proceeds to community organizations.

This year, the golf scramble was dedicated to the memory of Roger P. Shepard. Over $2,000 was raised and donated to the Charlevoix County Land Conservancy.

We are grateful to the friends and family of Roger Shepard for participating in the Tenth Annual Vacation Properties Network Benefit, and to Greg Smith who organized and made it a great success.

We are happy that Vacation Properties honored Roger's love for Charlevoix with a gift to the Conservancy.

The Charlevoix County Land Conservancy will place half of the donation in the Land Acquisition Fund for land preservation. The other half will be used for outdoor activities and educational programs.

The support of good friends and neighbors is the foundation to the Conservancy's continued success.

Charlevoix Book Angels to furnish children with books

Each year through the very generous support of a caring community, the gift of books is given on Christmas morning to disadvantaged children in Charlevoix.

This project, called the Book Angel project, is sponsored by Bridge Street Book Shop in Charlevoix in cooperation with the Charlevoix Community Christmas project.

In many cases, "Book Angels" enable a child to own his or her very first book.

The eighth Annual Christmas Book Angel program has begun and will continue through Dec. 15.

Book Shop patrons may select an angel from the basket in Bridge Street Book Shop and purchase a book of their choosing for the child represented by the gender and age on the angel.

The book will be discounted 20 percent and wrapped for that child "From a Book Angel."

"Our goal is to have books purchased for all seventy boys and girls on our list by Dec. 15," said Dianne Foster, owner of Bridge Street Book Shop. "If our customers need help selecting the books, we are happy to help. We are grateful to the Charlevoix Lions Club who, once again, helped us launch this program with a very generous donation of $150. Their donation will provide wonderful books to about 20 children."

For more information on being a Book Angel, stop by Bridge Street Book Shop before Dec. 15 or call 547-7323.

SNOWMOBILES

There are designated trails within the city that may be used by snowmobilers. These trails are divided into two trail types, A and B. While riding on these designated routes the law says that no snowmobiles are permitted on the sidewalks.

Type A routes are primary routes. These routes include: Division Street from Michigan Avenue to Mercer Boulevard; Sherman Street to Charlo Street; to Carpenter Street, along the east perimeter fence of the Charlevoix Airport to US-31; the Garfield/May Street intersection south on May Street to Eaton Avenue to Ferry Avenue to Stover Road.

The Type B route is relatively new, it was added last season. The

"We are after voluntary compliance from the snowmobile community, not enforcement."

Dennis Halverson,
Charlevoix City Police Chief

Type B route runs through the downtown business sector. Halverson referred to this route as a destination route, a way to get into downtown, not a thoroughfare.

The only route through which snowmobiles are permitted to travel in the business sector is Ferry Avenue from the intersection of Eaton Avenue, as well as Ferry Avenue and Belvedere Avenue from its intersection with Ferry Avenue to the downtown snowmobile area.

"The city is sensitive to helping the downtown out in typically slow times. The route is an effort to be attentive to downtown businesses," Halverson said.

Snowmobilers are also expected to follow all traffic laws including the speed limit.

"From a safety standpoint, driving fast across a frozen lake or an open field is fine, but in a city environment there are people, cars and telephone poles — fixed objects come into play when driving too fast," Halverson said.

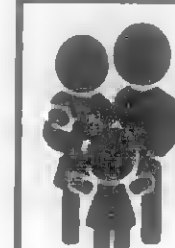

A more extensive list of city laws, as it applies to snowmobile users, is available at the City of Charlevoix Police Department located in City Hall.

College sledding memories relived at Mount McSauba

Julie Musilek
'Stepping out'

Standing at the top of the peak a rush of adrenaline flows through your body as you run and throw yourself onto the plastic saucer.

As you pick up speed, cold, wet snow kicks up into your eyes and it gets harder to catch your breath. Just as you reach the bottom of the hill you hit a jump and go soaring through the air, giggling as you roll the rest of the way and come to a stop, breathless at the bottom of the hill.

Sledding is fun for all ages. I remember in the winter of my freshman year at the University of Michigan, I took my best friend from San Francisco, Natalie, sledding for her first time. It was like being 6 years old all over again.

We started the day by going over to Meijer, the local supermarket/Kmart combination. Meijer had slim pickings for sleds, so we had to settle for a red ride with Mickey Mouse printed all over it.

We dragged the plastic beauty back to our dorm room and inspected it further. Nat did have the sense to have purchased winter boots and other necessary pieces for fun in the snow before coming to Michigan for school. So, we bundled up and walked ourselves down South University.

Anyone who has been to Ann Arbor knows South University is a very busy student thoroughfare. Most freshmen would have been embarrassed to be dressed like marshmallow men hauling a Mickey Mouse sled behind them as they passed the elite fraternities, but it didn't really phase us.

We were on a mission to sled. We reached the Arboretum or "The Arb" as students call it and were ready to have some fun. We climbed to the top of the hill and stood breathless overlooking the slope. Nat hadders know you have just a little less control in a sled.

I gave her some pointers on steering, you know, a lean here a lean there and you can avoid that big oak tree. Needless to say, Nat was skeptical, so I thought for our first trip down we would ride together.

I have never laughed so hard in my life, it was truly like being a little kid all over again. From the bumps along the way right down to the sled throwing us out, it was one of my favorite college memories.

On Friday I headed over to Mount McSauba offers area kids a chance for some cool winter fun

Mount McSauba Recreation Area and found some of the same giddy looks on kids' faces as they poured out of their parents' cars clutching their favorite sled.

A young girl sat at the top of the hill with her dad as her mom told me that last year she would never even touch the snow. Yet, there she was at the top of the hill ready to make her decent.

Like Natalie, Annie was afraid and squealed as her dad lowered her into the plastic sled and then climbed in behind her. The duo zipped past me and Annie grinned ear-to-ear.

There is something about the rush of the ride down the hill and what everyone takes away from that experience.

I don't remember the last white Thanksgiving, but this year I'm thankful for the snow. I never thought I would say that, but just think of all the kids and parents who could go out and cross country ski or sled or even downhill ski.

During the holidays we surround ourselves with things, whether it be gifts or elaborate feasts. But what we all end up remembering are moments like our first time sledding or that cross country skiing outing we were able to take with our dad.

Sledding and outdoor sports are what winter in northern Michigan is all about. They offer families the opportunity to get exercise and have fun together.

This year like years past I'll hope for a white Christmas, but a white Thanksgiving was a whole new treat.

Mount McSauba Recreation Area offers tons of winter outdoor opportunities like sledding, cross country skiing and even downhill skiing — a perfect place to make memories. McSauba is located at the corner of Mt. McSauba Road and Pleasant Street.

Mount McSauba's sled run is so popular the snow was quickly worn away last weekend. But, that didn't stop Corey Byard, of East Jordan, from having a little fun. (Photo by Julie Musilek)

Santa Claus is coming

It's that time of year when area children are acting especially nice. They know that the man in the red suit will soon be visiting their homes with plenty of presents for them. Santa can be seen all over town, whether it be a Santa yard ornament (left) or the real Santa (right) here to get gift ideas from the kids. (Photo at right by Julie Musilek. Some gifts ideas, A-Z, from local stores

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Instead of trekking through northern Michigan blizzards and fierce big-city traffic to buy your holiday presents this year, why not stay in Charlevoix?

To offer readers a taste of what Charlevoix has for shoppers this holiday season, listed below are gift ideas from A-Z.

A — Alpaca wool sweaters, pull-overs and cardigans from The Clothing Company.

B — Linda Boss's beautifully framed paintings of our quaint little shopping Mecca, Charlevoix, are available at Interior Motives.

C — Cherry New Year packaged tasty treats. The Christmas box is filled with brandied cherries, cherry marmalade, cherry BBQ grilling sauce and cherry peach salsa. This package and many others can be purchased at American Spoon Foods.

D — Dog. What better gift is there than a best friend from the Charlevoix Humane Society?

E — Estée Lauder fragrances can be purchased at J Phillips.

F — Friendship blown glass balls when hung from windows catch light and put on a dazzling color show. The glass balls are available in many sizes at the Apple Tree.

G — Gift bags and Christmas stationery. After exchanging your purchases hidden in a darling gift bag use the festive stationery for writing all of your thank you notes after the holidays. Both the reusable gift bags and the stationery are available at Morning Glory Gifts and Collectibles.

H — Herb cooking oils that are great for decorating the kitchen or for use in your favorite dishes are on sale at Maison et Jardin.

I — Irish sweaters are available at the Apple Tree.

J — Jeweled book mark. A great gift for a teacher or any other person you're buying for who usually has their nose in a book. These alternatives to the typical paper book mark are available at Koucky Art Gallery. Ask for the Moon Mambo book mark.

K — Kim Left's new book, The Day Rue Flew, available at the Koucky Art Gallery.

L — Leather gloves for women are available in multiple colors at the Shop of the Gulls.

M — Metal basket woven to look like twigs is available at the Apple Tree. For holiday decorating the basket can be filled with Christmas ornaments or pine cones.

N — Night lights crafted from recycled glass bottles glow a muted version of the glass shards they are made from. These lights are works of art available at Elements.

O — Ornaments. Interior Motives carries Christopher Radko ornaments that each have their own unique identity, from intricate Santas to snowmen.

P — Pewter engraved, measuring cups are dishwasher safe and are available at Koucky Art Gallery.

Q — Quartz earrings. The Apple Tree is featuring handmade American sterling silver earrings accented with quartz and amber stones.

R — Robes. Silky robes for the ladies are available at Kmart.

S — Slippers from Bahnhof. Bahnhof carries Acorn slippers that are comfortable and warm.

Whitneys to expand to TC, selling Charlevoix business

BY JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

"We plan to be open in Charlevoix until we sell it, but we don't plan on selling it any time soon."

Gina Whitney,
Co-owner of Whitneys Oyster Bar in Charlevoix

Gina and Chuck Whitney, co-owners of Whitneys Oyster Bar on Bridge Street recently received an expansion offer they couldn't refuse.

Whitneys Oyster Bar of Charlevoix now looks forward to a new venue for their menu as the restaurateurs head for the big city lights of Front Street in Traverse City.

"We weren't thinking about it (a new restaurant in Traverse City), they approached us. Traverse City offers more of a year-round market," Gina said.

"We plan to be open in Charlevoix until we sell it (the Charlevoix restaurant) but we don't plan on selling it any time soon. If we don't sell this one we'll have both," she added.

According to Gina, the construction process began recently at the Traverse City location, but she estimates the completion of the project as taking one full year. The new location on Front Street will be at the site of the old Firestone dealership, near the downtown area.

Whitneys has been a Charlevoix hot-spot for 10 years and during that time period has undergone some changes.

Gina spoke candidly about opening the Charlevoix restaurant with her husband, Chuck, 10 years ago. To get the business kick-started she said that she waited tables and Chuck bartended.

The venue now boasts three floors, each of which is packed with customers in the summer months.

The restaurant's current look came after a devastating fire that occurred in September of 1997. The fire hollowed the structure, but Chuck and Gina persevered and rebuilt the restaurant which reopened during the 1998 Venetian Festival.

The venue draws musical acts and seafood lovers — a package that has appealed to many throughout the years.

Whitneys' workers said that their customer base is strong and while each may come for a reason all their own, many come for "the unique atmosphere and the food, especially the fish."

Unlike the Charlevoix location, the Traverse City restaurant will be one floor and will be equipped with adjoining parking.

Gina said so far those who have approached the owners with purchasing proposals, plan to maintain exactly what they are doing now, an oyster bar.

The restaurant is currently listed with Steve Andrae of Re/Max.

Once the couple makes their move to Traverse, Gina said, "I will miss the Charlevoix community, it's just beautiful. We'll also miss our friendships and the core of our employees."

The restaurant is currently open for lunch on Friday, Saturday and Sunday and open seven days a week for dinner.

Charlevoix resident, Left, self-publishes new book

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Charlevoix native Kim Left recently self-published the first in a series of six books titled, The Day Rue Flew — the book is a depiction of the metamorphosis of a woman coming into her own.

Left said that she started a series of drawings 10 years ago following a divorce. The drawings revealed a woman coming out of a cocoon. As she began narrating the text, she realized the book was based on those drawings she had done long ago.

"This book is about fear, ourselves, overcoming fear and making the best choices. It's about a woman coming to terms with her identity and overcoming fear in order to be in a relationship with herself or anybody else," Left said.

Left highlighted that what is most important in any relationship is friendship and that friendship begins with self-love. In the text, the female character, Rue, is not united with her love, Puck, until after she learns to use her wings to fly on her own.

Rue is able to come to terms with her own strengths and to love herself before she can be in a healthy relationship.

Left described the arduous process she underwent in completing the text from manifesting her ideas graphically and in words and also in publishing the book.

Her decision to self-publish came after she started to see

"It doesn't fit tidily into a category, but neither do I."

Kim Left,
Charlevoix author

some hesitancy from publishers who, according to Left, thought the book didn't fit into any solid category.

"It doesn't fit tidily into a category, but neither do I," she said.

Rather than seeing publishers' resistance as a roadblock, she treated it as a hurdle to be overcome and decided to self-publish.

Publishing problems may appear to be a writer's greatest challenge, but Left maintains that the hardest stage in the process was the technical part. Each character and page in the book is dawned in bright hues. These characters are the product of many long hours of sketching in colored pencil.

The series, Rue's Ruse, will reveal similar themes and will continue to function as healing books for women. Left foresees Book Two being completed around the time of the 2001 Apple Festival.

Left's empowering "fairly tale for women," is available at Koucky Art Gallery on Bridge Street in downtown Charlevoix or in Traverse City at the Higher Self Bookstore, Horizon Bookstore and Borders.

November Blizzard Takes Heavy Toll

Many Lives Lost on Great Lakes, Throughout Nation and in Southern Michigan

Local Damage Slight Compared to Other Districts: Coast Guards Busy With Distress Calls; Fish Tugs Sunk at Cross Village; Lighthouses Damaged

Charlevoix and northern Michigan is today digging out of what is termed the fiercest storm of the 20th century and unprecedented in local history for such an early advent of winter and its severity.

High winds which brought rain Monday afternoon, snow that evening and an all-day blizzard Tuesday, smashed trees, signs and buildings, disrupted telephone and electric service and otherwise wrought havoc in this region.

As wind-driven snow brought visibility to near zero, some rural schools closed and attendance in Charlevoix schools was down to a low figure Tuesday. Lashed by a southwest gale of 45 miles per hour, electric lines broke or went down under falling trees, interrupting service so rapidly repairmen could not keep up with the damage. Some users of electrically controlled furnaces put in a cold night and homes with electric ranges in some instances had a cold breakfast.

Trees were blown down throughout the city, lying across streets and sidewalks. This condition existed in rural districts also. Wind blew a chimney down through the roof of the Baptist church, also the Don Herrick residence, destroyed a chimney at the Floyd Supp home, blew out windows at the Parkside Restaurant and in numerous homes. Roofs were damaged throughout the city. Doors were blown in and a roof damaged at the Foster Boat Co.

Damage in the rural district, only partially reported at this time, included barns blown down or damaged at the Saunders, D.E. Ingalls, Floyd Black and Charles Withers farms. A crib filled with corn was moved 18 inches off its foundation at the Ingalls farm.

Charlevoix coast guards faced death in mountainous seas during a fruitless 9-hour search Tuesday in the vicinity of Fox Islands for the Str. Frank J. Peterson, first reported grounded there, but later reported on Hog Island reef. The ship was reported safe, although leaking, Wednesday morning. First Officer Louis Mosher, whose crew was composed of Robert Sommerville, Fred Hardy and Lloyd Hulett, returned at 4:30 with their boat, and men as well, heavily iced. Mosher said the seas were the heaviest experienced in his 25 years of coast guard service.

Willis Cross' diesel powered fish tug Dornbos, last reported in the vicinity of Fox Islands, Monday, reached port around noon today. At Cross Village, the tug Violet, owned by Don Cross, the Harold H. owned by Ralph Cross, the Grey's Reef supply boat and several small craft were said to have sunk behind the breakwater. Docks were destroyed at St. James harbor, where nine fish tugs were said to be sunk or ashore. Miles Olmstead's tug Alice broke its mooring Tuesday night in Round Lake and was washed high and dry on the beach near the Chicago Club boathouses. Coast Guards were trying to pull it off Wednesday morning.

Radio reports indicated Lansing Shoals lighthouse was out of commission, its portholes smashed and machinery room flooded. Grey's Reef lighthouse also was considerably damaged and its emergency boat washed away. Crews of both were safe, however.

That this region escaped the brunt of the storm is indicated by reports of death and destruction from Midwest and eastern states and lower Michigan.

In the nation the death toll was near 100. It was feared 70, perhaps more, met death on the Great Lakes, sixteen bodies from the freighters William R. Davock and Anna C. Minch had washed ashore at Ludington and Pentwater. Two fish tugs with their crews of 7 and four coast guardsmen were reported lost at Grand Haven. Eight large craft were listed as missing or aground. Michigan's death toll from storm accidents was high.

About five inches of snow fell in this section, a much greater amount than in sections east and south. A large number of deer hunters, seeking transportation to Beaver Island, were awaiting arrival of the mail boat Mary Margaret, storm-bound since Monday at St. James.

Hunting Party Stalled in Lake

Spend Hours Trying to Start Engine on Return Home

Poor luck at hunting, engine trouble resulting in being stalled in Pine Lake for three hours or more, and missing a fine Thanksgiving dinner was the experience of Bert Beaudoin, Harry Gregory, D.J. Eckinger and Wm. Duba.

The bunch started early Thanksgiving Day for Oyster Bay, with the expectations of killing the limit of rabbits. They faithfully promised their wives to be home at one o'clock. They hunted and hunted, tramped over acres of jungle, and from all accounts failed to get a "bunny."

Disgusted with their luck, and knowing that a fine dinner awaited them at home, they started for Charlevoix. For a mile or so the gas engine purred and spit in the usual manner, then stopped dead right in the middle of Pine Lake. They cranked it, then talked to it, primed it, petted it, but the engine said "whoof" when it should have said "Wheel!" Eckinger thought the trouble laid in the exhaust pipe while the others laid the trouble to various causes.

They wig-wagged for help, and finally someone ashore noticed their queer actions and notified the Coast Guard station. The Guards immediately set out to rescue them, when the gas engine finally decided to quit its balking and the home run was made.

They reached home at 5:30, found a cold dinner, and, as we have been informed it took hours of cajoling on the part of their wives to bring them back to their usual good humor.

Use caution when on Bridge Street ACCIDENTS

This leads to the most common accident, and the most likely for injury, where a driver in a vehicle turning left does not see a vehicle coming in the opposite direction.

This was the situation that resulted in a fatality in 1999 at the intersection of Bridge and Garfield streets.

To combat this problem, Halverson said city police try to increase patrols and make visible stops — to let other drivers know the police are out.

"But, the amount of traffic and commercial activity on Bridge Street makes it difficult for us to work," he said.

Sometimes the officer can not catch up with speeding vehicles on Bridge Street, because by the time they get their vehicle turned around, the speeder ends up mixed in with 20-25 other cars.

But, Halverson is working to decrease some of the dangerous areas of Bridge Street through various other ways. Some of this is done by providing some traffic input on every development plan that comes before the city and helping create city driving ordinances.

An example is the elimination of left turns at State and Bridge street and into the Captain's Corners Plaza on M-66, thus reducing some of the congestion in that area.

Another resource in Halverson's arsenal to combat the problem of traffic accidents in Charlevoix is simple public relations, such as talking at driver's education classes.

Halverson added these problems on Bridge Street are similar in every city intersected by US-31 — Bridge Street's name outside of the city limits — such as Traverse City and Elk Rapids.

"If you got the traffic data down there you would see the same issues: there isn't room for a center turn lane, increasing commercial presence and ever increasing traffic volumes," Halverson said.

But, Charlevoix has an added traffic problem the other cities do not have — the bridge.

This local landmark backs up traffic on Bridge Street and sometimes creates frayed nerves due to the long waits in the summer.

This is a problem that Halverson predicts will get worse in the future.

"I foresee a day when traffic is backed up all the way to Bridge (Street) and M-66," he said.

The bottom line, Halverson said, is just having the public aware of the dangers on Bridge Street helps the problems.

"People should be using this information to their advantage when traveling in this part of town. Statistically if they are in an accident, it will be on Bridge Street between Clinton and M-66," he said. "The awareness level should be increased."

Possible city land sale debated

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

In an effort to halt the loss of a possible recreation opportunity, some Charlevoix residents have voiced their opposition to city officials' plans of possibly selling a nine-acre land parcel by Ferry Road and M-66.

"The property is an island in the midst of growth that hasn't been developed because of its deep ravines. I believe these ravines are one of the assets of the land. We are trying to convince the city to hold onto the property as the cornerstone of what could be a tremendous asset," Jo Anne Beemon, executive director of the Charlevoix County Land Conservancy, said.

The conservancy claims that the nine acre parcel holds deep ravines and flowing creeks that are environmentally sensitive.

However, Douglas Bergmann Jr., co-owner of Bergmann Marine, who is interested in purchasing the property to increase the boat storage accommodations offered by the business, claims the front three acres would not be developed.

Bergmann said he regularly runs on the trail and is aware of its deep ravines and flowing creeks and that because of these natural features he would use the back six acres for boat storage dubbing the other three acres, unsuited for development.

"My wife is a biology teacher. I value the environment but look at the piece of property: it is 10 acres surrounded by development. I want the back half where it is flat. On the front half there are ravines and creeks, I would have to be crazy to cut those trees down. It is a very sensitive piece of property," Bergmann said.

Aside from halting the sale so as not to disturb the natural features of the land, over 25 community members, in conjunction with the conservancy, circulated a petition in late September documenting their vision of an alternative use for the property.

The petition stated, "We understand that this property has some natural features, (three creek tributaries and deep ravines) which would be

Board may change disclosure policy

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

The Charlevoix Public School District has proposed changes to the student information disclosure policy in order to afford greater privacy to students and parents, but may have dove into a public information debate.

"There is a real division of how much information and what kinds of information about students should be disclosed by schools," Dawn Phillips, lawyer for the Michigan Press Association said. Phillips regularly deals with Freedom of Information Act issues as a media lawyer.

The proposed Charlevoix policy redefines directory information as including the student's name, picture, major course of study, participation in recognized activities and sports and related information, grade placement and honors awards received.

The district will also have the option to include address, phone number, parent's/guardian's name(s), addresses and phone numbers, and the student's date and place of birth.

However, upon learning of this, Phillips said, "I somewhat disagree with the list of items that the school can disclose.

A few tips to keep you out of the snowbanks

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

"There are times when even we have to get pulled out."

Dennis Halverson,
Charlevoix police chief

While that first winter snowstorm may be beautiful as it covers the ground with a white blanket, its beauty goes unnoticed by drivers who find themselves sliding all over the roads.

To help keep the roads safe this winter, Charlevoix Police Chief Dennis Halverson recently offered some tips to drivers.

In preparation for the wintery roads and conditions, Halverson said it is important that drivers make sure their vehicles are mechanically sound, have snow tires, enough windshield washing fluid and their lights are on.

"A good rule of thumb is if your windshield wipers are on, your lights should be on," Halverson said.

He added if the vehicle has an anti-lock braking system, drivers should be aware of how to use them.

With this type of braking system, to stop in slippery conditions, drivers should maintain constant pressure on the brake. The system will not allow the vehicle's brakes to lock up, thus slowly stopping the vehicle. Halverson said sometimes people get scared when the vehicle doesn't stop immediately.

Once on the roads, it is important that drivers give plenty of space to the vehicle in front of them, especially during a stop.

"Four out of every 10 accidents on (Bridge Street) are a rear-end," Halverson said.

Speed is also another factor in a lot of the winter accidents in Charlevoix, especially among young inexperienced drivers.

"We run into a lot of young drivers because they have run into someone else. Parents should spend some time with their children out on the side roads (in the winter)," Halverson said. All drivers should remember not to drive one way for all of the seasons, he added.

Drivers should also make sure all of their windows are clear of snow or ice.

"You'll see them go down the street with a football sized spot on their front window and they are peering out. They are just asking for trouble," Halverson said.

To further avoid trouble, drivers should be aware of the problem spots on their route.

In Charlevoix, drivers should be on alert when traveling through the curves on Michigan Avenue, just north of the bridge and at the base of the hill on Bridge Street, leading into the downtown area.

People driving on the Michigan Avenue curves too fast in icy or snowy weather, could find their vehicle bashing against the guardrails following a slide — especially if they are traveling on the south-bound side. Halverson said before the guardrail was up it was common for vehicles to slide right off the west-side of the road and end in a condominium.

If you do find yourself on these curves and in a slide, Halverson said the worst thing to do is to put your foot on your brake pedal. He suggests drivers take their foot off the gas, turn into the slide and hopefully the vehicle will correct itself.

But, usually the best bet for drivers on these curves is to avoid going into a slide outright. This can be accomplished by slowing down and preparing for the curves in advance.

Doing business without promoting is like working in the dark — nobody knows how to find you when they need you.

Do not park on the streets overnight

Charlevoix City Police Chief Dennis Halverson is reminding residents that winter parking regulations are now in effect.

In order to keep the city streets properly plowed in the winter, it is against city ordinance to leave your vehicle parked on city streets between 3 to 6 a.m.

Halverson said the police department does ticket vehicles left on the street and will tow those vehicles if they interfere with snow removal.

Corrections

On the front page of last week's edition of the Charlevoix Courier there were two errors which need to be corrected.

In the story on dangerous intersections on page one, the total number of accidents in 1999 for Bridge Street and Carpenter Street should have been 11.

In the picture outline for the Charlevoix downtown Christmas tree lighting on page one, it should have said, "Charlevoix rang in the holiday season Friday...."

We apologize for these errors.

Stay safe on the roads this winter

It's winter again in Charlevoix. While it may bring pretty new snow that will blanket the landscape, winter also means blowing and drifting snow, icy roads, poor visibility, frayed nerves and vehicles attached to the earth by nothing more than a snow covered tire.

It's time for Charlevoix drivers to put away their summer driving skills and become the winter driving experts they are known to be.

To help drivers remain safe while traveling around the city, we have included an interview with Charlevoix Police Chief Dennis Halverson in this week's edition. Halverson offers many tips on avoiding an accident in snowy weather.

Some of those tips are: Drive with your lights on, clean off your windshield, get some snow tires, slow down and do not tailgate.

They seem simple enough, but it doesn't take long on the roads during snowy conditions to find many people not using these tips — especially those who drive large sport utility vehicles with four-wheel drive.

It doesn't really matter what kind of vehicle you drive in the winter weather, these tips are designed keeping other drivers in mind as well as keeping you safe. When you do not have your lights on, other drivers cannot see you; when you can't see out of your windows, you can not see the small Chevy Cavalier that suddenly stopped in front of you; if you do not slow down, you could slide in a corner, ending up on a guardrail or on top of a car; if you tailgate, you run the risk of smashing into the rear of the car in front of you.

But, there is one more tip that we should also add to this list — especially around the holidays — do not drink and drive.

Sure, you may have had just a "couple" at that work Christmas party. Sure, you may feel "fine." Sure, you know how much alcohol you can handle. But, tell those excuses to the driver you just killed when you lost control on that icy corner and your reflexes were a little off. Or tell those excuses to the police officer who is handcuffing you after pulling your vehicle over.

You need to have a clear head and full reflexes when out on the roads in winter weather, something alcohol does not give. Plus, drinking and driving is a really stupid idea no matter what the road condition is.

With these tips, we hope every driver in Charlevoix remains safe this winter.

Some seeds need more than just dirt and water

Roger Knutson

'Ear to the ground'

One of the pleasures of visiting the woods and fields this time of year is the accessibility of dozens or even hundreds of different kinds of seeds.

Many of the seeds are housed in colorful berries and others in cleverly arranged seed heads of the sort collected for dried arrangements. My interest is not in the appearance of the seeds, but in their vitality.

"Can I grow a plant from this seed?" is the question I ask myself.

We are so much accustomed to garden and flower seeds growing at our whim that we are unlikely to appreciate that for most plants, the seeds will grow only when they are ready, not when we are. Picking seeds from most of the native plants around here and planting them in damp soil will almost always produce nothing.

Every year I tell myself, "I'm surely smarter than some inanimate non-nervous-system seed." But every year most of my efforts come to not much. Now and then I get a really interesting seedling. I still haven't answered satisfactorily the question of exactly how a seed that is doing nothing can decide precisely when is the best time for it to germinate.

Seeds are pretty amazing even when they don't grow. There are about half a million kinds of plants that produce seeds, and most of the seeds are different enough from one another to be recognizable as individuals: from the forty pound giant double coconut found on islands in the Indian Ocean to the 50,000 or so kinds of orchid seeds, some of them so small that 25,000 of them could comfortably rest on top of a dime.

Some seeds that we know about germinate only after they have been exposed to at least six weeks of near freezing temperature separated by some weeks of warmth before they will begin to grow. Some desert plant seeds will only germinate after they have been rinsed by at least a half inch of rain. Still others need certain colors of light before initiating growth.

Some years ago when I was trying to start some Prairie Shooting Star seeds, I found that they would not grow without a week of cold temperatures. After that they began growth, produced two tiny cotyledons and then stopped completely. Only after six weeks of freezing temperatures did they initiate further growth.

For the vast majority of the world's kinds of seeds, no one knows just what conditions might help them germinate.

This year's exploration includes seeds of the Marsh Mallow or Swamp Mallow, (yes there is a plant called the Marsh Mallow) from the Mississippi River bottoms. I also have some tiny seeds of the native Cardinal Flower, and a few seeds from a tree form of what we call Burning Bush or Euonymus.

The seeds are now in damp sand in the refrigerator, since I suppose they must be ready to germinate out in nature when spring comes. Maybe they will start after only a few weeks of cold. It's not exactly earth-shaking research, but it helps a botanist who needs plants to get through the Michigan winter.

Ten gift ideas to fill your loved one's stockings this Christmas

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Sometimes we get gift block or leave our Christmas shopping to the last minute, dash to the store and are left with nothing for the people who mean the most.

Here are a few out of the ordinary gift ideas, in a variety of price ranges for guys looking to locate a gift for their sweetheart and gals looking to buy for the guy with everything.

These gift ideas are not only nice for the person receiving them, they are easy for the person buying. Everything can be found in Charlevoix so you won't have to brave winter storms to find what you are looking for.

For guys, a gift certificate from Complete Car Detailing off of US-31 North will save him time and possibly eliminate the threat of frost bitten fingers.

With below zero winter temperatures no one, not even the toughest of men, enjoys standing outside, waist deep in snow vacuuming their car. For $70 you can get your man out of the cold and inside sipping eggnog.

If the car detailing seems a little impersonal head over to Bahnhof Sports where you will find comfortable, durable slippers for him.

Even if you equip him with a car detailing or with warm slippers he won't be able to avoid the winter weather forever. For stepping out into arctic temperatures and wading through powdery white snow this year he may need new gear.

Help your guy warm up this winter by picking him up a new hat and gloves from the Clothing Company. If his head and hands are warm but his feet are wet all is lost so, if he's bootless check out Carey's Shoes. This holiday season Carey's has a great selection of winter boots from the new Columbia Bugazip style to trail hikers.

If his boots are holding up and he already has a hat and a pair of gloves, you can never go wrong with Columbia flannel. Trademark Clothiers carries thick flannel shirts that appeal to a guy's rugged side while still keeping him warm.

All the new winter amenities but nothing new to work with? If he has been complaining about inadequate drill bits or is in need of a new chop saw, Sears or Wolohan Lumber, both off of M-66 are your answers. Even if you don't know just what he wants you can purchase a gift certificate from either store and a card from Hallmark to enclose it in.

For her, organize a romantic evening. Buy a small basket at Sweet Sam's Java Joint or ACE

Hardware and stuff it full of Kilwin's chocolates, gift certificates good for two movie passes to Charlevoix Cinema on West Antrim and a second set of certificates for dinner at Terry's Place. Terry's is located right next door to the theater in perfect proximity for a pre-movie feast.

If you have a favorite picture of the two of you sitting idol in a drawer, pick up a Framology picture frame at Shop of the Gulls to add to the basket.

If you know you can't keep yourself awake through a movie buy a wine bag or a wine box at Kmart and fill it with items Mrs. Claus can pamper herself with this holiday season.

Start off by running through Kay's Gourmet Food and Wine Shop on Bridge Street where you can grab her a bottle of red or white wine depending on her preference. Then head over to Hair Quarters where they offer assorted gift certificates good for an afternoon of pampering.

Or, try a variation on the basket idea. Buy a small basket and toss in her favorite wine and fill the rest with home body treatments. Trademark Clothiers carries Thyme's Limited body lotion, perfumed shower gel and foaming milk bath.

Charlevoix Courier Wednesday, December 6, 2000 - PAGE 5

Boots not only keep the cold off your loved one's feet, they also make a great gift. (Photo by Julie Musilek)

Shop of the Gulls also carries a line of herbal body products perfect for home therapy.

The Apple Tree and Trademark Clothiers both have some of the softest most comfy throw blankets in town. These warm blankets, covered in detailed designs, are a nice way to wrap up and relax on cold winter days.

If she doesn't like to wrap up in blankets but is running around in a robe that has seen better days you may have found the perfect gift opportunity.

Trademark Clothiers carries long and short terry cloth robes with different prints. If she is a coffee or tea lover they have a blue robe with steaming-multi-colored mugs or a leopard print robe for the animal lover and a butterfly robe for the bug nut.

If something a little less printed is her style the Clothing Company has solid colored fleece robes to keep her warm.

Cool winter weather has most of us heading for our long johns and thermal wear. The Clothing Company has just the answer for ladies who like to keep warm in style. This holiday season the store has fleece active wear tops and bottoms in stock. They are not air tight enough to wear cross country skiing but will certainly get her where she is going in casual comfort.

The CD rate you've wished for is here.

Wedding

Zurawski — Belding

Instead of exchanging traditional gifts, such as a pewter serving spoon or a watering can or tin whistle to mark their tenth/tin anniversary, a Charlevoix couple decided to marry.

At 4:30 p.m. on Nov. 17, attendants and guests gathered at the big rock at the top of the hill at the Michigan beach with SuZanne Zurawski, daughter of Lawrence and Gail Schaefer and the late Robert Zurawski, and Warren Belding, son of Wayne and Helen Belding, both deceased.

The northwest wind whipped around the party as they arrived, and the bride's wish for snow was granted. She wore a long, pine green dress and cream bolero under a mid-length woolly coat, buttoned all the way up. The groom, similarly wrapped, referring to his usual location in Florida in November, said, "I haven't worn a coat in seven years!" Shaggy earmuffs were borrowed from their unceasing friend and colleague, Gill Mottarelli.

Magistrate Janet Potter, witnesses Roger and Sharon Knutson and guests just barely heard their vows while ten foot waves broke over the piers a block away below. Tender words were spoken by the couple to each other as they wound warm rings onto their cold fingers.

Mrs. Jeffrey Dickson, unreserved friend and local songstress, at her husband's side, sang bravely into the wind, "Let It Be Me." The couple in the shelter of the big rock held one another tightly until the last note was carried away.

As Mr. and Mrs. Belding were introduced by Magistrate Potter, the sound of muffled applause rose like the beating of chalk erasers. Everyone heartily greeted the newlyweds before speeding away to a warm place.

Later during a quiet dinner in the G.G. Room, where a pink and mauve floral center provided by Dickson complemented the burgundy and white table dressing, many well-wishers congratulated the couple.

The Beldings will continue to make their home in Charlevoix summers, both employees of Terry's Place. Warren also paints for Three Guys Painting.

Their winter employment is with Rod's of Bonita Springs, Fla. They will return to Naples after the true beginning of the new millennium, Jan. 1, 2001.

Church to have Cantata

Members of a volunteer choir and instrumental ensemble are preparing for Community Reformed Church of Charlevoix's Annual Christmas Cantata.

This year's program titled "The Wonder of Christmas. A Timeless Story," will be presented at 7 p.m. on Saturday and again at 6 p.m. on Sunday. Admission is free although a free-will offering will be received to defray expenses.

Under the direction of Cindy Mansen, choir director at Community

Reformed Church, the choir and instrumental ensemble is comprised of community members representing several area churches, who have been busy practicing since October. The program will feature local soloists Neil Britton, Laura Kenny and trio members Marlene Evans, Sally Bales and Kathy Martineck. Raph Rittenhouse, band director at Charlevoix High School, will direct as well as play in the instrumental ensemble. Members of the musical group include Laura Potter, Marcy Bennett, Lori Jayne Stargardt, Mary Beth Kur, Brenda Washburne, Mike Washburne, Kevin Evans, and piano accompanist, Theda Williams.

A drama set to the music will round out the program. Local residents Kathy Martineck and Chuck Britton served as drama director and set manager. Charlevoix resident Gary Miller and Mickey Grooters will read narration.

DECEMBER 2000

BEACONS

By REV. PHILIP SCHAIRBAUM
First Congregational UCC

The month of December is a time of "homecoming." People look forward to getting together with relatives whom they haven't seen for a while.

It is especially nice to have grown children come home to visit over the holidays. They seem to have a special homing instinct at this time of year, sometimes traveling great distances in order to be home for Christmas.

Robert Frost once said, "Home is where, when you go there, they have to take you in."

But beyond obligations to be hospitable, many of us are looking forward to receiving family and other visitors in our home and to being guests in other households in the coming weeks.

There is another kind of "homecoming," however, that is intended to happen over the holidays which is quite different than what we usually think about. It has to do with our coming home to God's gift to us in Christ Jesus, who after all is the real "reason for the season."

In the midst of all the hub-bub of December, the most important question is whether we will be receiving the Christ Child once again into our homes. Will we be greeting the One who knocks on the door of our hearts and is ready to greet us with His arms of love?

A wonderful poem catches the spirit of that kind of "homecoming." While it doesn't directly mention the Babe of Bethlehem, can we sense His presence as we read these lines?

"I'm coming home for Christmas, to that lovely place ago.
With a special magic splendor I have always treasured so.

I'm coming home for Christmas where love waits at the door,
And my heart is ever welcome to share happiness in store.

I'm coming home for Christmas and across the sparkling snow,
To hear stories, bells, and carols, and bask in candle glow...

I'm coming home for Christmas because God's love is there;
His open arms envelope me with blessings I may share."

I hope and pray for that kind of "homecoming" for everyone in Charlevoix this year!

YOUR HEALTH

What goes on at BASES Teen Center?

D. Scott Kelly 'Your Health'

If you have made a financial donation to support the Teen Center or are looking for a worthwhile organization for a contribution of any size, this article will be of interest to you. If you are concerned about your child's substance abuse, I strongly encourage you to read this article.

BASES Teen Center is a 5,000 square foot block building located on Lincoln Street in Charlevoix that is supported financially by local contributions from individuals and organizations to meet the $18,000 annual budget to maintain the facility. The building is open to the general public weekdays from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Our used book sale with its thousands of titles that have been donated by local community members are on sale at bargain prices ($1 for hard covers, 25 cents for paperbacks).

The Teen Center is open at no cost to young people between the ages of 11 and 18 after school and throughout the summer. The Teen Center offers pool tables, ping-pong, air hockey, basketball, darts, video games, computers, board games, chess, cards, foosball, concession counter and comfortable seating for socializing with an attendance of 30-35 teens each day after school.

We host a monthly dance on a Friday night for a $5 charge with an average attendance of 35-40 teens. A few weeks ago three teen-based Christian rock bands offered a live performance with a record-setting crowd of 113. Dances usually go from 7 - 11 p.m. On Jan. 12 and March 9, we will have "Sixth Graders Only Dances" that will go from 7 - 9 p.m. Supervision is always provided and parent volunteers are always welcome.

The Teen Center is also home to the Charlevoix County Music and Theatre Program coordinated by Andy Barger. In the back room at the Teen Center, Andy has a full recording studio where he offers music lessons to 8-10 students each week, recording opportunities, and a host of music related services at very reasonable prices.

We also have a special "scholarship fund" allowing donors to pay for music lessons for teens in need. Andy also serves as the full-time Teen Center DJ and coordinates a full light and sound show for every dance including karaoke and music by request. No music that has a parental advisory label or deemed inappropriate by staff is permitted.

On Wednesday afternoons from 5:15 - 6, we have two local volunteers, Kay Heise and Beth Allan, that coordinate a reading program called "Great Books" which introduces young people to outstanding, youth-oriented literature with an average attendance of 8-10 teens.

The Teen Center is also busy with substance abuse education groups for young people Sundays, Monday and Wednesday from 6 - 8 p.m. with attendance of 18-20 each night. On Tuesday and Thursdays from 6 - 7 p.m., the Center is host to a Young People's AA Meeting that is supervised by a BASES staff member. There is also a Parent Education and Support Group that meets each Sunday from 6 - 8 p.m. that offers parents much needed resources for coping with a young person's problematic substance use that usually draws 16-18 adults.

We also have a substance abuse intervention group for young people after school, separate from the after-school Teen Center crowd, on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday involving 8-10 teens. BASES also has several different substance abuse education classes offered on Saturdays for court-referred clients as well as substance abuse evaluations and outpatient counseling for young people and adults.

The Teen Center typically serves about 500 youths each year. The substance abuse programs serve over 500 additional people each year primarily from Charlevoix, Emmet and Antrim counties.

For those who continue to support our efforts, thank you from the parents who can finish their work with peace of mind due to our after-school program and a huge thank you from the parents and teens who have overcome their substance abuse problems.

For more information, please call 547-1144.

D. Scott Kelly is the executive director of Bay Area Substance Education Services, Inc. (BASES) located in Charlevoix at 208 W. Lincoln. He can be contacted by calling 547-1144.

Students awarded scholarships

Two Charlevoix High School graduates have turned their top performance at golf course summer jobs into four-year college scholarships.

Christopher Meredith and Jeffrey Popenhagen Jr., both summer employees of the Belvedere Golf Club, were recently awarded Belvedere Club scholarships. Chris, the son of Dale and Sandy Meredith, began studies at Central Michigan University. Jeff, who is the son of Jeffrey and Dawn Popenhagen, is a freshman at Olivet Nazarene University. Each student received a $1,000 a year scholarship.

This is the third year the Belvedere Club has awarded scholarships to its summer golf employees. Members of the Club established a scholarship fund through the Charlevoix County Community Foundation in 1995 to benefit golf course employees and children of employees. Since its inception, the Belvedere Club's fund has awarded $37,400 in scholarships — $17,200 this year alone.

Chris and Jeff join five other area students who have received Belvedere scholarships: Robert Sommerfeld and Dan Pardee, both students at Michigan State University; Keith Grunch, a student at Aquinas College; Todd Schaperkott, a Purdue University student; and Jeremy Rafacz, who attends Western Michigan University. Under the Scholarship Fund guidelines, the students will continue to receive assistance with educational costs until they complete their undergraduate degrees.

The Belvedere Club Scholarship Fund is one of 115 separate funds managed by the Charlevoix County Community Foundation. About one-quarter of the funds are designated for scholarships; others are earmarked to support certain areas of interest such as health improvement or the environment, certain non-profit organizations that serve the county, or specific towns within the county.

The Community Foundation was established in 1992 by a group of local citizens as a way to build a permanent reserve of charitable capital to meet this area's needs for years to come. Since it began, the Foundation's assets have grown to almost $7 million, and grants totaling more than $2.3 million have been distributed to help a number of local initiatives.

For more information about the Community Foundation or any of its funds and grantmaking activities, please call the foundation office at (231)536-2440.

Holly Daze event raises over $30,000

In the spirit of Christmas and giving, the community supported Charlevoix Area Hospital's annual Holly Daze event and helped raise more than $30,000 for the not-for-profit hospital.

Tuesday evening's live auction at the Charlevoix Country Club wrapped up the multi-function event, which included a silent auction that was concluded at the hospital on Nov. 25, among other activities.

More than $15,000 was raised at the live auction Nov. 28, and along with other Holly Daze proceeds, will go toward the hospital's planned expansion of the Emergency Department and the Obstetrics Department, said Bill Jackson, hospital president.

Nearly 200 people sipped champagne and ate hors d'oeuvres at the Charlevoix Country Club as they viewed the 40 items — including fully decorated, designer Christmas trees — that would be auctioned off later in the evening.

Each year, Charlevoix Area Hospital has one of its largest fund-raisers the week of Thanksgiving. Deemed Holly Daze, the event's main emphasis is the auctioning of Christmas trees that have been beautifully decorated and generously donated to the cause. This was the first year that the live auction was outside the hospital.

Funds raised totaled more than $30,000 for the entire event, topping all previous records.

Acting as auctioneer this year was Rebecca Haney, hospital board vice chair, and volunteers Lori Jodar helped model a necklace donated for the auction and Kris Thomas assisted with spotting bidders at the auction. Spontaneously adding his expertise to the evening, auctioneer John Murray stepped up to the microphone and entertained the audience while helping with the live auction.

The Holly Daze committee has already begun planning next year's Holly Daze, and they are always looking for volunteers to help. Contact Kathy Johnson at 547-8502 for more information.

Talk radio coming to Charlevoix

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Michigan Talk Radio will soon be broadcasting live from their Bridge Street location.

"This is ambitious and a little risky but it is absolutely the most exciting thing I've ever done. We're thrilled, especially to be here in Charlevoix; that is what makes it even more special. We have a lot of history here both as resorters and as people who have lived in the area," Dave Scott, co-owner of Michigan Talk Radio, said of both his personal excitement and that of his partner and brother Chuck Scott.

Scott said that it was the beauty of Charlevoix that drew them here, but when deciding to start the network they chose northern Michigan for its talented people.

"A lot of extremely talented people have decided to live here; Ron Jolly (WTCM-AM in Traverse City), Steve Monkiewicz (WLXT Lite 96 FM, Petoskey) and Bill Vogel ("The Captain," KHQ, Petoskey) to name a few. Rather than all of this talent moving to the big market we decided to move the big market to Charlevoix," Scott said.

After the Charlevoix Planning Commission met on Nov. 13 they recommended that the city council approve the plans that would allow the network to place a satellite dish on the rooftop of the old movie theater at 218 Bridge Street in Charlevoix's central business district. On Nov. 20 the brothers received council's approval and now all systems are go.

The dish which will be mounted on top of the building is 32 feet, 11 inches tall. Scott said that the dish will not be visible from Round Lake.

"I know it won't be an eyesore — that is the last thing we would want to do. We physically needed it to put this business here," he said.

Scott foresees the network's Charlevoix location as being a community asset.

"There are some real benefits to having a radio network here. From a tourist standpoint people all over the state will be listening to it. You can't help but hear the horn of the Acacia or the Beaver Islander while on the air. This is a great opportunity to promote the community," he said.

Bill Vogel, one of the network's personalities, said that the station will broadcast different radio personalities to correspond to different day-parts.

Scott explained the setup that will be in place once the network gets into its regular scheduling. Each all-talk session will deal with region specific issues that are relevant to the whole state, "regional news-talk around the clock."

Bob White will be doing morning news, more "heavy," information news as Scott put it. White will be followed by Dave Barber who will be on from 9 a.m. - noon. Scott said Barber will present a more provocative, engaging form of news-talk.

Bill Vogel will fill the afternoon. Scott described Vogel's program as similar to what he does at KHQ in the morning only without the music getting in the way.

Ron Jolly in conjunction with Sharon Ellis a news correspondent in Lansing will provide politically oriented news-talk beginning at 3 p.m.

From six to midnight Kevin Wall will talk sports. Wall formerly worked for a national network called One-on-One Sports.

During a tour of the network's facility executive producer of programming Shawn Peterson revealed the advanced technology the network plans to employ. Rather than using bulky, space consuming equipment the network will be run through a computer system that is both cost and space efficient.

Michigan Talk Radio will offer a service that is Michigan specific, focusing in just on Michigan and broadcasting only on radio stations around Michigan. Scott said that every day the network adds more stations to their lineup.

On Dec. 20 five years of planning will finally materialize when Michigan Talk Radio makes its debut. Listeners can tune into 750 AM or 1110 AM to hear the first voices of the network transmitted over the airwaves.

Disclosure of student information discussed

They distinguish between name, picture, field of study, etc. They go on to say that address and phone numbers are optional. I don't think it is optional."

Director of Policy at the Michigan Association of School Boards (MASB) Bill Scharffe said that each district is allowed to define directory information for themselves and that many districts have grappled with whether or not to include in that definition, restrictions on addresses and phone numbers.

Scharffe offered the example of "internal use." He described a school district that has, always compiled a list of students phone numbers and addresses in an effort to help parents communicate with one another. If addresses and phone numbers are not included as "directory information" available to the public, these guides would no longer be permissible without the consent of each parent included.

A memo circulated by Roxanne Buehler, ERIN Program Manager for the MASB, states that the MASB has made revisions to the Student Records and Directory Information Policy.

Sturock explained the circumstances that spurred the changes in the Charlevoix school district, the MASB and in districts across the State of Michigan.

He said that a FOIA (Freedom of Information Act) request was submitted to numerous Michigan school districts by a marketing firm asking for a substantial amount of directory information concerning high school students. He also said that Charlevoix High School denied this request as the information seemed to violate the students' privacy rights.

After receiving the denial, the individual who submitted the request let the school district know that what he was looking for was a list of "directory" information about seniors. He had started a new business and wanted to send them information.

According to Scharffe, due to the large volume of calls received by the MASB concerning this matter they sent an advisory to Michigan school districts warning them that if they do not want to be subject to FOIA requests such as these, they will need to change their definition of directory information.

Scharffe said that the MASB suggested to districts that they keep their definition of directory information rather sparse. Encouraging them not to include parents' and students' addresses and phone numbers. If they include this information, they have to release it to the public.

In general, a school district's information disclosure requirements are based on an act passed by Congress in 1974 called the Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act (FERPA) also known as the Buckley Amendment. Since Buckley's 1974 inception, Congress has amended the act seven times.

According to Phillips, included in the list of directory information that a school can disclose under the Buckley Amendment are the student's: name, address, telephone, date and place of birth, major course of study, officially recognized activities and sports, weight and height of athletes, dates of attendance, degrees awarded and awards received and the most recent previous education agency attended.

And, Buckley itself does not forbid the release of any information; the federal government cannot tell a state what student information can or cannot be released, she said.

However, some argue that federal enforcement of the Buckley Amendment is done by threatening to discontinue federal funding if an educational institution does not comply. Non-compliance would be a school that releases student information.

"The school is trying to comply with the requirements for keeping federal funding and the feds will pull your funding if they think you are not in compliance," Phillips said.

According to Sturock, in the current situation the proposed changes do not reflect Buckley compliance efforts; the school district met these requirements with the old policy.

"The changes are more geared toward privacy issues. We still meet the (Buckley Amendment) requirements. We are just trying to protect our people," Sturock said.

CMU Beaver Island station studying lake bass

Where have all the smallmouth bass gone?

Biologists at Central Michigan University are seeking explanations for the declining populations of smallmouth bass near Beaver Island. Their research, funded by a grant from the Michigan Department of Natural Resources, may affect national policies on wildlife and fishing in the Great Lakes region.

"This is a question for us to study carefully and cautiously," said biologist James Gillingham, director of CMU's Biological Station on Beaver Island. "Whenever you approach a problem, you want to be certain you have all the facts and that you are making assumptions or conclusions that can be supported. That's what our job is, to determine what factors may be having an impact."

Some studies have placed blame on double crested cormorants for the decline in smallmouth bass. Although never historically abundant in Michigan and almost extinct from the Great Lakes because of the impact of chemicals such as PCBs and dioxins, cormorants have recently made a resurgence. Researchers estimate that about 20,000 cormorants nest from April through October on small uninhabited islands surrounding Beaver Island in upper Lake Michigan.

Part of CMU's research centers on the bird's eating habits. CMU biologists are not certain the decline is due to the cormorants, or if it may be impacted by overfishing, changes in ecology or some unrelated environmental impact that has yet to be discovered.

"The question is, 'When large numbers of birds congregate for breeding, does this incidental predation have a significant impact on local fish populations?'" said Douglas Peterson, CMU fisheries biologist. "We are not talking about catastrophic impacts to fisheries across the entire Great Lakes, only the local fishery around Beaver Island."

Every study ever conducted on Great Lakes cormorant diets shows that the birds prey mostly on alewife, a small, non-game species that invaded the Great Lakes through the St. Lawrence Seaway in the mid-1900s he said. The abundance of alewife is believed to be the cause of the cormorant population growth as it provided a new and abundant food source.

"Consequently, predation on smallmouth is generally viewed by biologists as incidental," said Peterson. "Although debatable, there is no question that, ultimately, the birds have merely responded to the profound ecological changes that humans have set in motion."

Peterson said previous research has not been able to determine a conclusive link between cormorant population increases and decreases in smallmouth bass.

"There may be other potential ecological causes for the smallmouth decline," said Peterson. "There may be other exotic invaders affecting the ecology of the area. We also don't know yet how many people are fishing and what impact that has had on recent population trends."

To aid spawning of smallmouth bass, the fishing season is being delayed a month to July 1, 2001, for the areas near Beaver, Hog, Garden and High islands. Cormorants arrive on the Great Lakes in April and have two or three chicks in nests by May. They stay through October but migrate south after that.

The results of this research may impact the future of cormorant protection and management within the United States borders.

A cormorant management plan is being written by the United States Forest and Wildlife Service to address perceived problems with the birds' recovery. Public hearings by the United States Fish and Wildlife Service last winter carried support for controlling cormorants.

'Tie One On for Safety' with Charlevoix police

The Charlevoix City Police Department Leads Local Holiday Effort to Stop Drunk Driving with MADD's "Tie One On For Safety" Holiday Campaign.

MADD red ribbon campaign aims to save lives by changing the meaning of "tie one on."

As part of the annual red ribbon anti-drunk driving holiday campaign the Charlevoix City Police Department will team up with Mothers Against Drunk Driving (MADD) to "Tie One On For Safety."

The six-week (Nov. 20 - Jan. 1) safe and sober driving promotion asks motorists to tie a MADD ribbon to a visible place on their vehicles as a symbol of their commitment to drive safely and soberly.

This year the seasonal promotion will put an additional special emphasis on helping protect children from two of the leading risks they face — Drunk drivers and drivers who fail to buckle up children in their vehicles.

"Typically we think of holiday drinking and driving as something that only affects adults, but children are especially at risk too. The more alcohol an adult consumes, the more likely it is that their child passenger will not be buckled up - and then driving under the influence further endangers that child," said Dennis Halverson, Charlevoix chief of police.

MADD recognizes that safety belts are an important line of defense against drunk driving - especially for children.

Nearly 66 percent of those children killed in alcohol-related crashes are passengers riding with an impaired driver, rather than victims of impaired drivers who crash into them, according to a study reported this year by the Centers for Disease Control.

Seat belts increase the chance of surviving a crash by nearly 45 percent. Child safety seats (properly installed) reduce the risk of death by 71 percent for infants and 54 percent for toddlers. Festivities and partying occasions put more drinking drivers on the road, resulting in the holidays being traditionally one of the deadliest times for drunk driving crashes.

"This time of year we take on alcohol-impaired driving two ways: We promote sober driving as a goodwill effort with the potentially life-saving "Tie One On For Safety" campaign. We hope alcohol-impaired drivers won't get behind the wheel, but if they do, they'll be seeing our patrol car's red flashing lights instead of the red ribbons on the mirror/antenna," Halverson said.

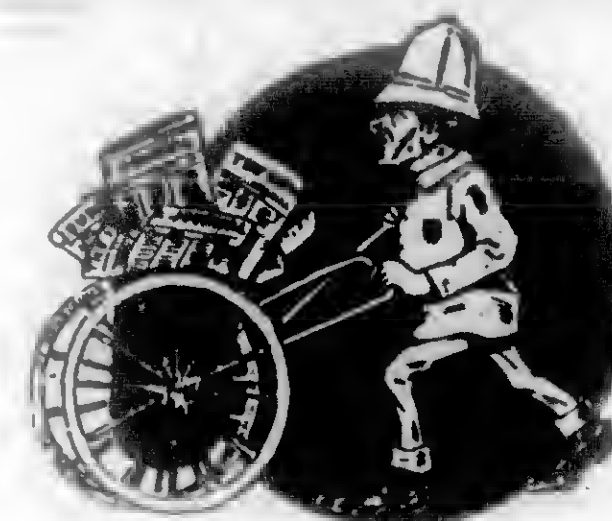

MADD started the traffic safety promotion 15 years ago in an effort to stop the higher incidence of alcohol-related traffic crashes.

The public is invited to stop by the Charlevoix City Police Department at 210 State Street, City Hall, Charlevoix and pick up a free red ribbon. Ribbons are also available at the City Clerk's office in City Hall.

Alcohol remains a preventable factor in traffic crashes during the holidays as indicated in Michigan in 1999: Thanksgiving, 9 of 22 traffic fatalities involved alcohol (40.9 percent); Christmas, 5 of 16 traffic fatalities involved alcohol (31.2 percent); and New Year's, 12 of the 22 traffic fatalities (54.5 percent) involvement rate than the annual average of 39 percent (541 of the total 1,386 crash deaths involved alcohol).

For more information on how to become involved in the local "Tie One On For Safety" campaign or to get a ribbon, contact the Charlevoix City Police Department at 547-3258, or the MADD, Michigan state office at (517) 631-MADD.

Chris Krajewski, Program Director for the Women's Resource Center's Domestic Abuse/Families First Programs recently received the 2000 Apple Blossom Award from the Michigan Coalition Against Domestic and Sexual Violence. The coalition annually honors a person who reflects a commitment to grassroots leadership and who makes significant contributions to the goal of ending violence against women on a day-to-day basis.

Krajewski has spent 16 years working to end domestic violence and sexual violence. She has been employed at the Women's Resource Center since May 1987, and prior to that she worked in a shelter program in Wisconsin. The Women's Resource Center's Domestic Abuse program provides numerous services for women and families within the center's five-county service area.

The Women's Resource Center is a nonprofit agency with offices in Cheboygan, Gaylord, Mancelona and Petoskey. Staff and programs serve residents through Antrim, Charlevoix, Cheboygan, Emmet and Otsego counties.

In a form nominating Krajewski for the state honor, staff wrote that Krajewski's strengths include her commitment and loyalty to positively impacting, empowering and educating everyone that comes in contact with her or the program. She works locally with the criminal justice system, medical community, educational system and the community at large.

Krajewski is a member of the Business and Professional Women and has been a past board member of the Michigan Coalition against Domestic and Sexual Violence. She was one of the service providers who worked on the statewide model policies for police training, and is often called on as an expert witness for domestic violence cases throughout northern Michigan.

Under her leadership, the Women's Resource Center developed and wrote a "Handbook on Domestic Violence" that was chosen as one of two to be duplicated for use by programs throughout the state.

Krajewski also helped organize domestic violence task forces in each of the five counties served by the Women's Resource Center.

Survivors, staff, co-workers and community members describe Krajewski as someone who "works tirelessly to educate people about the issue of violence."

"She reminds us all by her words and actions that all people are equal and have a right to a safe environment — and that all of us are responsible to ensure that," her co-workers wrote in the nomination form for the state award.

For information about any of the Women's Resource Center services, contact the Cheboygan office at (231) 627-2380, the Gaylord office at (517) 731-0918, the Mancelona office at (231) 587-8891 or the Petoskey office at (231) 347-0067.

Property's future in question

LAND

wonderful assets to preserve. We ask that the city put a hold on the sale until alternatives can be considered."

Through the conservancy and community members Beemon has connected a trail extension as this alternative.

Beemon visited the school board, appealing to them to help in protecting the trail. It is currently used as a cross country trail by high school runners. She also asked that the board try to envision a future trail from the city land location out to the site of the new high school.

She has spoken with members of the Snowmobile Club, who have used the trail for some time and with John Laney of Southdown Inc., the company who currently owns the Medusa Spur that divides the site.

Beemon recently approached city council members and Mayor Alvin "Butch" Russell, asking them to slow the pace at which they make this choice.

City Manager Mike Weisner said that council has many projects on its plate right now and has not yet made a definitive decision as to what direction to take with the land.

"It's really premature; the city hasn't decided whether it will sell it or not," Weisner said.

To each of these clubs, organizations and individuals, Beemon has described a comprehensive trail extension that would access the site of the new high school, Fishermen's Island and downtown Charlevoix.

According to Russell the preliminary appraisal of the land, initiated around the time that the petition was circulated, was recently completed. The city has since ordered a second appraisal that will calculate the worth of the timber on the land. This second appraisal is still underway.

"From a quick look at the site there is some pretty good timber value there. Council asked for an appraisal of the timber to see how much it is worth," Weisner said.

City treasurer Richard Brandt said that the city would like to keep the Coast Guard in Charlevoix and the provision of low cost housing has been an issue threatening Charlevoix's loss of the Coast Guard. This land piece could then provide the property what may eventually be "affordable" housing.

According to Brandt there are "no real restrictions on what it could be."

BASKETBALL

Team youthful, but experienced

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

After a successful season last year, Keith Haske, Charlevoix varsity boys' basketball coach, will face this season with a very young group of players.

Out of the 12 players on the varsity team, nine of them are juniors.

However, Haske said while his team may be young, they do have some experience. Four of his players are returning from last year.

They are: senior Jeremiah Teuscher, senior Doug Rieck, junior Patrick Gowell and junior Scott Parrish. Additionally, Haske will have junior Jim Shepherd, who was pulled up to the varsity team from the junior varsity team during last year's playoffs.

With this experience, the team's youth is meaningless for Haske.

"I think we are going to be able to score a lot. I think our kids have an understanding of the game; they have a real basketball mentality," Haske said.

Another plus for the team is the abilities of its main big guys: 6 foot, 4 inch junior Robert Boss and 6 foot, 6 inch Parrish.

Haske said Boss is a 215 pound center who will probably play well inside and Parrish is one of the best players on the team, if not the best player Charlevoix has had in years. Parrish has the ability to run with the ball, score and is a good defensive player.

"He just has a lot of skills," Haske said.

Added to this is the fine skills other players are showing in practice.

"I think we are going to be able to score a lot."

Keith Haske,
Varsity basketball coach

According to Haske, junior Shawn McDonough and junior Dennis Avery have been doing an excellent job in practice and Leitner will be returning to the team after taking a year off. Haske is also working on some improvements to the playing abilities of junior Keith Daly and junior Dale Williams — who has never played on an organized team before.

Team captains for this year are: Teuscher, Parrish and Gowell.

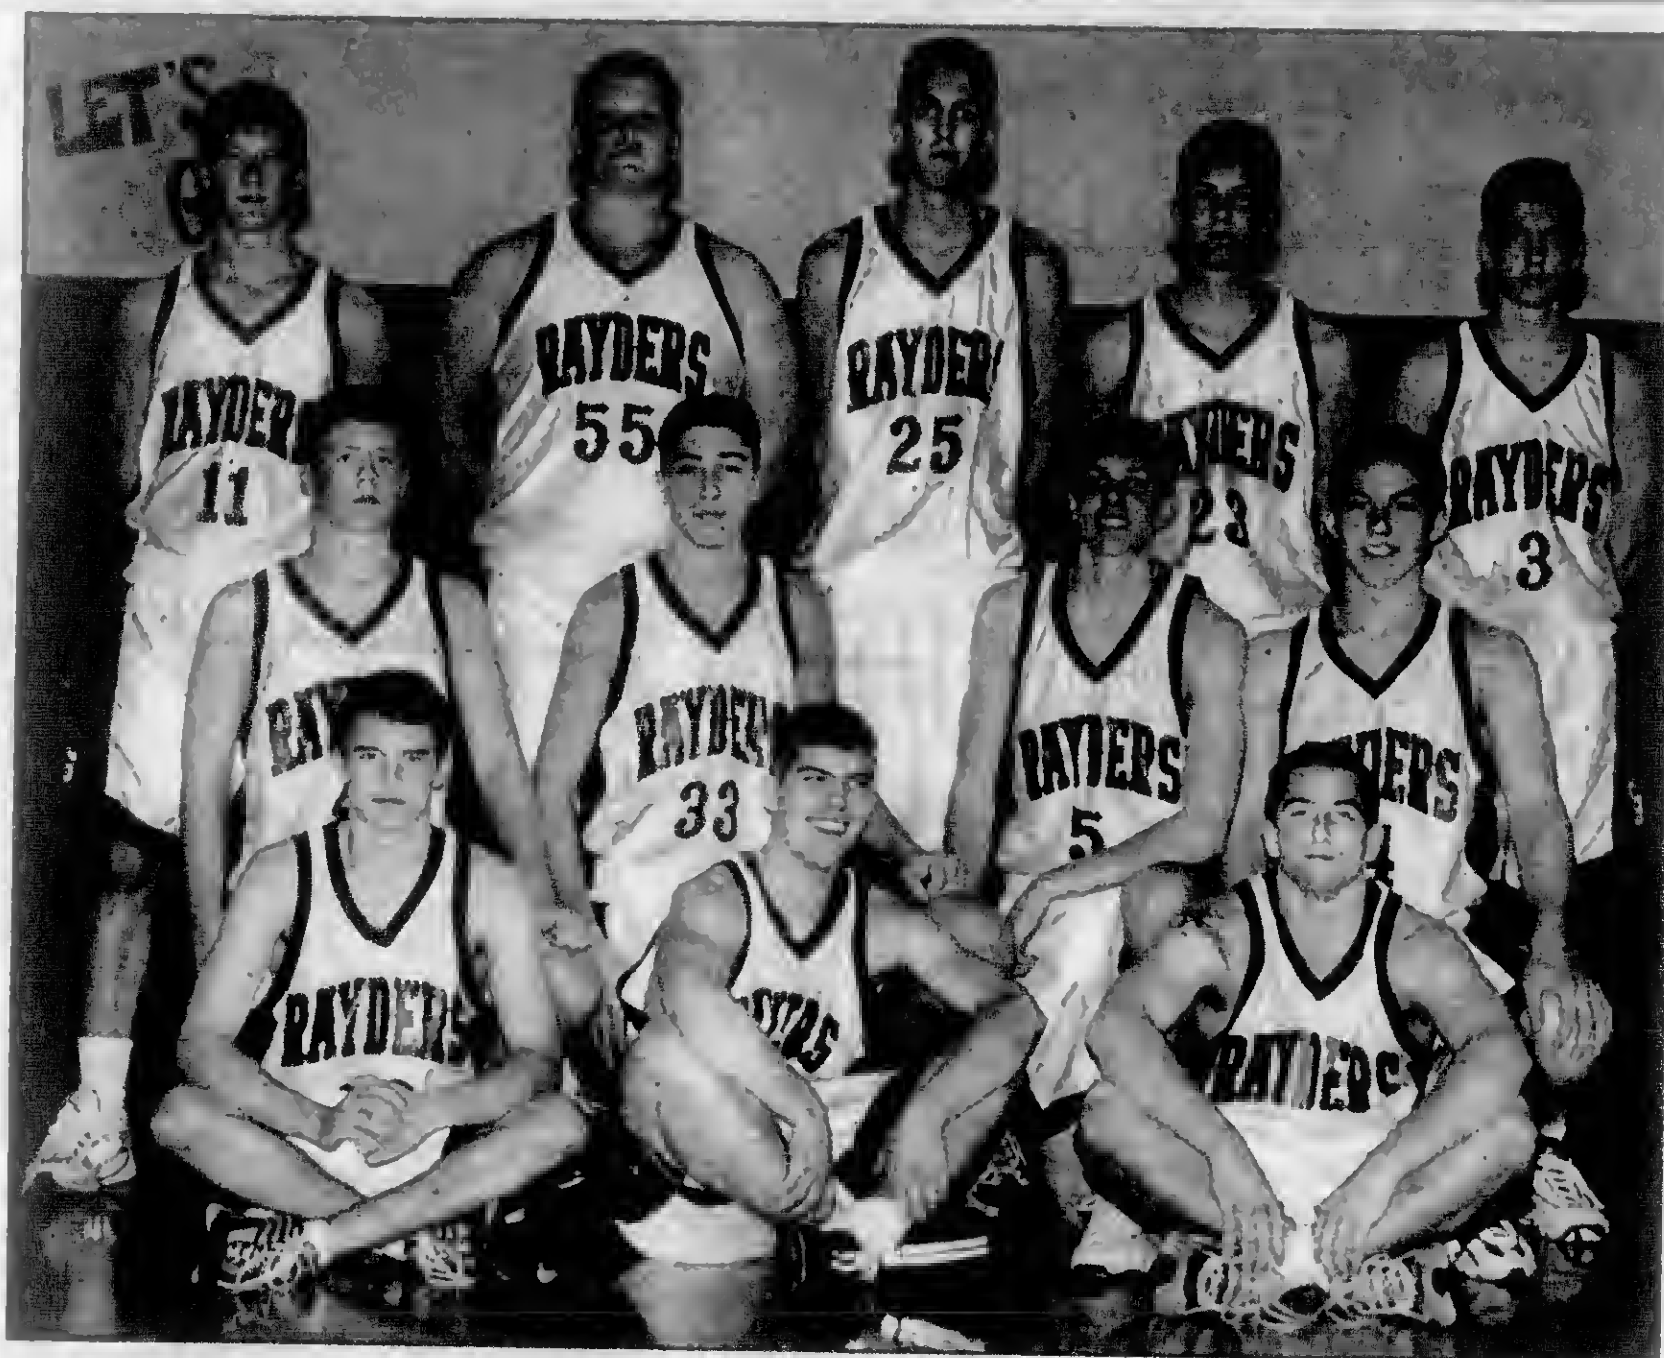

The team does have some areas that need a little fine tuning; one of those are improving their mental defensive skills.

"I'm talking to them a lot about toughness. Young kids tend to worry about mistakes, but they don't have that luxury in basketball. If I turn the ball over, I can't worry about that, I have to immediately play defense," Haske said.

Overall, Haske said this is the team's biggest challenge, but this should pass over the course of the season.

As far as challenges from other teams, Haske said this season should be a dogfight between Charlevoix, Kalkaska, Traverse City St. Francis and Boyne City.

The varsity and junior varsity teams had their first game Dec. 5 against Petoskey. They will face Suttons Bay in an away game at 6 p.m. Thursday. Their first home game will be at 6 p.m. Dec. 12 against Cheboygan.

VOLLEYBALL

Low turnover will make a strong team

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

Thanks to low turnover last year, the Charlevoix varsity volleyball team is expecting a successful season. "We only lost two starters last year and have a strong junior class," Coach Carolyn Loper said.

There are five seniors on this year's team. They are: Molly Arnold, Kelly Dreyer, Michelle Martin, Lisa Miller and Amber Parsons.

"All of the players are right at about the same level of play," Loper added.

Returning setters will be Dreyer and Parsons. Loper also expects good play out of junior Kate Madison, juniors Krista and Katie Swenor and junior Jenny Miller.

In addition to this experience, Loper also has some good height among the girls. Height gives the players a psychological and physical advantage over their opponents.

"With more height on top of the ball, the better your defense is going to be," she said.

Loper also said she has been very happy with the girls' performances in practices.

"The girls want to do well this year and they have a real good attitude. With the girls' basketball team doing real well, the girls have finally gotten a taste of what it is to be a winner and want to carry that to volleyball," Loper said.

So far, the biggest challenge Loper has faced this year is teaching the girls to be strategic and sly with their skills.

"When you get to this level, you have to sort of teach them to be sneaky. There is a lot more strategy involved," she said.

As far as challenges from the other schools, Loper said she expects them all to be tough.

"This year, I don't think any of the conference schools have lost any players," Loper said.

Their first home game will be against Harbor Springs at 6 p.m. Dec. 18.

SKIING

Ski team prepares for a successful season

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

While there may not be enough snow on the ground, the Charlevoix ski team is already preparing for the season.

"We are doing a lot of running, stretches, sprints, agility drills and weight lifting," said Coach Sue Miller. But, because they are not on the hills yet, Miller said it is tough to determine who her stars will be.

In the meantime, she said she is impressed with the team's attitude.

"They are very positive. They are very team oriented and they get along real well," Miller said. "I'm not really nervous (about the season) because the kids are really positive. They really seem to enjoy skiing."

Miller added a lot of her skiers this year have some type of skiing ability from their past experiences and she has two returners that will bring a strong background to the team. They are Lexi Wilson and Roscoe Serrels.

Miller said Wilson is very consistent in her skiing.

"She seems like she is a go-getter that is willing to put the full effort forward," Miller said.

Serrels also returns with his strong skiing ability for the team. Miller said he helped last year's boys team go to the state finals with his effort.

"He just never quits," Miller said. "I am very pleased with (Serrels). He will be a big asset to the team this year."

Additionally, Miller will have three skiers who have experience from racing in the United States Skiing Association. They are York Smith, Taylor Fisher and Chad Johnson.

"They bring a lot of experience and a lot of athletic ability to the team," Miller said.

To add a little more variety to the team, Miller will also have German exchange students Cheng Fei and Claas Oberbeck skiing for the Rayders.

While they do not have any experience racing with a team, the German duo bring their experience skiing in the Alps to the Charlevoix team.

While Miller said it is too early to really predict how well the team will do this year, she did say she expects the team to do pretty well in the regional.

She added her only disappointment this year is Charlevoix does not have a girls' team due to low turnout. Therefore, Wilson and Annakate Trubilowicz will be racing on the boys' team.

The Rayders first race will be a scrimmage at 4:30 p.m. on Jan. 4 at Boyne Mountain. The first season race will be at 10 a.m. on Jan. 9 at Boyne Highlands for the Petoskey Invitational.

WRESTLING

Wrestlers continue rebuilding process

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

Due to low numbers and young participants, Charlevoix wrestling coach Gary Probert is calling this year's season a continuation of last year's "rebuilding process."

Currently, Probert has 12 wrestlers, but needs 14 to have a full team.

"We will be giving up points as a team because not every weight class is covered. But, individually, these kids should do well," Probert said. He added there is still time for more students to join the team.

"It is not a real glamorous sport. It takes a different breed to do this," he said.

Probert only has three seniors on the team. They are Ryan Novotny, Mike Groseberg and Jeff Buckner.

Novotny is a 160 pound fourth year wrestler, who has also participated in eighth grade wrestling. He was the captain last year, but caught mono halfway through the season.

"(Novotny) is determined to do very well this year and he has a very strong potential to do well. He will also be a very good leader," Probert said.

Groseberg is a 140 pound first year wrestler. While he has never wrestled before, Probert said he has a lot of potential and is a good leader.

At 160 pounds, Buckner is also a first year wrestler. "He hasn't participated in wrestling ever, but he "...Individually, these kids should do well."

Gary Probert,
Charlevoix wrestling coach should do well for his first and final year of wrestling," Probert said. He added Buckner catches on very well.

Probert also has five juniors on the team. They are: Josh Chamberlain, Tim Daining, Skip Torres, Bo Moore and Chris Loper.

Chamberlain is a 115 pound third year wrestler. According to Probert, he has a very strong chance of doing very well this year.

"He has worked hard for three years and is looking very good this year," Probert said.

Between elementary school and middle school, Daining has participated in four years of wrestling. A transfer from Elk Rapids this year, he will be bringing his experience to the Rayders at 135 pounds.

Torres is a second year wrestler who weighs 168 pounds. Because he did not wrestle during his sophomore year, Probert said Torres will have to relearn a few things, but will be a great asset to the team.

Moore is also a second year wrestler. He also participated in middle school wrestling for three years.

While he was captain last year, Moore suffered a shoulder injury at the end

Another returning captain is Loper, who is a third year wrestler. He also participated at the middle school level for three years.

An exciting point for Loper this year will be if he gets 59 wins, he will become only the second person to get 100 wins in their high school career at Charlevoix. He weighs 215 pounds. Adding to Probert's list are three sophomores. They are: Chris Lahr, Peter Gorkiewicz and Danny Hedricks.

Lahr is a second year wrestler, with one year of middle school wrestling. At 174 pounds, he improved a lot the end of last year and is showing signs of further improvement this year, Probert said.

Gorkiewicz is a new wrestler. According to Probert he is showing some great potential.

Hedricks is a second year wrestler, who weighs 92 pounds. He is also expected to do well this year.

Rounding out the team is freshman Brett Probert. Brett, who weighs 145 pounds, participated in freestyle wrestling when he was younger for six years. Probert said Brett is a very experienced wrestler who should do exceptionally well this year.

Students speak out on drugs, drinking

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Approximately 25 Charlevoix High School seniors attended Monday night's school board meeting to show the board their intolerance of drugs in school and their mentorship plan to combat the issue.

According to Superintendent of Charlevoix Public Schools, John Sturock, there has been an increase in marijuana and alcohol use that has begun to filter into the school. At Monday's meeting the board reacted to this reality in the form of policy, approving the inclusion of a more stringent locker search policy.

However, the students' plan was one of less policy, less administration and greater student-to-student interaction.

"We plan to set an example ourselves and by talk to the underclassmen to get the message across that students can do what they want on their free time, but at school it's (drug use) not going to happen anymore," senior class president Chris Smith said to the board.

Prior to the board meeting, the entire senior class met on Dec. 7 and discussed the drug issue effecting the school. Seniors said they were able to discuss the problem without restraint as the meeting was students only, no faculty members attended.

Those who attended Monday's meeting said that on Dec. 7 they utilized a student-to-student approach that was very effective.

Students thanked high school principal Gary Grundman for allowing the meeting to take place.

Students to have first Charlevoix Christmas

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

During this time of year many people look forward to going home for the holidays — but this season two Charlevoix High School exchange students from Germany will be spending Christmas with their "host families" in Charlevoix.

On Aug. 8, Claas Oberbeck, 16, of Hamburg, Germany made his debut in Charlevoix. Since August, Oberbeck has lived with Richard Hodgson and his wife Lori Lesser-Hodgson.

From what Oberbeck had to say about his local excursions it seems that over the last six months he has transformed into the average Charlevoix teen.

"I think Charlevoix is a great town. A town with almost everything you would want to do. There is the lake, I enjoy sailing, and in the winter, there is a ski hill close and lots of snow. I love snow," Oberbeck said.

While he may enjoy the same recreation as local teens, Oberbeck is not entirely typical. He will be graduating from Charlevoix High School in June, ahead of most 16-year-old students.

"The school system here is very different; the comparison is neither good or bad, it's just very different. There are positive aspects to both systems (German and American.) I really like school here," Oberbeck said.

Mmmm....Mmmm....good!

The fun of cutting a tree for your home

Julie Musilek
'Stepping out'

Christmas trees add an inexplicable warmth to a home during the holiday season. The shine of the lights, the scent of fresh pine in the house and coming together to decorate its needled branches all add an element of Christmas cheer.

I have spent Christmas in Charlevoix for many years and have always said, "This year I'm going to do Christmas northern Michigan style; I'll cut my own tree." And every year I've wimped out at the last minute.

Well, this year after researching the best method to keep the needles off the floor and on the tree, I realized freshness is the key and there is no other way to ensure a fresh cut than to bring it down yourself.

So, I headed over to Brooks Hill Tree Farm, in Hayes Township, where I trudged through snow blanketed hills en route to my Year 2000 tree, reviewing in my head the dimensions of the space in the living room where it will be showcased, as I walked.

Then all my research started to pull me in a whole new direction, and I asked myself, "what about the trees?" I'm surrounded by beautiful fluffy white snow that sits piled up on the branches of Blue Spruce and Scotch Pines. The scenery was breathtaking.

So there I was, armed with a hand saw ready to make one of these natural beauties my December centerpiece, knowing the 6-to-7-foot guys and gals have been growing for 11 years.

Call me green, but after knowing that piece of towering timber had been growing for almost half of my life-span, I questioned, "who am I to say time's up?"

I know the counter argument to my irrational thought process, "these trees are grown for this purpose." Unlike the scenario that occurred a couple years back when a thief came and stole the perfect 6-foot-tall blue spruce from our front yard to make his/her holiday bright and shiny. Can you believe it. The whole family gathered around my landscaping on Christmas Day; the sheer hypocrisy of it.

Perhaps it was the cold, cheek chafing air that brought realistic thoughts back during my afternoon jaunt at Brooks Farm, but I was able to spot the perfect potted spruce tree. I'll return for it in the spring, as this guy was just right to replace the stolen one. These plantable pines double as a temporary Christmas tree and then landscaping. However, the move from outdoors to indoors may be a shock on the tree's system.

That's right; I wimped out again. Rather than making the cut, I headed over to Marvin's Gardens and bought a pre-cut spruce. I rationalized my consumerist actions by making a post-holiday green decision.

This year I'll be recycling my needled Noel friend. As a bit of a country bumpkin, I plan to toss the tree into the backyard and to put some bread and suet in its branches for the birds.

Is it necessary to demolish building?

EDITORIAL

While it may be tradition in Charlevoix to try and create a scenic view of Round Lake in the downtown area, the idea of tearing down the Wharfside building is still questionable.

The plan to eventually remove many of the buildings on the east side of Bridge Street in the downtown area is almost as old as the city of Charlevoix. One of the biggest pieces to this plan for quite a while has been the purchase and eventual demolition of the Wharfside building — located right next to the band shell in East Park.

But, modern thinking may make this plan a waste of money and a detriment to the city.

City officials have mentioned that in addition to helping fulfill the city's grand plan to create a scenic view of Round Lake, the purchase and demolition of the Wharfside building would help the city achieve funding for its proposed East Park and city marina improvements.

The problem is, these improvements are only proposed at this time and have not really had a public hearing. The marina and park improvements include a massive expansion of the current marina, that already generated some negative comments in the form of letters to the editor of this newspaper when it was first proposed, indicating there are at least a few people opposed to the plan.

This proposal has a lot of work before it becomes a reality. So, wouldn't it be a little premature to purchase and demolish the Wharfside when we really do not know if the marina and park improvements will happen?

Furthermore, city officials say they have always wanted to buy — in the form of a grant — and demolish the Wharfside building to create a scenic view of Round Lake.

Let's look at this from a practical standpoint.

What the city is wanting to do is buy a currently occupied building in the downtown business district, remove the occupants and demolish the building — which probably has historic significance.

This will create less room for business in the business district, thereby creating sprawl. There are many people in this area very concerned about sprawl; just look at the debate surrounding the new school on Marion Center Road. Now the city wants to create sprawl for a scenic view?

Less businesses in the downtown district also mean less jobs for residents and fewer shops for visitors to spend their money at. So, the city will have a really nice park, but fewer places for locals to make a living at.

On its face, the plan to purchase and demolish the Wharfside building just seems silly. The loss of a building in the downtown district means less space for business, less space for jobs and fewer places for visitors to spend money.

The city needs to come up with a solid plan to address these problems before spending money on this project.

One year after starting a new life in Charlevoix

Jeremy McBain

'Just a thought'

One year.

A lot happens in one year and as of today, I will have been at the Charlevoix Courier for one year. In one year, I went from living in metro Detroit and working as a reporter at a weekly newspaper to living in northern Michigan and working as the editor of a weekly newspaper.

My days usually were spent driving on highly congested roadways to various interviews, running back to the office and quickly writing up several stories in time for deadline. Now, my days are spent driving on snow-covered low-traffic roads to the office, writing up a variety of stories and editorials, editing all editorial copy and helping create a weekly community newspaper.

A year ago, if there was a complaint about a story I wrote, my editors had to deal with the call. Now, if there is a complaint about anything, I have to deal with it.

It may not seem like much of a change, but in the journalism world it is like going from day to night. While changes can be stressful, this is one I am glad I did.

But, change always leaves questions to be answered. Perhaps the most asked of me is, "Why did you come up here?" The answer: Because of a young woman's philosophy on life.

This young woman once told me the most important thing in life is to live. Seize the day, or — as it is known in Latin — carpe diem, was basically what she was saying.

It's a simple enough suggestion, one that we have all heard at least once in our lives. Many of us give it at least a thought when we hear it, then continue on about our day and give the suggestion only slight thought in the future.

I have heard many people say many times how they would like to visit Europe, take singing lessons, write a book or even redecorate their homes. But, something always gets in the way of these plans.

They have bills to pay, they have to work overtime at the office or there is something good on television tonight. So, they forget their dreams and some let the fictitious dreams of television characters replace them.

But, this young woman didn't want to let these things bog her down. She wanted to taste everything life had to offer her and wanted to experience it all.

However, this young woman had cancer. She was my cousin, Stacie McBain, and she died about a year ago at the age of 22, after six years of struggle with this disease.

While a majority of her life was filled with doctors, tests, chemotherapy and sickness, she cherished the other parts.

She had a loving family and a wonderful fiancé, she enjoyed the beauty of butterflies and angels and had an infectious laugh. No matter how bad she felt, you could always see hope for a cure and a "normal life" in her eyes.

Stacie truly seized the day as much as she could.

I took her suggestions to enjoy life to heart. Soon after she died, I jumped at an opportunity to move to northern Michigan and to become a newspaper editor — both things I always wanted to do, but thought I had to be much older to accomplish.

So here I am, 25 years old and a newspaper editor, living in beautiful northern Michigan and enjoying every moment of my life. I strive to taste it all and cherish the memories I make in the process, both the good and the bad.

I will always remember Stacie's lesson to me and am further reminded of it every time I see a field filled with fluttering butterflies or an angel on a Christmas tree.

So, what does the future hold for me? I'm not sure, but I am definitely going to have fun finding out. Carpe diem.

Help the hospital

Editor:

I am being driven by my conscience to write this letter. I had two very disappointing experiences with the Charlevoix Area Hospital Emergency room involving one of my daughters. I will not go into detail; suffice it to say that one incident was followed by an in-patient stay at Northern Michigan Hospital and the other with some serious testing with a neurologist. These only occurred after seeing our regular pediatrician.

I could just complain about the situation and/or avoid it by going to Northern Michigan Hospital for any medical needs. However, if I am not part of the solution, I am part of the problem. As a parent with five children, I must set an example of change through progress, not ignorance.

My employer has a "matching funds" charitable contribution program in place. If I donate money to the Charlevoix Area Hospital emergency room and birthing room (no I won't need that anymore!) fund-raising drive, my employer will match this amount, doubling my contribution. This means I am putting my money and the community's money to work on a serious situation. While I have no control over how my money will be earmarked, I have faith that the "power" will be used wisely.

ers that be" will use their best judgment and address the problems at hand.

I believe this hospital has great potential and the community desperately needs an emergency room expansion that is backed up with trained emergency doctors. I would ask that everyone consider the ramifications of continuing with a hospital that is in need of growth or, worse, no hospital at all.

Please help the hospital grow and improve by giving to the Charlevoix Area Hospital fund-raiser. I am sure the information can be obtained on where these funds are to be directed by calling the hospital.

Get a weather radio

Editor:
Whenever the National Weather Service issues a tornado, severe thunderstorm, blizzard or other local hazard alert, you can hear about it immediately with a NOAA Weather Radio. This holiday season, I encourage everyone to consider giving a potentially life-saving gift: a NOAA Weather Radio.

The National Weather Service in Gaylord currently operates four NOAA Weather Radio transmitters in northern Michigan. These radio transmitters are based out of Gaylord, Traverse City, Alpena and Sault Ste.

Marie and each covers approximately a 30 to 50 mile radius.

We broadcast northern Michigan forecasts and routine weather information 24 hours a day, every day of the year and interrupt this programming during times of severe weather. Most NOAA Weather Radios will also sound an alarm when warnings are issued for your area, even if the receiver is not playing. This potentially life-saving feature is unique to weather radios. There's no better way to receive warning information at crucial times when your television or radio are turned off or you are asleep in bed.

Those who already own a "scanner" or an older weather radio, may wish to consider a purchase of a new radio for themselves this holiday season. The new generation of NOAA Weather Radio receivers have a special feature called Specific Area Message Encoding or SAME. All official watches and warnings broadcast by the NWS are preceded by unique digital audio codes that identify the county or counties being warned and type of warning. With a SAME NOAA Weather Radio you can program your radio to alert you to warnings for specific counties, so you won't be bothered by warnings that will not impact your area.

NOAA Weather Radio is broadcast on the "Weather Band" and can not be received with a typical AM/FM radio. Specifically designed weather radios can be purchased from electronics and discount stores, as well as from catalogs and over the internet. Prices for weather radios fit every budget, ranging from $10 to $70.

NOAA Weather Radio, just like a smoke detector, should be available in every home, school, office and public gathering space. This year, let your friends and family know about NOAA Weather Radio. Better yet, give NOAA Weather Radio receivers as gifts this holiday season. NOAA Weather Radios are a gift that will last for many years and in addition to the valuable "on demand" forecasts they provide, you will be giving the gift of safety during times of severe weather.

BASES adds new after school program

Bay Area Substance Education Services, located in Charlevoix, has added a reading program to their after school groups.

The after school group is reading selections from a series called Junior Great Books. Some of these selections are college level stories.

The reading program meets on Wednesday afternoons from 5:15 to 6 p.m. and is led by two volunteers, Kay Heise, a retired teacher and Beth Allan, an administrative assistant/accountant from a local hotel in Charlevoix. Stacey Reeb, an employee of BASES, also assists in facilitation of this group.

The Junior Great Books program concentrates on topics that most interest adolescents, such as identity, fairness and peer relations. The class allows the young adults to listen to a story by a well-known author and then share their ideas about the story.

The teens are also encouraged to write down questions, observations, and thoughts into their notebooks. The program increases knowledge and develops communication skills. The class improves student achievement, critical thinking, literacy, language arts and listening.

Elementary students help out peers in Russian school

BY JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

This holiday season Sue Tillotson's second grade class at Charlevoix Elementary School learned how to think globally by acting locally — they've gathered a big box of school supplies for less fortunate Russian students.

"All year we have been working with the idea of giving our time. In the fall we helped rake leaves. They (the students) appreciate their school and home lives a little more when they find out that people are not this fortunate all over the world," Tillotson said.

Tillotson's friend, Joyce Chellis, who is originally from Charlevoix and was a nurse at Charlevoix Area Hospital for several years is currently living in Kazakhstan, Russia, working as a nurse in a single doctor, single nurse clinic that neighbors a country school.

A couple of years ago Chellis informed Tillotson of the students desperate need for school supplies.

She said that the students are currently writing using charcoal from their heating stove.

This disheartening news called Tillotson, a Charlevoix Elementary School teacher of 29 years, and her troops to action. The efforts of the second grade class have resulted in the gathering of 718 pencils, 144 pens, 800 crayons, two rulers, one bottle of glue, one package of markers and nine pencil sharpeners.

The students will be sending the package, chock full of needed supplies along with letters to the students across the ocean. Tillotson said that she hopes to start a correspondence between her students and those in Russia.

"Only a few families can afford pencils. Stores are few and far between for those who can afford a pencil. We hope our gift will lessen the burden of writing tools for the school," Tillotson said.

Big Rock employees surpass 2000 United Way goal

Employees at Consumers Energy's Big Rock Point Restoration Project surpassed the plant's 2000 United Way goal.

A total of 138 Consumers Energy and contracted employees pledged $16,748, bettering the plant goal of $16,000.

"Big Rock Point employees vowed to remain committed to our communities as we moved through the decommissioning and site restoration process," said Ellen Zienert, the plant's United Way campaign chair. "The results of this campaign and many other activities demonstrate that we have taken that pledge to heart."

Combined with the Consumers Energy Foundation's United Way contribution, Big Rock Point employee donations will total approximately 10 percent of Char/Em United Way's 2001 goal of $190,000.

Big Rock Point employee and Consumers Energy contributions to local United Way agencies total more than $190,000 over the past 10 years.

Resolution to purchase Wharfside passes council

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

The Charlevoix City Council gathered at a special meeting Monday in order to approve the submission of a grant application to the Michigan Department of Transportation by the application's Tuesday deadline.

According to city planner Gerry Harsch, the grant application is an effort to acquire funding for the local cost incurred in the acquisition and demolition of the Wharfside building at 330 Bridge Street.

The grant itself is called the Michigan Transportation Enhancement Grant (T-21). According to council's resolution to support the grant agreement, the granting agency commonly supports projects dealing with landscape, streetscape and grants that contribute to scenic acquisition and improvement.

The city has requested this grant before, but Harsch said that the point system used by the granting agency is more in their favor this time around.

Apparently, the grant is looked upon more favorably because it is a resubmission and the original grant request was for $350,000, nearly double the amount the city is currently requesting, $173,000.

According to City Manager Mike Weisner at Monday's meeting, council approved that the city file for the grant. He said that if the funds cannot be acquired from an outside source, the city will be responsible for the local share of $173,000.

In a past interview, Harsch said that tearing the building down is one stage in a major makeover planned for East Park and the Chamber Park area. The project includes the demolition of the Wharfside and the redesign of the marina.

Glee Club to have concert

The Charlevoix Men's Glee Club will present a Candlelight Christmas Concert at the newly refurbished First Congregational Church of Charlevoix.

The public is invited to attend the concert and to enjoy the updated surroundings. The program is scheduled to begin at 7:30 p.m. on Dec. 20.

The 20 voice men's chorus lead by retired Charlevoix High School band director, Terry Isenbarger, has been presenting concerts since 1996. Several soloists are also included in the evening's music. The First Congregational Church is located at the corner of Park and State.

Salon to give haircuts for Christmas to area children

Express Yourself Salon is offering to match its customers this holiday season.

Customers at the salon can purchase a $14 gift certificate for a haircut to be given to a child this Christmas and the salon will match that donation. All of the gift certificates will be given to the Women's Resource Center, to be disbursed by the center to the children of the women it helps.

Martha Moreno, of Express Yourself Salon, explained if customers donate 50 gift certificates to the children, the salon will donate another 50, thus giving 100 children haircuts.

"We have been wanting to do something for a long time. I kind of wanted to do something different," Moreno said. "It is like Toys for Tots, when people purchase a toy and donate it. But, they are purchasing a haircut and donating it."

She added since the project began Friday, the salon has received 12 gift certificates, which will give haircuts to 24 children so far. Donations will be accepted until Dec. 22.

To make a haircut donation to the Women's Resource Center, visit Express Yourself Salon at 219 Ferry Avenue — just below Nanny's restaurant — or call 547-5607.

Pool to raise rates for first time since it's opening

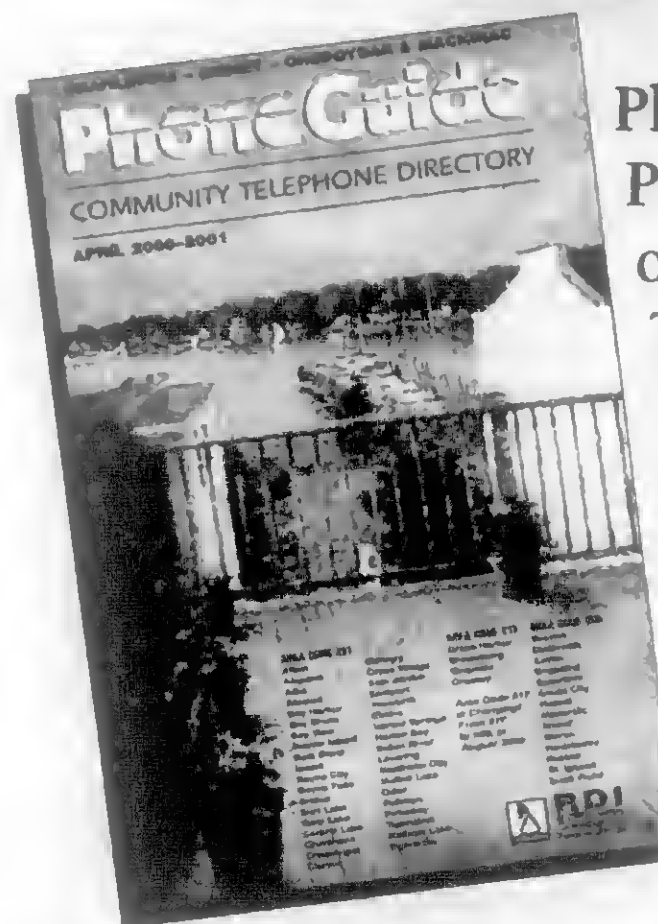

The cost of swimming at the Charlevoix Area Community Pool will be going up Jan. 1.

"We are constantly striving to keep prices as affordable as possible. This is the first time fees have increased since the pool opened in July 1997. We try to have about half of the budget covered by fees and charges. The other half of the budget comes from gifts, grants and the annual pool auction," Al Gooch, pool director, said.

Many fees including lessons and passes will increase about 10 percent. Daily fees for adults will change from $3 to $3.50 and senior citizens (62 and older) from $2.50 to $2.75. Children (18 and under) will continue to pay $2. Children under four who were formerly admitted free of charge will also be included in the $2 group.

Comments on fees and charges are welcome, contact the pool director at (231) 547-0982, leave a note in the suggestion box or write the director at 11905, US-31 North, Charlevoix, MI 49720.

Christmas Project in need of help

The Charlevoix Community Christmas Project volunteers have been working since mid-October, organizing the various committees necessary to assure that needy families in this area have a holiday meal and gifts for the children.

Last year approximately 125 families were helped by this outreach, including individuals from adult foster homes, and senior citizens, who were remembered with a small, personal, loving care gift.

Cash donations are needed to fund the grocery shopping, which is done through Oleson's, Glen's and Don's IGA stores.

Anyone wishing to make a donation may send a check to Community Christmas Project, in care of Jeanette Boss, project treasurer, at 1202 Matchett Road, Charlevoix, MI 49720.

The Community Christmas board is looking forward to the kindness and generosity of the Charlevoix community.

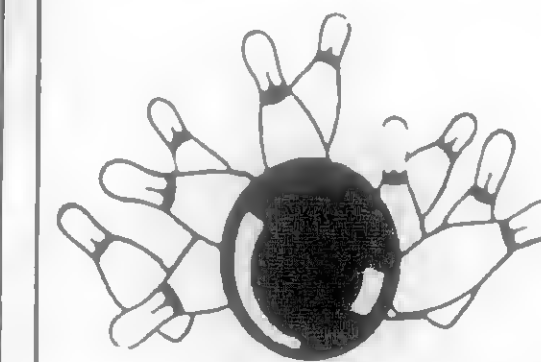

Distribution of the Christmas dinners and gifts will be from 9 to 11:30 a.m., Dec. 23 at the old post office building on Mason Street near city hall.

New chiropractic clinic offers a relaxing touch

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

McFadden Chiropractic Clinic gives its patients more than the typical spinal adjustment other chiropractors give.

According to Chiropractor Brian McFadden, the new clinic offers its patients deep tissue and muscular work, as well as spinal adjustment. Basically meaning, while adjusting their spine, McFadden gives his patients a type of massage to relax their muscles called "trigger point therapy."

"I push on the knots and this increases the blood supply to the muscle, so the muscle can heal and it helps relax the muscles around the spine to help with the adjustment," McFadden said.

And after the in-office visit, McFadden shows his patients a few stretches to keep their backs feeling well at home and offers them clinical nutrition information.

"By giving them these home stretches, it will help give relief at home. It is a part of your overall care," McFadden said. Also, unlike other chiropractors, McFadden does not require x-rays for his patients in order to treat them.

McFadden Chiropractic Clinic opened for business in November. It is presently in the old location of Absolute Chiropractic at 12900 US-31, suite 2 and 3.

McFadden is a recent graduate of a chiropractic college in Portland, Ore. and has a wife named Nancy. He graduated with his undergraduate degree from Western Michigan University.

While he grew up in West Bloomfield, McFadden is familiar with the Charlevoix area after having spent many summers and holidays here with his parents.

He picked Charlevoix as the location of his new practice because of its location and lifestyle. McFadden loves to golf, fish, hunt, snowmobile and eventually plans on trying out sailing.

For more information on McFadden Chiropractic Clinic or to make an appointment, call 547-0995.

Board passes locker, vehicle search policy

Grundman said it was difficult for him as an administrator to relinquish control by not being in attendance, but he was pleased at the personal responsibility the senior class is taking in combating the issue.

"These are great kids and great student leaders," Grundman said.

Student Council Secretary/Treasurer Shannon Nystrom highlighted one stage in a possible plan of attack. Nystrom said that she was recently approached by an underclassman who had remembered an anti-substance abuse speech she had delivered at the middle school. The student told Nystrom of the positive impact her speech had in facilitating her decision not to use.

Nystrom advocated having more interaction between seniors who younger students look up to saying that in many cases younger students are more responsive to upperclassman than they are to adults.

Other seniors echoed Nystrom's position saying part of the solution may be in targeting younger students. One such senior spoke of the age at which substance abuse is starting, saying she had spoken with children in the fourth and fifth grades who had already experimented with drugs.

Senior Hal Evans Jr. raised the issue of divisions within the school itself that weaken the cause.

Evans highlighted that some seniors left the Dec. 7 meeting; they do not feel the drug issue is their problem. Evans addressed this issue in front of the board asking them to make their battle against substance abuse a school-wide effort.

"Don't target locker searches. Unify the school by checking everyone's locker, so everyone will feel that this is their problem. It is the whole school's problem, not just certain groups," Evans said.

Vice president of student council, Melissa McDonough said that with the seniors taking an active role in halting the progression of the problem there is hope.

"Kids are willing to change; we think our efforts are going to make a difference," McDonough said.

McDonough also welcomed a community wide meeting where residents, students and administrators come together to find solutions to the drug problem in our schools.

"I am proud of the kids taking an active role. This is not the seniors problem or the school's problem, this is a community problem," Sturrock said of the breadth of the issue.

Writer tries to cut a tree for Christmas

CHRISTMAS

While tree farms, may seem like quaint little operations, the Illinois University web site, www.urbanext.uiuc.edu, documents some interesting facts that show the real immensity of tree farming. The site states that 34 to 36 million Christmas trees are produced each year, 95 percent of which are shipped or sold directly from Christmas tree farms.

Brooks Hill Tree Farm is north of Charlevoix. The farm is owned by Faith and LeRoy Brooks. Brooks offers trees to cut or potted trees. Head to US-31 and Burgess Road and follow the signs. It is a wonderful way to get out and enjoy an afternoon.

The trees at Brooks are truly beautiful and the experience of walking through the winter wonderland would be great for the whole family.

Some tips on caring for your tree

According to www.urbanext.uiuc.edu/trees, the following are a few "keepin' it fresh" tips:

- When looking, administer "the fresh test" to perspective pre-cut trees. Look for a healthy green appearance with few browning needles. The needles should be flexible and should not fall off when you run your hand over the branch. Then for the final tell-all raise the cut tree a couple inches off the ground and drop it on its butt end. Green needles should not drop off the tree a few brown needles will usually fall from the interior.

- If you are not ready to bring the tree in right away store it in an unheated garage away from the wind and cold that can dry it out. Make a fresh one inch cut on the end and place the tree in a bucket of warm water.

- Once you are ready to bring your tree inside make another fresh, one inch cut and place the tree in a stand that holds at least a half of a gallon of water.

- When choosing your trees indoor destination, make sure you locate it away from heat sources including: TV's, fireplaces, air ducts and radiators.

- After the tree is standing and decorated, don't forget to keep it regularly watered or resin will form on the base of the trunk and the tree will be unable to draw water and will dry quickly. All water additives, like aspirin or sugar, are really unnecessary.

- Lights can also dry a tree out. Miniature lights produce less heat and reduce the drying effect.

Team to investigate child deaths

The Charlevoix-Emmet Family Independence Agency has formed a Child Death Review Team as part of the Michigan Public Health Institute's "Keeping Kids Alive" program.

The team will review the deaths of children from birth to age 18, in both Charlevoix and Emmet counties.

The Child Death Review program was established to gather information on how and why children die, to identify preventable deaths and to take community action to prevent other child deaths.

Team members come from diverse backgrounds, each bringing their own area of expertise to assist in the death reviews.

They include law enforcement officers, medical examiners, prosecutors, FIA workers, Family Court administrators, hospital and emergency service providers, pediatricians, school personnel, Health Department personnel and other concerned community professionals.

The purpose of the team is not to conduct criminal investigations or to assign blame; team members are dedicated to reviewing child deaths in order to prevent future deaths. After each review, the team will make recommendations to any agency that may assist in preventing child deaths, and may also work to improve public awareness on child safety.

The Char-Em Child Death Review Team members have already signed an Interagency Agreement to work together and a Confidentiality Statement. The team has also selected Emmet County Assistant Prosecutor Jennifer Herschel as the Team Coordinator.

German students share Christmas memories

Like Oberbeck, Cheng Fei, 16, of Nuremberg, Germany will be graduating from Charlevoix High School in June. Fei also cited differences he observed between the two school systems.

According to Fei, in the German system there are three different types of post-elementary schools. Fei said German students are also required to take 15 different subjects as opposed to the American system where there is a certain degree of choice and flexibility in the student's curriculum.

Both Fei and Oberbeck have supplemented their learning experience by joining a varsity sports team. They can be found on the slopes this winter as part of the Charlevoix High School ski team.

Fei arrived on the Charlevoix scene Sept. 1 and has since made a transition between extremes from his ultra-urban German setting to Charlevoix, a rural community.

"Charlevoix is a pretty city, but I lived in a city with 500,000 citizens. It's been a challenge to adjust and conform," he said.

While Charlevoix may be a smaller community, both students addressed an aspect of American, midwest culture they've observed locally that is literally bigger than its German counterpart....cars.

Apparently big cars are a rarity in Germany; both Fei and Oberbeck commented on the sheer size of the vehicles they see here in Charlevoix.

"Everything here is a little bit bigger. I had never seen a pick-up truck before. People drive huge cars here. I like it; it makes me feel like the king of the road," Oberbeck said.

While visiting Chicago, Ill., Fei came across some stretch limousines that awed and inspired him. He referred to the deluxe automobiles as "very impressive."

Both boys said they have enjoyed discovering American culture. As the holidays approach they also look forward to an unfamiliar celebration.

Fei said that Christmas in Germany for him has commonly been characterized by a family gathering where songs are sung. He said that the German version of "Silent Night" has always been a family favorite.

Exchange students from Germany, Claas Oberbeck and Cheng Fei will be celebrating their first American Christmas this year. (Photo by Julie Musilek)

Fei's family also attends church as part of their festivities.

This year Fei looks forward to spending time with his host family, Diane Penfold-Sayward and Dick Sayward, while visiting Chicago, Ill., and Detroit.

Oberbeck said his Christmas experiences in Germany usually begin with the Advent Circle and then his family celebrates St. Nicholas Day on Dec. 6. He said that in Germany, on this day, kids leave their boots outside their door and when they wake up in the morning, they are filled with assorted nuts and candy.

Oberbeck also shared that in Germany, Christmas is celebrated to a greater degree on Dec. 24, Christmas Eve, whereas in America, Christmas festivities are concentrated more on Dec. 25.

The German tradition is not to allow the tree to be seen until Christmas Eve when all the presents are underneath. They then keep the tree up for a couple weeks after.

Donations made to church for food pantry

On Oct. 29, Bethany Lutheran Church met the challenge on "Make a Difference Day" by gathering funds for the local food pantry.

Matching funds of $450 were received from Lutheran Brotherhood Tip of the Mitt Branch 5989, and with gifts collected from the congregation, a check for $1,286 was presented to Mary Helen Riggle of the pantry staff.

Basketball team starts season with two losses

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

"We got beat and we got beaten badly."

Keith Haske,
Varsity basketball coach

The Charlevoix Rayders varsity basketball team hasn't had a very good start to the season. While they are only two games in to the season, the team is, so far, winless. The Rayders lost to Suttons Bay, Dec. 8, 70-52, and Petoskey Dec. 5, 77-76.

Probably the worst loss so far has been the Suttons Bay game. "We got beat and we got beaten badly," Coach Keith Haske said. "We just didn't play very hard."

Haske said he was unhappy with both the offensive and the defensive skills shown by his players.

"Whenever you put those two things together you are in very big trouble," he said.

However, Haske said there was one shining ray of light during the game and that was Rob Boss.

"He took two charges and did a great job of trying to get the ball. He was our bright spot," Haske said.

To overcome these problems that presented themselves to the Rayders Dec. 8, Haske said they will be doing a lot of work in practice.

He added the team is young and he has been concerned about the first part of the year from the beginning.

"I am sure they will improve. I guarantee it," Haske said.

Leading the Rayders for the night was Scott Parrish with 22 points and one rebound. Jeremiah Teuscher had eight points, Doug Rieck had 8 points and five assists. Boss had seven points and eight rebounds and Patrick Gowell had four assists.

The Dec. 5 game against Petoskey was not as bad as the Suttons Bay game.

According to Haske, while the Rayders did lose, it was the kind of game fans love. One that comes down to the last second and the last shot.

That last shot was taken by Rayder Jim Shepherd, but it bounced up. Hope sprang back into Charlevoix, as it was tipped back up to the basket by Boss. But, it did not go in and the time ran out.

Parrish had 28 points that night, eight rebounds, two steals and blocked three shots. Gowell had 19 points, three rebounds, five assists and three steals. Teuscher had 11 points, seven rebounds and three steals.

The Rayders played Cheboygan last night in their first home game. The results of that game were not available before press time.

They will face Benzie Central Friday at home.

Writer remembers a trip on the Medusa Challenger

Marilyn Boss
'Days gone by'

In my last article I told the history of the Medusa Cement property, and our involvement in the successful election outcome, to expand the south point plant.

It was this time of year in 1979, when Clem Wagner, office manager of the plant called me and asked if we would like to take a one week's cruise on the Medusa Challenger. They only made one trip to Toronto a year and it would be a most interesting trip.

At first we, being greenhorns, didn't understand how luxurious their staterooms were. They flew us to Toronto and there we boarded the ship that was just being filled with dry cement, ready to leave in about an hour to proceed across the end of Lake Ontario, through the Welland Canal, across the full length of Lake Erie, up the Detroit River, through Lake Huron and under the Mackinac Bridge. It then would drop its load in Manitowoc, Wisconsin.

There were so many foreign ships waiting their turn to be locked through the Welland Canal, that we had to drop anchor and wait until morning for our turn. It was fascinating to see all the rust covered ships, waiting with us, which had been in the salt water of the ocean. We got up with the dawn and the sunrise was spectacular. We ate all our meals at the captain's table and our sleeping quarters were high above the deck.

Being Thanksgiving, the menu was unbelievable with many kinds of meats and a full menu of every sort of delectable foods. When we got to the Detroit River, we encountered another huge ship going in the same direction.

Dale had been spending time in the wheel house with Captain Bradley, and he said, "I'm not going to follow that other ship all the way up through here. He will hold us up." So he proceeded to radio the engineer in the ships boiler room and told him to pull the governors on the engine, as he wanted to pass the other ship before we went under the Ambassador Bridge.

Well, let me tell you, we made smoke for about seven or eight miles, and overtook the other guy. In the process of things, Dale asked Captain Bradley if the ship would fit through the channel into Round Lake. He pulled out the charts and informed him that it would be tight, but he thought he could do it.

We heard warnings of a big storm heading our way as we passed under the Mackinac Bridge. Captain Bradley took the ship into the bay at Escanaba, and we anchored there for about twelve hours.

We then proceeded to Manitowoc, where the cargo was unloaded, and came with an empty ship back to Charlevoix. We were so impressed with the operation of the ship, that we mentioned to the Medusa officials that it would be very nice if the whole Charlevoix community could tour the ship and see how things were done. We suggested that a small fee be charged, as new band uniforms were needed for the Charlevoix High School Band, with the receipts going toward purchasing uniforms.

Several thousand dollars were raised. The cement company spent approximately $100,000 to re-paint the ship and also paid a local contractor, Ray Wood, $10,000 to build an enormous set of steps so people could go up and over the side of the ship. This doesn't include the thousands the company lost by taking the ship out of service during this time. The Beaver Island boat had to be moved to a dock at the lumber company, across the channel, in order to facilitate the parking of the Challenger, which extended from the edge of the channel, clear across the foot of Clinton Street.

The big event occurred on Memorial Day weekend in 1980, and the ship arrived as scheduled, passing through the channel at noon on Sunday. The banks of the channel were lined on both sides with hundreds of people watching Captain Bradley maneuver the huge ship through the crook in the channel. There were only inches to spare on the bow and stern as he brought her around the curve in the channel. It took quite a while to turn her around in Round Lake, as he didn't have the assistance of a tug boat.

The next day, Monday, which was Memorial Day, thousands of people paid to go on board and see first hand how the ship operated. The hold of the ship was so long, that they kept a bicycle there for the crew to use to ride from one end of the ship to the other.

The late Jim Bellinger, owner of Bellinger Marine, said that, to his knowledge, this was the largest ship to ever tie up in Round Lake.

As a result, the company has offered a cruise on the ship to high bidders at past Keep Charlevoix Beautiful auctions, and raised many thousands of dollars for projects. About two years ago, the plant was merged with Southdown.

In October 2000, a merger between Southdown and Cemex was announced. The plant now has about 140 employees.

Wind power may come to area

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

The Charlevoix county planning team recently responded to a request to have a wind turbine generator located in Bay Township by taking an outing to Elmwood Township, near Empire, where a similar energy generator has been in use since 1996.

The wind turbine generator

(WTG) installed in Elmwood was the first utility scale WTG in Michigan. According to Charlevoix county planner, Larry Sullivan, the proposed Bay Township WTG, like the one in Elmwood, would offer residents a cleaner avenue through which to generate energy.

Sullivan said that the proposed generator would be able to power 200 to 500 homes.

"It (the turbine) is something that doesn't cause pollution, like burning fuel would, there is no smoke or particulate matter. The wind is renewable. The only thing someone could argue is the aesthetic issue," Sullivan said.

Sullivan referenced the size of the turbine as a possible aspect of the system that residents could be opposed to. He compared the characteristics of the turbine to those of radio and cellular towers which have commonly come under great scrutiny.

These turbines, like cellular towers have to be located on higher ground and they require a good chunk of space. The turbine currently in operation near Traverse City stands on a 160-foot tower.

Coast Guard deals with high-priced housing

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

During recent interviews with city officials the prospect of the Coast Guard moving from their Charlevoix location due to a lack of local affordable housing was discussed.

"I guess myself and others are concerned that as housing costs rise in Charlevoix that this (the Coast Guard relocating) may become an issue in the future," City Manager Mike Weisner said.

In a recent interview, city treasurer Rick Brandt made reference to city-owned property on M-66 and Ferry Road as being a prospective site of the development of affordable housing for the Coast Guard.

City Manager Mike Weisner said that the property was offered to the Coast Guard years ago and the city received no response from them concerning the property.

But, according to Douglas McCann, Ninth District (which covers Charlevoix) Coast Guard Planning Officer, stationed in Cleveland, Ohio, the high cost of living in Charlevoix is currently an issue, but is not a problem the Coast Guard plans to rectify by relocating the station or by developing land.

"Housing is expensive there (in Charlevoix), but building new houses is usually our last resort because it tends to be very expensive. We tend to give people a housing allowance or the Coast Guard will rent apartments in town," McCann said.

OPINIONS

Keep it safe when riding the trails

Winter is upon us and the Charlevoix area is seeing more snowmobilers visiting the area.

There is nothing quite like getting a little fresh air, seeing a few winter wonderland sights and riding through fresh powder on a snowmobile. There is also nothing quite like ramming into a tree at high speeds, getting run over or having your yard torn up by trespassing snowmobilers.

People should remember snowmobiles are not safe little toys and they do not have a limitless area to ride in.

Snowmobiles if used improperly or unsafely can kill and they have already claimed a few lives this year.

Drivers should always use caution when on these machines. They should always drive at safe speeds, keep an eye out for wildlife or pedestrians that may pop up in their path and, for God's sake, they must not drink.

Frequently we see the parking lots of local bars filled with snowmobiles and some of these snowmobilers are later seen speeding down trails with a clearly intoxicated driver. These tipsy riders try to navigate their machines through narrow trails at high rates of speed and are sometimes later seen in the obituary section of the newspaper.

These riders seem to think, just because a snowmobile is not an automobile it is safer to drive after drinking. Besides being killed, you can get in just as much trouble with the law if you are caught drunk on a snowmobile as you would if you are caught driving your car.

Furthermore, snowmobilers should remember they do not have a limitless rein over northern Michigan. Just because Farmer Bob's field has great powder for riding, does not mean you are entitled to trespass on his property.

Yes, snowmobiling is fun and it can bring additional revenue to the area. But, we urge all area snowmobilers to use some sense when they are out riding; it will keep everyone safe and happy throughout the holidays and the winter.

Home sweet home

Roger Knutson

'Ear to the ground'

"There is no place like home for the holidays" is among the truths we learn from popular songs this time of year. But, just where and what is home?

The poet Robert Frost said once, "Home is where, when you have to go there, they have to take you in." That suspicion is well for people who, with a phone, an address and a street map can find almost any home.

What about the animals we share the world with? They too have homes of some sort and must find them, without the phone, address or the printed map. How do they do it? I'm not thinking here about the few family cats or dogs that miraculously find their way home across miles of unfamiliar territory. I expect that they are the exception. Most of our domestic pets have had much of their home-finding ability bred out of them in favor of extra long hair, extra short legs or extra large size. My suspicion is that for every pet dog or cat that makes those miraculous journeys, there are hundreds which do not. What does home mean and how is it found for the thousands of undomesticated birds, mammals, reptiles and even insects that surround us?

The robins that nest in your yard each year may actually be the same individuals who have somehow found their way to south Georgia or north Florida and then back to their home in your yard. Some birds manage much longer annual migrations with returns to the same home base. For those of you interested in Guinness records, the Arctic Tern is the champ. It can manage an annual flight from the Canadian Arctic to Antarctica and back, a distance that approaches 24,000 miles. Even our local hummingbirds get to Mexico for the winter and return in the spring. Their trip includes a 300 mile non-stop jaunt across the Gulf of Mexico each time. The hold that home has on these birds must be remarkable indeed.

Birds have significant advantages in such homing efforts. After all, they can fly great distances from considerable heights. Animals without flight capacity can, however, manage to find home just as well. Garter snakes, who really cannot see very far from their lowly stations, still spend each winter with a bunch of buddies in the same hibernation site and they may have to crawl many miles to get back to it before the snow flies. How do they do it? Up to now, no one has much of a clue, but we do know that they can find home over what must be a dramatic distance for a small snake.

Our local monarch butterflies wing their way to central Mexico each fall where they wait out four months of winter, hanging by the millions on a special kind of fir tree up in the mountains. We must consider those aggregations as the home for these creatures, since none of them makes it all the way back to Michigan the next year. We do not yet know whether the ones found here the next year are direct offspring of those that left. Somehow a fragile creature with eyes that are not that good and a grain too small to be seen without a microscope, can find its way from Michigan or Canada to home in one specific area of Mexico.

Even the salmon that swim up tiny Medusa Creek by the thousands each fall are finding their way to a home they have not visited for years.

It should not be surprising that we expend all that energy to get home for the holidays. What we share with other creatures is not just a common ancestry, but something of a common set of values. Home is an important place to all of us creatures.

Letters to the editor

Thank you

Editor:
Thank you for giving our high school student leaders front page headlines in the Dec. 13 Charlevoix Courier.

Congratulations to the seniors at Charlevoix High School for having the courage to voice their intolerance of drugs and alcohol in school. Their proposal of a student-to-student mentoring plan to encourage students to choose a drug-free life demonstrates a quality of leadership and compassion that deserves our support and pride as a community. Peer pressure can be a very persuasive force in a young person's life for both healthy and unhealthy choices. There's an old saying, "You can't control the wind, but you can adjust your sails." People cannot control their peers, but we can certainly influence the pressure.

I hope everyone in our community will do their part to support student initiatives toward a drug and alcohol free school. The first step is to listen to what our students are saying — they are closer to the problem than any of us and their insights are important. I applaud Mr. (Gary) Grundman and the school board for listening to the voices of our students. Those voices need all of our support.

Big Rock employees give more than 200 toys

Many area children will find new toys under the Christmas tree this holiday season thanks to the employees at Consumers Energy's Big Rock Point Restoration Project.

Employees continued their annual tradition of requiring an unwrapped new toy as admission to the plant's Christmas party. The 180 people in attendance donated more than 200 toys at the Dec. 8 event given at Boyne Mountain Civic Center.

"We appreciate the employees at Big Rock Point donating toys annually," said area Salvation Army Captain Bill Everling. "Over the last 13 years the employees have donated more than 16,000 toys to children in our community."

As is tradition, Captain Everling picked up the toys during the party.

"The Big Rock Point employees do enjoy loading up the truck," he said, recalling the line of employees who carried all of the gifts to the Salvation Army's vehicle.

The toys will be given to needy families through the Salvation Army's toyshop. On Dec. 21, parents of more than 65 pre-approved families will pick out gifts for their 100-plus children in the toyshop.

Senior center gets donation

BY JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

A donation by the Rainbow Shoppe has brought the Charlevoix Senior Center one-third of the way closer to the goal of making its basement addition accessible to all center visitors.

For the last couple of months an empty elevator shaft has waited patiently for fund-raisers, generous donations and grants to generate needed funds that will allow the construction process of an elevator/lift to continue. One such generous donation of $10,000 came from the Rainbow Shoppe on Wednesday.

"Do you realize how long it would have taken to get $10,000 when we are taking in $200 per month during good months? It would have taken years and we need this (elevator/lift) now. All of us (the Senior Center Board and the Rainbow Shoppe Board) are only one fall away from needing an elevator," Senior Center Director Ginnie Schairbaum said.

According to Schairbaum, the elevator/lift project comes at a cost of $30,000. After accepting the second hand shop's donation and a $10,000 donation from the Oleson's Foundation, the center is two-thirds of the way to meeting that need.

Rainbow Shoppe treasurer, Barb Jensen said that each year the shop takes whatever profit they have made and then they disperse the funds throughout the community.

Jensen described the mission of the Rainbow Shoppe as an effort, "To provide good, used clothing and household items for the needy in the area."

Senior Center board member Richard Tunison said that the gears will be set in motion after the project engineer has been contacted and coordinates with the elevator manufacturing company out of Traverse City.

However the project's completion, which will also include the installation of an outdoor access door and ramp walkway, still requires that the center come up with $10,000, the final third of the funding.

Lighthouse school celebrates graduation

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Following an intense semester on the isolated, south end of Beaver Island, 28 students from 10 counties around northwest Michigan came together to celebrate their graduation from the Beaver Island Lighthouse School Dec. 13.

"Today is the last day the students and staff will be together as a group. This is a significant accomplishment — it shows they are sticking to something and learning how to overcome their problems. The island is unique because they (the students) have to deal with these things; it's not that easy to walk away," Mary Rose Farrington, Program Coordinator for the Traverse Bay Area Intermediate School District Michigan Works said.

The lighthouse school is an alternative program that attempts to help individuals ages 16 to 21 who are having trouble in a traditional school environment, or in society in general. Its aim is to equip these students with coping mechanisms to help them address issues in their lives in addition to offering core academic subjects.

The program runs in three month intervals during which time students learn conflict resolution and daily living skills. Farrington said that the school utilizes a holistic approach integrating many hands-on learning and group activities.

Through low student-to-teacher ratios — one teacher to four or five students — and "a very special staff" the school's administration has seen great successes. In this most recent session the school graduated the most students ever to have completed the program, 28.

The opening statement at the ceremony was delivered by academic coordinator at the lighthouse school, John Freeman. Freeman equated the significance of the graduation with a Christmas gift that came early this year for students. He said that if opened properly the gift of the program.

YOUR HEALTH

Don't let the cold ruin your winter

Daniel Mann, M.D.

'Your health'

Winter is finally here — bringing beautiful snow that provides all kinds of winter activities northern Michigan is famous for.

Winter activities and sports, such as skiing, snowboarding, snowmobiling and snowshoeing, have become more popular recently. In turn, frostbite and hypothermia have also become more prevalent. Even everyday activities, such as walking, shoveling and working outside can become dangerous given the right conditions.

When exposed to cold, our bodies have many protective mechanisms to maintain our core temperature of 98.5 degrees. Movement and increasing our heart and breathing rate produces heat. Shivering, goosebumps and constricting blood vessels near the surface of the skin, called capillaries, preserve heat loss.

Frostbite is quite simply freezing of the skin and tissues. Cold exposure can cause freezing of capillaries. Freezing followed by thawing can lead to tissue death, which can lead to permanent numbness, tingling, joint stiffness and nail and muscle loss.

Hands and feet are most susceptible to frostbite, followed by noses, cheeks and ears. With mild frostbite, the affected area may become numb, red, swollen and waxy looking. Blistering and damage to underlying muscle, tendons and bone can occur with severe frostbite.

Mild frostbite can usually be treated at home, with a whirlpool or tub of warm water at 104-108 degrees. Warmer temperatures or dry heat can cause thermal injury. When appropriately thawed, affected skin should flush when pressed on. Obtain medical attention with anything other than mild frostbite.

Hypothermia is often a medical emergency. Symptoms range from shivering, confusion, lethargy and lack of coordination with mild hypothermia (93-95 degrees) to unconsciousness and potentially fatal heart rhythms with severe hypothermia. With most activities, one can simply come inside when cold. However, other activities, such as winter camping, hunting or hiking can be potentially disastrous if an injury or hypothermia occurs. Unpredictable events, such as a car accident or falling through ice can be equally dangerous. Medical attention should be sought promptly if there is suspicion of hypothermia.

Fortunately, with a little common sense and prevention, one can limit the risk of both hypothermia and frostbite. Here are some suggestions:

- Get out of the cold, otherwise keep moving as this increases heat production.

- Dress appropriately. Keep your neck, head and face covered. Wearing thin sock liners can help tremendously. Avoiding perspiration is imperative, as cold, wet clothing insulates poorly and markedly increases heat loss. Dress in layers, especially with high intensity activities. Invest in some quality long underwear. Many stores offer relatively inexpensive items that both insulate and wick moisture away from the body.

- Be aware of weather conditions that pose increased risks, such as extreme cold or high winds.

- Elderly people, children, and those with medical problems, such as heart disease, diabetes and arthritis should take extra precautions.

- Drink plenty of fluids and eat properly. Winter activities require more energy and dehydration increases the risk of frostbite and hypothermia.

- Avoid alcohol. Many people falsely believe that alcohol has a warming effect. The flushing sensation one feels with alcohol is actually the dilation of small blood vessels, which increases heat loss. In addition, alcohol impairs shivering, as well as judgment.

- Equip your vehicle with a winter emergency kit. Extra clothing, gloves, warm boots, a blanket, flashlight and even a food stash can be lifesaving if you are helping others or involved in an accident.

Hopefully, these suggestions will help you to have an enjoyable and safe winter. If you have any questions, please contact a health care provider. Have a great winter and let it snow!

Some safety tips for snowmobiling

The high number of snowmobile injuries and deaths already this winter is motivating the Northwest Michigan Community Health Agency to urge snowmobilers to use caution.

"People should know that excessive speed and alcohol abuse are present in nearly all fatal snowmobiling accidents. In fact, more than 60 percent of fatalities are attributed to alcohol consumption by the snowmobile operator," stated Joshua Meyerson, MD, Medical Director for the Northwest Michigan Community Health Agency. The agency serves residents throughout four counties from its offices in Bellaire, Mancelona, Charlevoix, Petoskey and Gaylord.

"These deaths and injuries can be prevented if people will take the time to follow a few basic safety hints," Dr. Meyerson said. Those tips are:

- 1) Always keep your machine in top mechanical condition.
- 2) Read and understand your machine's owners manual.
- 3) Always wear insulated boots and protective clothing including a helmet, gloves and eye protection.
- 4) Never ride alone. If possible ride with other snowmobilers.
- 5) Avoid, when possible, crossing frozen bodies of water.
- 6) Never operate in a single file when crossing frozen bodies of water.
- 7) Always be alert to avoid fences and low strung wires.
- 8) Never operate on a street or highway.
- 9) Always look for depressions in the snow.
- 10) Keep headlights and taillights on at all times.
- 11) Do not overdrive headlights. Be able to stop within the area lighted by your headlights.
- 12) Stay on marked trails and slow down in unfamiliar areas.
- 13) When approaching an intersection, come to a complete stop, raise off the seat and look for traffic.
- 14) Always check the weather conditions before you depart.
- 15) Carry emergency equipment such as a tool kit (knife, pliers, adjustable wrench, electrical tape, plug wrench and screwdriver,) flashlight (extra batteries and bulb,) matches (candles,) disposable blanket (heat reflecting "space" type) and a first aid kit.
- 16) Be knowledgeable of current laws that cover snowmobile use in Michigan.
- 17) Take training from local law enforcement, clubs or through the Michigan Department of Natural Resources in how to operate your snowmobile safely.

Wind turbines may soon be seen on Charlevoix farmland

WIND

Literature distributed by Traverse City Light and Power records their generator as being the largest operating wind turbine in the continental United States.

Sullivan said that the planned Bay Township generator would be bigger than that of Elmwood, resting on a 250 foot tower with blades 60 to 100 feet.

The size of the project is matched by its high cost — WTG installation is not cheap; they cost $650,000. This cost is passed on to the consumer amounting to a 17 to 23 percent rate increase depending on the consumer's rate class. In the case of Elmwood, the "green rate" results in between a seven and eight dollar monthly bill increase.

Farmland is said to be the most viable location of the generator as it generally offers a large expanse of open space that could most easily accommodate the WTG.

Sullivan also said by locating the WTG in the agricultural district, the county may be opening another avenue through which to sustain the farming industry during a period when more farmers realize the development value of the land and leave the farming industry.

"The WTG would provide income to the property owner. This would bring revenue in and possibly keep farms in the farming business," Sullivan said. "If you have zoning in effect you have to provide for all uses which could reasonably be expected to be located within your community."

Sullivan said that the zoning ordinance which would permit the WTG's would need to be equipped with specific wording in order to protect the land owner.

Rather than rezoning an agricultural district, industrial in order to accommodate the WTG, Sullivan believes the most efficient way would be to grant special use permits in the agricultural district for these generators.

From there, individuals interested in locating the generators on their property would have to go through their township.

He also said that the lifespan of the WTG is approximately 30 years — the zoning wording should include plans for disposal after the WTG is no longer of use.

Sullivan suggested including the stipulation that following the 30-year period, the company in charge of installing and operating the generator would be responsible for removing it.

This alternative energy source comes at a time when Michigan needs to start planning to meet their future energy needs. The WTG's function as one variable in providing energy, not a sole provider.

According to Electric and Water Department Superintendent,

Ed Whitley, the State of Michigan will face an energy shortage within the next 10 years.

"The whole Midwest is becoming short of generating capacity. With deregulation, nobody is building any generation," Whitley said.

In order to plan for this future reality Charlevoix is looking at sites in Kalkaska and Traverse City as possible locations for a peaking plant. Whitley said the peaking plant is needed regardless of alternative energy sources like wind generation because of the WTG's inability to function as a "run unit."

"(In regard to the WTGs) You can't guarantee that capacity will be there — you can't guarantee the wind will blow," Whitley said.

"There is a need for the generation of electricity. This is a clean, environmentally sensitive or non-damaging means of generating electricity. Therefore I feel that this is a type of use that should be allowed in Charlevoix county," Sullivan said of the prospect of the WTGs.

The proposed wind turbines in the Charlevoix area will probably be quite a bit bigger than this one currently located in Hayes Township. (Photo by Julie Musilek)

Consumers offers safety tips for holiday lights

During this holiday season, more than 1.6 million electric customers served by Consumers Energy are decking the halls with decorative lighting. The spirit of the season is evident as homes and businesses decorate with festive holiday lighting this year.

Consumers Energy estimates that approximately five percent of its December electrical load can be attributed to the impact of the holiday season. Lighting demand in December comes from businesses and shopping malls, which install special lighting displays and extend shopping hours, as well as residential holiday lights.

The electric load attributed to the holiday season equals 125 gigawatt-hours, which is enough power to serve approximately 250,000 residential customers. It would also light 1.25 billion 100-watt light bulbs for one hour. This equates to a solid string of light bulbs stretched from the Mackinac Bridge to the North Pole and back, ten times.

A residence in the utility's service territory will traditionally be decorated with an average of four strands of electric lights. If these lights glow for four hours each evening, the cost would be less than two cents per night for the mini-lights and about seven cents per night for larger bulbs. The cost would be comparable to having the porch light on for the same period.

Christmas trees are being put up in homes throughout Consumers Energy's service territory. If a tree hosts an average of four strings of lights which are lit an estimated five to six hours each day for about 21 days, the total energy cost of powering the average Christmas tree for the season is less than a dollar. The electricity cost per hour, per strand of the mini-lights is approximately one-tenth of a cent.

Consumers Energy offers the following holiday lighting safety tips to help assure a safe Yuletide season:

- Don't overload electric circuits.
- Replace light strings that have frayed cords, damaged plugs or loose connections.
- Only buy lights that carry the label of a testing laboratory, such as UL.
- Do not switch indoor lights and outdoor lights. Outdoor lights burn hotter than indoor.

Gooch named new Charlevoix city clerk

BY JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

There is a relatively new face roaming the corridors at city hall, furiously jotting down the details of city council meetings and keeping up with voter registration.

Liz Gooch, 34, former part-time lifeguard at the Charlevoix Area Community Pool, fills a new seat over at city hall. Gooch began her stint as Charlevoix city clerk the last week in September and has since had some time to settle into her post.

"I've enjoyed getting to know Charlevoix and becoming more familiar with the streets and the people," Gooch said.

In just a couple of months she has not only been able to adequately meet the requirements of her job description but has even expanded the scope of her responsibilities.

Gooch said that in the near future

she will be taking over as Freedom of Information Act coordinator. At this post she handles Freedom of Information Act requests.

She said that this new responsibility is a big step but that the transition will be gradual.

Liz and her husband Al Gooch have been Charlevoix residents for the past three years. Al is director of the Charlevoix Area Community Pool.

In the past, Liz has helped with Al's efforts at the pool by lifeguarding. Prior to working at the community pool she had done some clerical work.

Gooch said that the position is working out well for many reasons.

One such benefit of her job as city clerk is the schedule. Both of her children, Kristen, 7, and Alex, 6, are attending school and she works in the afternoon.

She said that it has been really nice to be home for them.

Basketball team gets two wins last week

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

The Charlevoix Rayders varsity basketball team made up for its opening losses with back-to-back wins last week.

The team beat Benzie Central Dec. 15, 93-69, and Cheboygan on Dec. 12, 94-73.

"I think we need to keep doing what we are doing. I thought this is a good momentum to build on going into (winter) break," Coach Keith Haske said. The Rayders will have some time away from the court for the holidays.

In the Benzie game, Haske said he thought his team did very well overall.

"They were a pretty good team and we did a pretty good job with them," he said.

Haske was particularly proud of his team's effort that night.

"I thought our kids played hard. They played a little more together," he said.

Offensively he said Scott Parrish did a great job by collecting 30 points, nine rebounds and three blocks. Jim Shepherd also did well, scoring 15 points and having his best game of the season this far, Haske said.

Doug Rieck and Keith Daly each had 10 points.

On defense, Haske said he was very happy with the skills shown by Patrick Gowell. Gowell was up against one of the best guards in northern Michigan, Haske said, and he held him to 8 points — most of which was scored at the end of the game when Gowell wasn't on the court.

Haske also commended the playing of Jeremiah Teuscher in the win over Benzie.

"I thought he was the key. His efforts got everyone going," Haske said.

Other statistics for the night included seven assists for Gowell and five steals for Ryan Rafacz.

In the Cheboygan game, Parrish chalked up 24 points, 10 rebounds and two blocks. Teuscher had 16 points, Rob Boss had 15 points and nine rebounds and Gowell had 12 points.

The Rayders' overall record is 2-2. Their next game will be an away game Jan. 3 against Harbor Springs.

Several Rayder varsity wrestlers take medals

Charlevoix High School wrestlers made strong showings at two recent meets.

On Dec. 16, many of the grapplers walked away with medals following a meet at home for the Charlevoix Invitational against Cheboygan, Mancelona, Petoskey, Gaylord and Mio.

"I am very proud of all the Charlevoix wrestlers. The team as a whole won 25, lost 12," Coach Gary Probert said.

Charlevoix faced tough competition with Mancelona winning seven of the medals. The Rayders took four medals.

Individual results, by weight class, were:

• At 103 pounds, Danny Hedricks won two and lost three.

• At 112 pounds, Heather Probert won three and lost one. She was a second place finisher in the tournament.

• At 130 pounds, Tim Daining won three and lost two.

• At 145 pounds, Brett Probert won four and lost one. He was in a three way tie for first place.

• At 152 pounds, Bo Moore won two and lost one.

• At 160 pounds, Ryan Novotny won four and lost one. This gave him a second place finish in the tournament.

• At 171 pounds, Chris Lahr won two and lost three.

• At 215 pounds, Chris Loper won all five matches. This gave him a first place finish in the tournament. Loper is also undefeated for the year with a 13-0 record.

This tournament followed a match between Charlevoix and St. Ignace Dec. 14 in St. Ignace.

Charlevoix lost this match 24-48.

However, several Charlevoix wrestlers walked away with wins.

Individuals results, by weight class, were:

• At 103 pounds, Hedricks won by forfeit.

• At 135 pounds, Daining pinned St. Ignace's Travis Alkine in 3 minutes, 34 seconds.

• At 145 pounds, Brett Probert pinned St. Ignace's Nick Adams in 1 minute, 38 seconds.

• At 152 pounds, Moore was pinned in 1 minute, 1 second.

• At 160 pounds, Lahr pinned St. Ignace's Alex Belonga in 3 minutes, 25 seconds.

The Rayders will be at home again for a meet at 6 p.m. Thursday against Mancelona, Cheboygan and Gaylord.

Charlevoix awarded Wharfside demolition grant

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

City Manager, Mike Weisner and City Planner, Garry Harsch were in Lansing last week working on a grant request to generate funds to cover the local share of the acquisition and demolition of the Wharfside.

The Michigan Department of Transportation approved the city's grant request and awarded the project $173,000, the local share.

"I think this opens up the opportunity to utilize that two block area. With the Wharfside in the middle it was hard to plan around," Weisner said.

The next stage in the downtown parks renovation project is pinpointing the precise direction the project will take. Weisner said that the community will be closely involved in this part of the project.

Weisner foresees the city appointing a planning individual who will sit down with the public to discuss the community's expectations of the project. In this process, the city hopes to narrow down whether Charlevoix residents hope to see public restrooms, a bandshell, festivals or just more area to walk in and enjoy the park.

Weisner said that from the public input, the city will define all such uses to decide how they will accomplish those wants.

"The plan is to develop precisely the plan for the shoreline, then to have the community comment on the dock and shore uses," Weisner said.

Lawsuit over school site has March court date

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

As builders continue stacking concrete block, framing the future site of Charlevoix High School, battle lines are being drawn in Charlevoix Circuit Court as a local environmental group continues to fight to stop the progress of the project.

In a mid-November scheduling conference 33rd Circuit Court Judge Richard Pajtas met with counsel for plaintiff, the Charlevoix Area Natural Resources Preservation Association and with counsel for defendants, Charlevoix Public Schools and Marion Township to decide how the lawsuit, will proceed.

During the conference Pajtas set a date to hear oral arguments. It was decided that at 9 a.m. on March 8, defense for the school, William J. Ewald of Braun, Kendrick, Finkbeiner, P.L.C. out of Bay City; defense for Marion Township, James G. Young, of Young, Graham & Elsenheimer, P.C. of Belaire; and attorneys for the plaintiff, James Olson, Karen Ferguson and Scott Howard of Olson, Noonan & Bzdok, P.C. of Traverse City will deliver their arguments in circuit court.

According to Superintendent of Charlevoix Public Schools, John Sturock the reason that this, the second lawsuit, is being heard in circuit court is because after a one-week restraining order, placed on the school project by Pajtas, expired, there was a follow-up hearing to decide whether the temporary order should be continued or not.

Pajtas said the restraining order would not be allowed beyond the initial one-week period and that the case would not be heard at this time in the circuit court because it was premature.

The environmental group responded by taking their request for a long-term restraining order to the Michigan Court of Appeals in Lansing.

The appellate court also ruled that there was no basis upon which to continue the restraining order because the case had not yet been heard at the circuit court level. They then remanded the case back to the circuit court and this suit will be heard by Pajtas on March 8.

In the meantime, all parties involved in the case will gather exhibits, maps, documents and tape transcripts from meetings that took place at the Marion Township hall in an effort to prevail.

Sturock said that if the environmental group was to prevail in circuit court, the building would not have to be removed from the site but that the school would have to pay sanctions to the group.

Sturock said that if assuming by mid-summer Pajtas renders a ruling in support of the school the case will go back to the appellate court and then they will have to hear the case because the plaintiff has exhausted their complaint at the circuit court level.

However, this will not be a swift process. Sturock said that it could take one to one-and-a-half years for the case to get on the appellate docket.

"The building may be built and we will still be in litigation," he said.

There is also a third lawsuit pending against the school district that was brought on by individual citizens. This suit raises citizens concerns over the possible sewer extension out to the Marion Center Road site.

Sturock said that the school was served with the third suit and they had 28 days to respond. He said they did respond, but haven't heard anything since.

Montessori school acts out Thanksgiving feast

Becoming Pilgrims and their guests for a day is an annual learning experience as well as lots of fun at a local preschool.

Celebrating Thanksgiving by acting out the historical festival, the children at Charlevoix Children's House get to experience serving or being served by each other.

The children at the Montessori school prepare for the feast in advance by studying the Pilgrims' trip from Europe and their first year in America, as well as the native people the Pilgrims encountered. They also prepare their own costumes and some of the feast itself, especially focusing on the importance of corn in the lives of both the Indians and Pilgrims.

Preparation this year also included a visit from Yvonne Keshick, who presented many satchels and bags from her Odawa heritage.

Several of the children incorporated what they learned into their costumes by adding carrying bags.

The Montessori classroom allows the unique opportunity for children to learn some history without isolating it from their normal activities," said teacher Deb Hobbs. "We were able to incorporate preparation activities into the learning environment. For example, children made their own beaded jewelry for their costumes, and that activity will continue to be an available choice for the rest of the year, but it will become more elaborate and complex as their skills improve."

Hobbs added that because Montessori children are in multi-age classroom groups, every child has the opportunity to portray Indians (as three and four-year olds) and Pilgrims (as kindergartners) during their tenure at the school.

But the young "Pilgrims" and their "Indian" guests aren't consciously aware of how much they're learning from the experience. They just know, as one of the kindergarten Pilgrims put it, "It sure was fun and my belly got full of good food!"

Groups team up in bid to raise money for theater

In 1988, Charlevoix Elementary School teacher Elizabeth Hoffmann did a wonderful thing.

Having been intimately involved in the Charlevoix schools for 40 years, being a long-time Trustee on the Charlevoix Schools Enrichment Foundation Board, and an enthusiastic lover and supporter of the arts, Hoffmann decided it was time to seriously "get the ball rolling" in terms of a theater/auditorium. She made a very generous donation to the Charlevoix Schools Enrichment Foundation in the name of her late husband, Dr. Walter Hoffmann.

At Hoffmann's request, the gift was divided into two separate funds. One was an endowment fund which could grow and provide a source of revenue to help with the Foundation's goals of providing grant money to the teachers and administrators of the Charlevoix schools for programs that go above and beyond what the school district can provide. A Theater Fund was additionally established with the funds, which would also grow and be an incentive to the community to "get on the bandwagon," so that the long time dream of a theater could become reality.

The Charlevoix Schools Enrichment Foundation Board, and Hoffmann in particular, were thrilled to recently learn that the plans for a new high school included a six hundred seat theater/auditorium. CSEF is enthused with the possibility of utilizing the Theater Fund, which has grown significantly, to enhance the new theater.

The Rotary Club of Charlevoix, in a separate but equally community-minded move, recently launched "Reach for the Stars," a community wide fund-raising campaign to enhance the theater facilities to state-of-the-art, professional status.

Members of Rotary and CSEF have since had several meetings with members of the Charlevoix School Board and with Connie Ford of the Charlevoix High School Performing Arts program. Ford, who is well known in the community as a "miracle worker," has for many years transformed a high school gym floor into an off-Broadway stage and taken our young performers to every statewide competition.

The two organizations have now coordinated their "shopping lists" and combined their efforts to provide the Charlevoix area with the finest facility in Northern Michigan. The cooperative goals for the new theater include a state-of-the-art lighting system, sound system and curtain/rigging system. An innovative orchestra pit system and other theater enhancements are also being investigated.

Financial exploitation is now a criminal felony

Financial exploitation of vulnerable adults is now a crime.

The new law makes it a criminal felony for a person in a relationship of trust to obtain or attempt to obtain, through fraud, deceit or misrepresentation a vulnerable adult's money or property. The penalties for such activity can be as much as 10 years imprisonment or a fine up to $15,000 or three times the value of the money or property obtained.

Michigan law makes it mandatory for health care, social welfare, mental health, law enforcement and other human services providers to report their suspicions of vulnerable adult abuse, neglect or exploitation to Adult Protective Services.

However, anyone suspecting that a vulnerable adult has been abused, neglected or exploited may report his or her suspicions to the Adult Protective Services Unit of the local county Family Independence Agency. The identity of the person reporting is kept confidential and can only be disclosed with the consent of that person or by a court order.

If you believe an individual is in imminent danger or financial exploitation, contact your local law enforcement agency immediately.

A toll free number, staffed 24 hours a day, seven days a week, is available for persons wishing to report. That number is (800) 996-6228.

Whatever the correct facts, once the dock was completed the economy of Charlevoix and the Pine Lake (Lake Charlevoix) region began to blossom. The nondescript settlement soon became the premiere port of northwest lower Michigan.

The dock was originally constructed to serve solely as a refueling stop for the steamers that plied the Great Lakes from Chicago to Buffalo. The limitless oceans of timber that blanketed the state provided the resources.

lines netting shallow draught schools of fish, great shoals of which used to appear in the channel.

The date of this photograph could be as early as 1875.

(Photo donated to the Charlevoix Historical Society by Shirley Lusk. This and hundreds of pictures of the channel, piers, lighthouses and bridges may be seen from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. Tuesday, Wednesday, Friday and Saturday and from 1 p.m. to 9 p.m. on Thursdays at the Harsha House Museum, 103 State Street.)

What newspaper ???

1. Goes into more Charlevoix homes than any other newspaper?

2. Supports the community editorially?

3. Provides a forum for citizens to express their views?

4. Documents the history of the community?

5. Provides glimpses into our community's past each week?

6. Is the only newspaper devoted to the interests of the Charlevoix community?

7. Provides in-depth reporting of local issues?

8. Has served the community for over 110 years?

If you answered "Charlevoix Courier" to all eight questions you scored 100%. The Charlevoix Courier does all of these and is proud of its tradition of service to the community. We, at the Courier, know the importance of a community having its own newspaper and we will continue to serve the area.

Photograph shows one of the first Pine River docks

This is the only known photograph of the great Fox & Rose dock constructed from the mouth of the Pine River, angling to the northwest from where the current north pier begins.

Two historical sources conflict as to the date the dock was built.

The Charlevoix Sentinel told the idea was broached by pioneer settler John Dixon in March of 1865 when entrepreneur Hiram Rose sought refuge with him and his wife from a rugged cross-country trek through snow and lake slush. Rose agreed, and with his partner Amos Fox began work in the spring of 1866, completing the project that fall.

However, the Traverse Region history claims that Dixon contacted Rose in the summer of 1864, work was begun shortly, but a mammoth storm washed out 100 feet of it. Thus, the opening was delayed until early spring of 1865.

Whatever the correct facts, once the dock was completed the economy of Charlevoix and the Pine Lake (Lake Charlevoix) region began to blossom. The nondescript settlement soon became the premiere port of northwest lower Michigan.

The dock was originally constructed to serve solely as a refueling stop for the steamers that plied the Great Lakes from Chicago to Buffalo. The limitless oceans of timber that blanketed the state provided the resources.

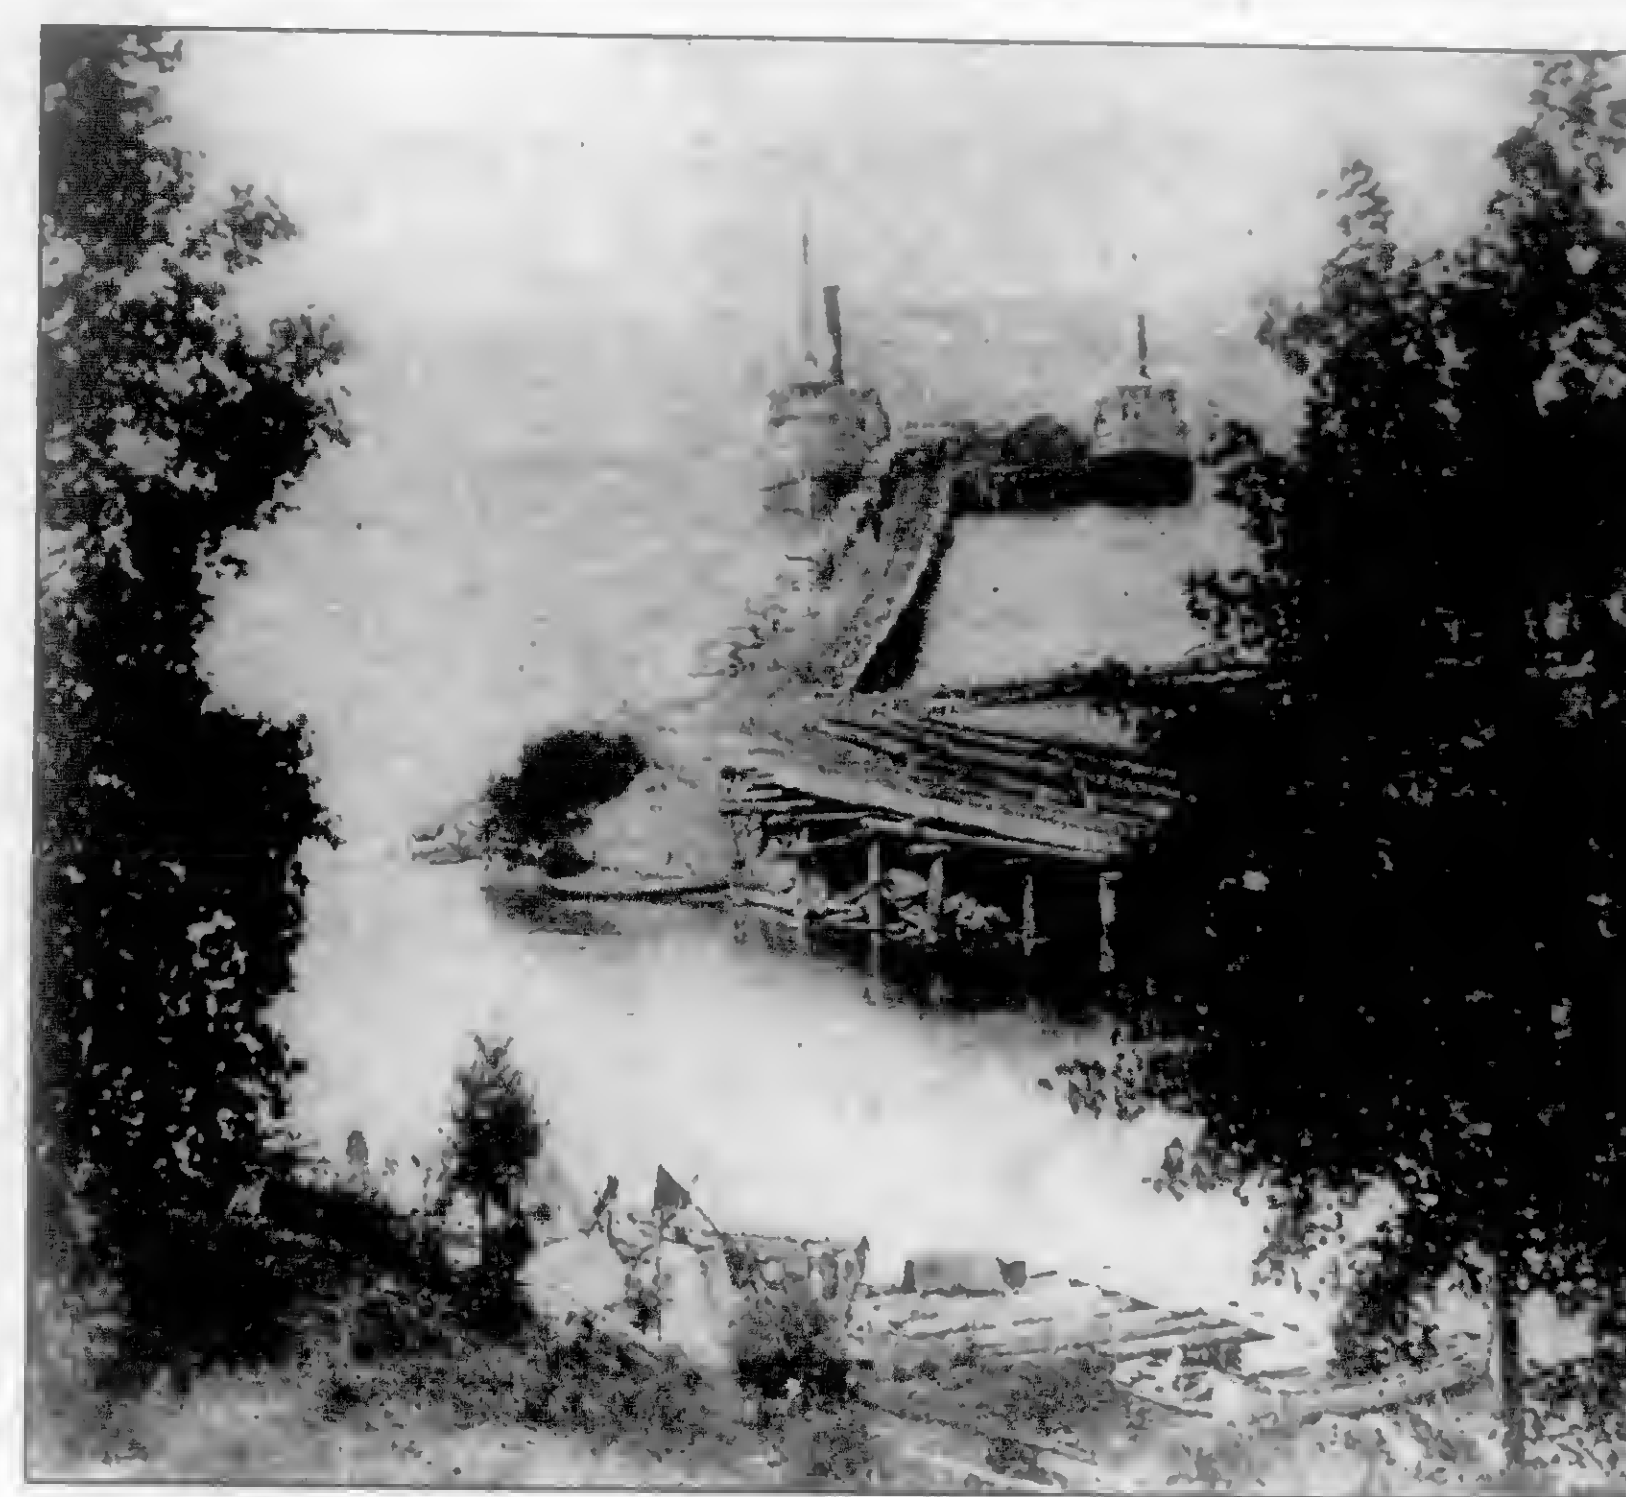

A sawmill soon opened here just to the east of the bridge (now the Edgewater,) and soon after that narrow gauge tracks were laid along the bluff (Pine River Lane) for horse-drawn wagons to transport the processed timber down to the dock (piles of it can be seen on the left edge, also the tracks.)

Millions of board feet went off this dock during its short existence, later along with grain, fish and manufactured items as the region's economy burgeoned. It also was a favored promenade spot for locals, resorters and a few captains who frequently called leaving behind a memory of legendary tyranny and profanity.

By 1882, when the channel had been deepened, the fore-runners of the current piers were completed and the larger ships began to enter Round Lake, the old dock had met its match. Now irrelevant, it was not taken out but allowed to succumb to the fury of Lake Michigan.

Slowly, the dock disappeared. Pilings and planks washed up on the north and south beaches year after year, well into the mid-twentieth century. But in its time, the dock was the beginning of the prosperity that Charlevoix would come to know.

A Native American teepee on a raft and two canoes on either side of the channel can be seen at the bottom of the picture. These were floating fishing structures used when the Indians roamed the shore-

High housing costs create problems for guard

HOUSING

However, Coast Guard Station Chief Jim Shull said that finding affordable housing is frustrating and that in most cases the allowance is not adequate. The inadequate allowance coupled with the almost non-existing affordable housing has forced many enlistees to live in Boyne City, Boyne Falls and even as far away as Cheboygan and Elk Rapids. Of the 16 guardsmen employed at the Coast Guard Station located by Depot Beach, one individual lives in Boyne City, one in Boyne Falls and four live within the station itself.

Shull said that in the past they have had up to six people living in the station because even with the allowance they couldn't find available housing so "they opted to stay on board." While some have decided to locate outside of Charlevoix others are required to live in-town and are using out-of-pocket funds to supplement the allowance in order to meet their Coast Guard mandated requirement.

Amid the beauty of snow-covered pine trees framing the sides of US-31, north of Burgess Road in Hayes Township, Dec. 21, a 26-year-old Charlevoix Township woman's life was ended and a 48-year-old Petoskey man was injured when their vehicles collided on the slick roads.

The accident occurred when Gabrielle Elizabeth LaCroix lost control of her 1994 Pontiac Grand Am and it slid sideways into the path of Dennis Eugene Roberts' 1994 Chevrolet Corsica. LaCroix died at the scene and Roberts was transported to the Charlevoix Area Hospital with multiple injuries.

According to Charlevoix County Sheriff George T. Lasater, LaCroix had attempted to pass a vehicle traveling in front of her, but saw another vehicle coming at her. She pulled her vehicle back into her lane and lost control of her vehicle due to the road conditions.

Lasater said LaCroix was not speeding when she lost control. "She did what she was supposed to do," he said.

Both drivers were alone in their vehicles. Both drivers were also using their seat belts and the airbags in their vehicles had deployed.

Roberts' injuries were reported as "non-life threatening."

LaCroix, also called "Gabby," was described by her parents as a dedicated, intelligent and capable young woman.

She was born Jan. 16, 1974, the daughter of Charlevoix residents Nancy and Dennis LaCroix. She is the youngest of the LaCroix family with two older brothers, Nield and Christian.

Denny said that Gabby and her brothers had a loving relationship, and that Gabby despite being the youngest of the three always kept those two in line.

City currently not in need of money for road repairs

BY JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

At a recent meeting of the Charlevoix County "local task force" it was decided that a big chunk of state and federal funding would be allocated to Charlevoix County roads, but the city of Charlevoix won't be seeing any of these improvements as none of the roads qualify.

City of Charlevoix officials were not present at last week's meeting because the city has no immediate need for the funding.

"We (the city of Charlevoix) don't have any roads on the system that qualify. The only road that qualified was Marion Center Road and we received funding for that last year," City Manager Mike Weisner said.

The city completed the Marion Center Road repair over this past summer, moving the Marion Center access point from M-66 to US-31. The project cost of $175,000 was funded using money from the same state and federal source that will be directing its efforts to Boyne City and East Jordan over the next four years.

The money is a return from funds generated from the federal and state gas tax.

Weisner said Charlevoix doesn't have any heavily traveled non-highway roads. M-66 and US-31 both see high traffic volumes but are maintained by the state.

Sheriff warns about unsafe ice conditions

Charlevoix County Sheriff George T. Lasater is cautioning ice fishermen and snowmobilers to be absolutely certain the ice is safe enough and thick enough before venturing out onto it.

Most smaller lakes are starting to become completely iced over. Please take every precaution before going onto the ice.

Sheriff Lasater recommends anyone going out onto ice should do the following:

- Wear a personal floatation device (PFD).
- Carry a flashlight or some other type of signaling device.
- Always notify family or friends of the time you are going out onto ice, the time you will be returning and the exact location of where you could be located in the event of an emergency.

Driving after drinking could cost you money or your life

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

As the New Year quickly approaches and many begin to make celebration plans, it is wise to ask if alcohol will be included in those plans. If the answer is yes, a sober driver should be planned too.

According to Charlevoix County District Court records, from Jan. 1, 2000 through Dec. 21, 191 people in Charlevoix County did not choose to put a sober driver behind the wheel and were punished accordingly.

Those intoxicated individuals arrested by city and county police were consequently charged with either impaired driving or an OUIL and spent some time in jail.

"Throughout my career as sheriff, I've had to knock on 81 doors to let the individuals inside know that someone in their house had been killed. Out of those 81, 50 were alcohol related."

George T. Lasater,
Charlevoix County Sheriff

According to Charlevoix City Police Chief Dennis Halverson, the difference between the two charges comes down to the violator's blood alcohol content.

Those whose blood alcohol content is .10 percent and above are charged with an OUIL — operating under the influence of liquor or drunk driving.

Those with a blood alcohol limit between .08 and .10 percent are also above the accepted limit and are operating a motor vehicle, are labeled an impaired driver.

However, city police officer Jim Schlappi said you can be under the legal limit that constitutes drunk driving, but if you are visibly impaired you can still be arrested and found guilty.

If involved in any of the three scenarios, one can expect to be prosecuted.

See OUIL, page 6

What equals the legal limit?

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

In an effort to determine just how much alcohol a person can consume before being legally intoxicated, the Charlevoix Courier conducted an experiment recently.

Using Staff Writer Julie Musilek, two volunteers from the community and Officer James Schlappi from the Charlevoix City Police Department, we set out to discover the answer to the question: How many drinks equals a blood alcohol level of .10?

Participants in this test were required to consume an alcoholic drink over a period of an hour and subject themselves to various sobriety tests and a breathalyzer test. To get good results on the breath tests, participants drank for the first 15 to 20 minutes of the hour-long test, took a 10 minute break, then drank for another 15 to 20 minutes.

This allowed the alcohol time to get into their bloodstreams.

In addition to Musilek — a 135-pound 22-year-old — participating in the test were: Josh Barnes, the 170-pound ex-mayor of Charlevoix and Shirley Gibson — a 115-pound employee of the Petoskey News-Review and a Charlevoix resident.

According to Officer Schlappi, the amount of alcohol it takes for a person to reach the legal limit varies depending on the person and a variety of variables, such as how much they had to eat or their weight.

To determine if a person is driving over the legal limit when an officer pulls their vehicle over, Schlappi said the officer first engages the person in conversation.

This conversation time gives the officer a chance to observe any signs of the effects of alcohol, such as slurred speech, flushed face, glazed over eyes or a smell of alcohol on the subject's breath. The person is also given various field sobriety tests to perform and is asked to blow into a preliminary breath test machine.

Schlappi added it is possible for a person to be under the legal limit, but still be arrested for drunk driving if they are visually impaired. He further added, alcohol is not limited to beverages and can include over-the-counter drugs such as NyQuil.

OPINIONS

A holiday thank you to those keeping us safe

The holidays are a time for family and friends, and to take part in their company, many people spend a little time on the roads traveling throughout the state.

We sit snuggled in our vehicles, listening to some music and enjoying the winter scene around us as we ride down the road. But, what we do not realize are the countless number of people watching over us and trying to make our trips safe.

From the snowplow driver scraping the roads clear of ice and snow in the wee hours of the morning to the police officer keeping an eye out for speeders or reckless drivers. And if we do become involved in an incident on the road, we have many tireless firefighters and emergency medical technicians running to our assistance, fighting to keep us safe and secure regardless of the weather.

These last few weeks in Charlevoix have made us aware of the efforts of these individuals.

With all the snow and ice we have been getting, those plow-truck drivers and police officers are trying to be extra vigilant in keeping those roads safe. But, still we have been seeing an increase in the number of accidents on area roads, thus the firemen and emergency medical technicians have been busy.

Who are these men and women rushing to our aid in times of need? They are just like you: wives, mothers, daughters, fathers, sons and husbands. They are your boss, your employee or even your coworker.

At a moment's notice they drop what they are doing, be it family or work, to rush to your side. Once there, they ruthlessly fight to help you and refuse to ever give up.

We see this same determination at every accident and every fire, no matter how dangerous the situation is. Added to this, these men and women must subject their minds to some of the saddest, most heart-wrenching scenes. They must fight that dark side of life every time they are called, but they do so with a never-ending determination.

This holiday season we at the Charlevoix Courier would like to thank all these men and women who work to keep us safe. Furthermore, we would like to thank their families for allowing the community the honor of having such heroes watch over us not only during the holiday season, but throughout the year.

Why we did the alcohol experiment on page 3

Julie Musilek
Staff writer

Every week I head over to the county building and record all of the court cases that were adjudicated over the past week and each week without fail there are at least two impaired or drunk driving offenses on the docket.

In some cases these are second or third offenses. What does it take? Thousands of dollars in penalties, jail time and probation certainly make for one expensive cocktail.

I simply don't see the point. These offenses are not only serious because of the steep penalties that they carry but the repercussions of an intoxicated driver's actions could be a fatality.

I equate getting behind the wheel intoxicated as pure selfishness. Not only is a drunk driver undermining the gift of life that they have been blessed with but also the gift of life bestowed upon your fellow drivers.

Each time the key turns over and you have had too much alcohol, you have basically just loaded a gun. As you drive down the road it is as though you are haphazardly waving that weapon into a crowd of innocent people, asking them who will be your next victim.

On page 3, in this edition of the paper you will read about an experiment recently conducted by us. While at first glance readers may see our experiment as humorous, I urge all to understand that the premise behind our efforts was not comedy.

We came together and had an interesting evening learning about alcohol and the police initiative.

My findings shocked me; after drinking two Michelob Light beers, I teetered on being over the legal limit. What was more interesting is the way alcohol affects me personally, would have cost me an evening in jail regardless of my blood alcohol content.

Officer Jim Schlappi said that my rosy cheeks and broken speech would have been enough evidence to show that I should not have been driving.

However, everyone is affected differently, and that was the bottom line of the experiment. Had we conducted the study using a bigger sample with people representing each weight range, sex and height we would have arrived at the same conclusion.

Alcohol is metabolized by different bodies differently. So next time you say to yourself, "I only had a few," remember I had two "watery" beers and two was two too many. The only way to make sure you are safe is to appoint a sober driver or cut the motorized vehicle out of the picture entirely and walk.

The key to our experiment was that when all was said and done each individual left with a pre-appointed sober driver who accompanied us home.

I urge all who plan to celebrate the new year by indulging in alcoholic beverages to appoint a sober driver or have a soda.

Letters to the editor

Use 911

Editor: The Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office would like to remind the citizens of Charlevoix that all calls for assistance need to be made to Central Dispatch (911).

There still is apprehension by many citizens to call 911 for a non-emergency request for police, fire and ambulance. Please, let us reassure you that you need not be concerned in regards to calling 911 for any request for service regardless of the nature of the request.

Most police, fire and ambulance stations are not manned 24 hours a day. All of those departments rely upon Central Dispatch (911) to dispatch them to all calls for assistance.

Central Dispatch (911) has the enhanced system for identification of all regular phone calls coming into 911. This system gives the citizen extra protection in providing the dispatcher with a more exact location of the caller. Many people are excited, confused or not from the area, and they are unable to give an exact location for their request.

If you have any kind of problem, whether it is an emergency or not, there is only one number for you to call and that is 911.

Chimney fire contained

The Charlevoix Fire Department responded to a chimney fire about 11 a.m. Dec. 20 at a residence located at 611 Sherman Street.

On their arrival, firefighters found smoke coming from the inside wall adjacent to the chimney. The wall was opened up and a small amount of water was used to put out the fire. The "Thermal Imaging Camera" was used to look for any hidden fire, as shown in the picture at left.

It appears that a chimney fire ignited the wood framing surrounding the thimble, where the stove pipe went through the wall.

Damage was at a minimum thanks to the prompt notification of the fire department. (Photo by Jeremy McBain)

If you don't choose to appoint a designated driver, here is how your vision of grandeur for this New Year celebration could end up.

Upon being pulled over when the officer believes intoxicants are involved he/she will administer approximately four field tests at the scene of the arrest, walking the line or touching the nose, among others. Then the violator will be administered a PBT — preliminary breath test.

Following the PBT the intoxicated individual will be given a second test to measure their blood alcohol content. This second blood test takes place at either the hospital or the jail.

After the tests have been completed the individual under arrest will be placed in the Charlevoix County Jail for a period of time dependent upon his/her blood alcohol level.

Once they are sobered up, bond of an amount dependent upon prior offenses has to be posted before someone is released. The bond is set to assure that the individual will appear in court.

When the case is adjudicated, the bond will either be returned or it can be put toward fines and costs associated with the sentence.

Charlevoix County Sheriff George T. Lasater said in the state of Michigan the average financial cost of such an incident runs between $3,000 and $5,000.

The night of the offense may not be the only evening a violator spends behind bars or confined to one place. A first offense OUIL carries a maximum sentence of 93 days in jail, 45 hours of community service work, a rehabilitation program and vehicle immobilization.

An individual found guilty of impaired driving is subject to the same maximum sentencing as those charged with an OUIL.

Sound like a rotten way to ring in the New Year? This is really one of the better case scenarios for a drunk driver.

According to Lasater some instances don't even end up with an uncomfortable evening in a cell. He has seen horrifying personal injury accidents and many deaths related to mixing alcohol and a vehicle.

"Throughout my career as sheriff I've had to knock on 81 doors to let the individuals inside know that someone in their house had been killed. Out of those 81, 50 were alcohol related," Lasater said.

"Besides there being the possibility of death and personal injury, the arrest itself is very expensive."

Are you over the legal limit?

TEST

While there are not many ways to avoid the effects of alcohol, Schlappi suggested if people know they are going to be drinking, they should eat a good meal, which could slow down the metabolism of the alcohol in their system.

If that fails, he said, "It is your last good meal, because the jail doesn't really serve good food."

Schlappi also said time is the only thing that lowers the alcohol content of your blood after drinking.

"Having a cup of coffee after drinking does nothing more than put caffeine in your system and something warm in your belly. Time is the only thing that sobers a person up," he said.

For our first test, participants had to just blow into a preliminary breath test machine (PBT) after consuming a large volume of alcohol. Schlappi said he had the group do this in order to bring them up in blood alcohol content very fast.

They were then asked if they felt they could drive or if they felt they were over the legal limit. The participants were not given the results of their tests until after the experiment was completed.

The results and drinks consumed after the first 15 minutes by the participants are as follows:

• Barnes — 5.5 ounces of Kahlua. 1 ounce of vodka. Before taking the test, Barnes said he felt he would pass. His PBT results were .02.

• Musilek — Two 12 ounce cans of beer. Before taking the test, Musilek said she did not think she would be over the legal limit. Her PBT results were .05.

• Gibson — 4.5 ounces of vodka, mixed with water. Before taking the test, Gibson said she did not think she would be over the legal limit. Her PBT results were .1, which is legally intoxicated.

According to Gibson, she is a casual drinker on the weekends and feels she has built up a tolerance to alcohol over the years.

Schlappi said it is not unusual for a person to build up a tolerance to the effects of alcoholic drinks, but they must remember their blood alcohol content is still the same as everyone else.

After the first test, participants drank for about 15 more minutes and were then told to stop drinking for about 10 minutes. After this period, they were given another PBT and were subjected to various sobriety tests.

The results were:
• Barnes — An additional 4.5 ounces of Kahlua. Before taking the test, Barnes said he felt he would be slightly over the legal limit. His PBT results were .06, still under the legal limit. However, according to Schlappi, Barnes' speech was noticeably slurred and he failed one of the sobriety tests.

• Musilek — A additional 12 ounce can of beer. Before taking the test, Musilek said she felt she would fail and would not drive in her condition. Her PBT results were .06. Musilek passed the other sobriety tests.

• Gibson — An additional 1.5 ounces of vodka. Gibson said she probably would fail the test. Her PBT results were .17. However, Gibson passed all of the other sobriety tests.

In order to get more conclusive results, Schlappi let the participants have one more drink and had them stop for 15 minutes. At the end of this period, he gave them another PBT.

These final PBT results were: Barnes — .06. Musilek — .06. Gibson — .13.

At the end of the experiment, Schlappi said he could tell Barnes' speech was slurred and noticed his face was a little flushed. He added Barnes did not pass one of the field sobriety tests.

"I would start having some serious doubts, even though he is not over the legal limit," Schlappi said.

As for Musilek, Schlappi said she seemed ok after the test, but her cheeks were a little flushed and her speech was broken.

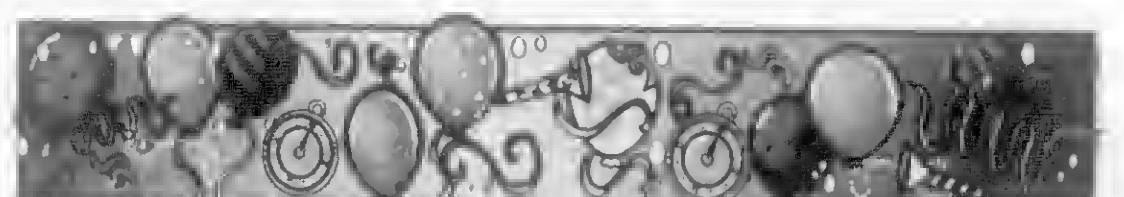

He added, Musilek and Barnes were similar in that their blood alcohol content was at a "leveling off point." This means they reached their high point and were just maintaining that level by slowing their drinking.

Schlappi had a much harder time with Gibson, whose PBT registered over the legal limit. While her numbers were high, Schlappi said it was difficult to see any physical signs of alcohol in her.

"If she is a regular drinker, she may have built up a tolerance. I might have let her go," he said.

BEACONS

By Rev. STEPHEN GUTHRIE
Community Reformed Church,
Charlevoix

This has been a remarkably joyous Christmas season in our household, for this is the first Christmas with our little girl.

We brought Jenna home from China in April and each day of her new life in America has been an adventure for her and a blessing for Ann and me. With Jenna toddling around, Christmas for us has been a scene right out of a Norman Rockwell illustration.

For many, though, the Christmas season can be painful and lonely, a time to suffer through rather than celebrate. The romanticized misrepresentation of Christmas offered by the media leaves one believing that everyone else in America is blessed to be part of a loving, intact family, gathered together to swig eggnog and croon carols in a tastefully decorated home "round a tree heaped knee deep in extravagant gifts certain to please.

For the widowed missing their mate, the divorced father missing his children, or the single mom struggling to raise the cash to put gifts under the tree while still paying the rent and heat bill, Christmas can be an anxious and discouraging time in which the difficulties of getting through the day seem even more burdensome than usual. For the homeless, the hungry and the weary of spirit, the coming of Christmas brings a fresh reminder of dashed dreams and love lost, of families fractured and hope eroded.

This need not be so. Christmas is bigger than our burden because with Christmas comes hope and promise for blessings richer than any wealth we could amass. If we come from a troubled family, Christmas offers the comfort of being part of the family of Christ.

Christmas heralds the coming of a savior whose peace and presence makes the pain bearable and fills the loneliness. This is the savior whose life and death served to make us right again with God, in this life and in the next. This is the savior who offers life abundant, not by giving us riches but by showing us that the things we think we have to have in order to be fulfilled are not wealth at all. True wealth lies in knowing this savior whose birth we have celebrated this Christmas season, for in Him is peace and hope and confidence that God knows our name and loves us dearly. May His blessing rest upon you this Holy season.

Obituaries

Orval J. Hicks

Orval J. Hicks, 67, of Charlevoix, died Dec. 22, 2000, at Northern Michigan Hospital in Petoskey.

A memorial service will be at 11 a.m., today, at the Community Reformed Church in Charlevoix.

The Rev. Larry Grooters will officiate.

Orval was born June 3, 1933, in Lansing, the son of Leon F. and Carrie Marie (Gillon) Hicks.

He graduated from Eastern High School in Lansing in 1952, and from Michigan State University School of Business in 1956.

Orval served with the U.S. Naval Reserve from 1952 to 1960.

On Aug. 22, 1959, he married the former Bonnie Ellafritz, and she preceded him in death on June 13, 1996.

Orval was employed by Michigan National Bank in Lansing for 16 years. In 1972 he moved to Charlevoix where he was employed by the Charlevoix County State Bank for 10 years. He retired in 1992 after 10 years with Northwestern State Bank, (now Huntington Bank), in Charlevoix.

Orval was a member of the Community Reformed Church of Charlevoix, the Michigan Association of Appraisers and the Lansing Kiwanis Club.

He is survived by his daughters, Jody and her husband Tim Pease of Lansing and Joy and her husband Mark White of Charlevoix; three grandchildren, Marcus White, III, Emily White and Cristina Hogarth; two brothers, Ellis and his wife Letha Hicks of Houghton Lake and Harold Hicks of Higgins Lake; one sister, Irene Tetloff of Kalamazoo.

Memorial contribution may be directed to the Community Reformed Church in Charlevoix. The family is being served by the Winchester Funeral Home in Charlevoix.

Gabrielle Elizabeth LaCroix

Gabrielle Elizabeth LaCroix, 26, lifetime resident of Charlevoix, died Dec. 21, 2000, in Charlevoix.

Mass of the Resurrection was Dec. 23 at St. Mary's Catholic Church in Charlevoix. The Rev. Thomas A. Neis officiated.

A burial was at St. Mary's Cemetery.

Gabrielle was born January 6, 1974, in Petoskey, the daughter of Dennis G. and Nancy L. (Montgomery) LaCroix.

Gabby attended Charlevoix High School, graduating in 1992. She continued her education at North Central Michigan College where she received an associate degree, and was working with the University of Washington via the Internet to receive a bachelor in business and marketing. Gabby worked for Arbor Associates Inc. in Petoskey for the last three years.

It would be important for Gabrielle to know that she's dearly loved. Because of her death, she has given special gifts to other people — that's the way she would have wanted it. She was so bright and knowledgeable about so many topics. She read everything she could get her hands on. If you played Trivial Pursuit with her she gave you no slack. She enjoyed a good lively discussion on any topic of the day. She had much more information than any of her partners in these discussions. She had insight about people. She knew her own mind even as a baby — she would flash her beautiful blue eyes and you knew what she meant and what she wanted. She was as loving as she was strong. She blessed our lives these few years and made us stronger and wiser. To hold her in your arms was holding love itself. We'll hold her in our hearts forever.

Survivors include her parents, Denny and Nancy of Charlevoix; two brothers, Niel B. and his wife Dawn of Richmond, Va. and Christian M. and his wife Tracey of Charlevoix; nephews David Driscoll, Colin LaCroix, Greyson Spegele; paternal grandparents, Henry and Bernice LaCroix of Kalkaska; many aunts, uncles and cousins.

Memorial contributions may be made in her name to Charlevoix Public School Libraries. Envelopes are available at the Winchester Funeral Home.

LaCroix remembered as intelligent and loving

ACCIDENT

"Her brothers both loved her and miss her dearly," he added.

Denny stressed that throughout her life Gabby's individuality shined. Whether it was at home, interacting with her family or in school where she pursued a high level of scholastic excellence Gabby brought her unique perspective and insight to the table.

"Gabrielle is very much her own person; she is very well read, she reads incessantly. She is a very intelligent young girl, very loving and open — very strong, very giving and extremely wise for her age," Denny said.

She graduated from Charlevoix

High School in 1992 and moved on to earn her Associates Degree from North Central Michigan College in Petoskey.

Her pursuit of education did not stop there. Most recently, she utilized the latest in technology to be employed with Arbor Associates, Inc. in Petoskey, while being a resident of Charlevoix and a University of Washington student.

Denny said that she enjoyed working on the computer and put her interest to work. Through the use of the Internet, she was working toward her bachelor's degree in business and marketing from the University of Washington.

While her mind was shared with the university staff and with her co-workers, Denny said Gabby's love and dedication was with her family. "Gabrielle loved to be with her family, especially at this time of year. We have a large family and being with them was one of her biggest priorities," Denny said.

Gabby and her family recently attended Madrigals at the Charlevoix Country Club. This is a LaCroix family tradition that reflects their family-wide interest in music. Nancy said that Gabby's music library is astounding.

Nancy also spoke fondly of afternoons when she and her daughter would place bird feed outside and then watch together as different bird species gathered around to snack. The mother daughter duo called this, "the Audubon bird count."

Denny foresees the strength of Gabby's personality as an asset to the afterlife as it was here on earth.

"She was an amazing girl, how wonderful it was to hold her. When our daughter goes to heaven they better be ready for her because she is going to straighten things out up there," he said.

ROADS

Road Commission manager, Pat Harmon explained the characteristics that a road must have to meet funding qualifications. He said the state has a map of roads that qualify are generally "major connector roads" that get people from one destination to another.

This year's budget allotted $65,000 to a new transit bus. This bus will be similar to "the pickle bus" that currently provides a means of transportation in Charlevoix.

In 2001 it was decided that $350,000 in funding would be granted to East Jordan for repairs to Main Street.

In 2002, 2003 and 2004 Boyne City's Thumb Lake Road running from C-48 to US-131 will see major improvements. Two million dollars in state and federal funding has been allocated to that project over the three year period.

Harmon explained the importance of the funding saying that without it there would be very little road construction and repair.

"I don't think the average person knows what road construction costs. We don't have funds in our budget to cover road construction," Harmon said.

He explained that the two million dollars being directed to Thumb Lake Road would wipe out two thirds of the County Road Commission's budget in and of itself.

Harmon said that one million dollars per year goes toward snow removal, while wages of road commission employees absorb another million. The last third is accounted for annually in $100,000 for liability insurance, equipment maintenance and road repair.

"There isn't a whole lot of money available for road construction. So, if it wasn't for the state and federal funding there would probably be very little road construction being done in the county," Harmon said.

Harmon was grateful for the funding while Weisner was grateful that the funding was there and also highlighted that it is not necessarily a negative that Charlevoix did not receive any of these funds.

"We are lucky to have two highways going through town. No, we can't get funding, but we don't need it," Weisner said.

AAA offers some tips on escaping a fire at home

Home can be a safe haven — or a deadly trap — in fire emergencies where smoke or security bars block exits.

Once a fire starts, a person has about three minutes to escape the overcoming effects of smoke, poisonous gases or superheated air. On such short notice, residents of a household need to be prepared and even rehearsed to act fast in this terrifying situation, AAA Michigan advises.

"When trapped, rational thinking and calm action are the keys to a safe escape," says Jerry Basch, AAA Michigan Community Safety Services manager, who offers the following guidelines. They are based on the importance of preparing for fire emergencies with planning and practice.

- If smoke is present, crawl to the door and keep as close to the floor as possible. If necessary, hold your breath and close your eyes.

- Feel the door with the back of your hand. Before opening a cool door, face away, brace and open it slowly to escape.

- If it is hot, do not open it. If there is heat and smoke, seal off cracks around doors and vents with cloth or rugs.

- Signal for help by hanging a sheet or other light-colored article on the window ledge. If the window has security bars, weave the sheet through the bars. Make sure the door is closed before opening the window.

"To avoid being locked in by a security door, plan ahead by placing a key at arms length from the door so that you can get it quickly," Basch advises. "Put the key safely on an object near the floor because if you are caught in smoke, you'll need to crawl as close to the floor as possible because smoke rises."

Last year, 143 fatal fires occurred in Michigan homes. Moreover, 44 children under age 10 died due to fire, representing 18.3 percent of all fire deaths — the most for any age group. Because of their vulnerability, adults should emphasize to children the danger of trying to hide from a fire. Review and practice emergency plans with youngsters regularly. Plans should include a safe meeting place outside for the family.

Smoke detectors are your best protection in a home fire. Install them on every level of your home and especially outside every sleeping area. Test smoke detectors monthly by pushing their test buttons and install new batteries twice a year when you change your clocks for daylight savings time.

"Tragically, last year 77 percent of fatal home fires in Michigan occurred in homes without detectors or with ones that failed," says Basch.

Volleyball team loses against Harbor Springs

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

The Charlevoix High School varsity volleyball team lost against Harbor Springs Dec. 18 at home, 9-15 and 1-15.

According to Coach Carolyn Loper, the team should have won the first game, if it wasn't for a comeback drive by Harbor Springs. This drive heartened Charlevoix and they lost momentum.

"They played their hearts out," Loper said.

While they may have lost, Loper said she is very happy with the way the team is playing.

"They are playing with a lot more confidence than they did last year. They are playing as if they know what to do," Loper said. "The only thing I need to do is get a win under their belts."

While the team has a great amount of skill on the court, the problem is: the team needs an attitude change, Loper said. "When they discover (what it is like to win), I think their skills will jump even higher," she said.

Jenny Miller was named the best overall player of the meet. Amber Parsons and Kelly Dreyer were the top servers.

According to Loper, Miller had really good games in both the front and back. She added Kate Madison also did a great job in the back row.

The team will be facing East Jordan on Jan. 4 in East Jordan.

Since the school is closed for winter break and this game is right after break, Loper said this creates some problems in getting the Rayders ready with some of the team out of town on vacation.

Zonta Club accepting applications for award

The Charlevoix Area Zonta Club is currently accepting applications for its annual Young Women in Public Affairs award, which awards $500 to an outstanding young woman living in Charlevoix County and currently enrolled in school.

Applications are available at the counselor's office at all Charlevoix County high schools or may be obtained by calling Maura A. Snabes at 547-9969.

The deadline for receiving applications is Feb. 1, 2001. They can be turned in by mailing them to: Charlevoix Area Zonta Club, c/o Maura A. Snabes, P.O. Box 175, Charlevoix, MI 49720.

The winner will be announced at the Zonta meeting in February.

The recipient of the local award will also have her application forwarded to the district, which awards an additional $500 to the district winner.

Sarah E. Jones from Charlevoix High School was named the winner of last year's award.

The Zonta Young Women in Public Affairs Award competition is designed to encourage women to pursue decision-making positions in their communities in order to impact the policies that affect the lives of women locally and throughout the world.

Applicants are asked to reflect on their lives, their commitment to the communities in which they live and the role models that have inspired them to become involved in the community or in a specific prospective career.

The program looks to the young women of today who will be the leaders of tomorrow.

Zonta is a worldwide service organization of executives in business and the professions working together to advance the status of women.

Middle school students collect for the needy

The Charlevoix Middle School annual food drive collected 13,678 dry food items and $10,525 in money this year.

The drive started Nov. 29 and ended Dec. 19.

Each seminar class at the school brainstormed various ways to creatively raise money. Some classes did raffles, others sold candy-cane grams, some guessed the number of jelly beans in a jar and some even had a bake sale.

Charlevoix Pop Warner Football would like to thank all of its sponsors for helping make their inaugural season a success. The program had 71 football players, eight cheerleaders and 14 coaches. We had three teams that were very competitive in a league that included 58 other teams. One of the teams even made the playoff season. While we only had one home game this season, we are expecting at least two home games next season.

Coast Guard given award for success over summer

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

The Commandant of the Coast Guard recently awarded its Charlevoix station the Coast Guard Meritorious Unit Commendation for their ability to coordinate and successfully complete multiple tasks.

"For meritorious service during the period 29 June to 24 July 2000 in the prosecution of search and rescue missions, patrolling two major multi-day events, participating in an emergency services drill, and the hosting of Station Charlevoix's Centennial," the textual account of the award stated.

The award recognized the local station's performance during their busiest season — summer.

The "two major multi-day events" the Coast Guard patrolled were the Traverse City Cherry Festival and Charlevoix's Venetian Festival.

The local unit was in Traverse City for Cherry Festival's Blue Angels Air Show. During the Cherry Festival the Coast Guard ran "boating while intoxicated awareness clinics" called "It's just not worth it."

The local unit also patrolled locally, monitoring the happenings on Lake Charlevoix. This year while cruising local waters during Venetian Festival the Charlevoix unit bore the title of "Incident Commander," on duty for both nights of fireworks.

Aside from their efforts in supporting the safety of these festivals, the Coast Guard station was also responsible for 36 search and rescue missions. The award pinpointed two search and rescue incidents the local Coast Guard was involved in, deeming them noteworthy.

The local station was called to duty back in June when a kayak turned up empty in East Grand Traverse Bay. After searching for the man the boat crew found him 4.5 miles from his overturned kayak. They were able to safely pull the man out of the water.

They were also involved in a second evening search and rescue mission off of Fisherman's Island. After the annual Mackinac Race, a sailboat named "The Jonathan Swift" out of Chicago lost its steering while making its way home.

Shull said that the sailboat passengers aired a distress call saying that they were concerned because the boat was drifting toward the rocks, they were seasick from the recorded six foot swells and they were cold from the cheek-chafing 20 knot winds.

Even in the heavy weather the Coast Guard arrived on the scene and towed the sailboat in.

In commemoration of the Coast Guard's long, successful history in Charlevoix, the unit also organized a community Centennial Celebration that involved displays and numerous demonstrations.

"All of those opportunities, events and situations required all kinds of coordination and were a lot of work for everybody," Coast Guard Station Chief Jim Shull said.

These achievements of the local Coast Guard did not go unrecognized — they were commended for their reflection of the level of excellence the Coast Guard prides itself on.

"The superb performance and devotion to duty demonstrated by the crew of Station Charlevoix are in keeping with the highest traditions of the United States Coast Guard," the award stated.

Various local groups awarded Foundation grants

A host of local nonprofit organizations received some good news to help them ring in the new year: The Charlevoix County Community Foundation recently announced grants totaling $80,805 to support projects benefiting residents of the area.

The new awards culminate an active year of grant-making for the Community Foundation, which saw its assets grow to more than $7 million and its grant-making total to $442,000 this year — more than $2.3 million in its eight-year history.

Grant-making dollars come from income earned on the community foundation's permanent endowment — made up of donations from individuals, families and businesses in the Charlevoix County area. Since only part of the investment income is used to make grants, the foundation's endowment continues to grow over time and benefit the area for generations to come.

Some of the local programs chosen for Community Foundation assistance and the amount of their grants are:

$1,000 from the John and Laurene Adams Fund:

Beaver Island Rural Health Center $1,000 to provide transportation costs for the Beaver Island Housing Committee while they explore a supportive housing initiative.

$1,600 from the Beaver Island Enrichment Fund:

Beaver Island Rural Health Center $400 to provide educational and recreational activities for senior citizens.

Beaver Island Rural Health Center $200 to provide transportation costs for the Beaver Island Housing Committee while they explore a supportive housing initiative.

$9,540 from the Charlevoix County Community Fund:

Charlevoix Senior Center $540 to support the luncheon meetings of the Aktion Club, a community service club for mentally challenged individuals.

Northwest Michigan Habitat for Humanity $4,000 to contribute to the "Fund for Land" to purchase a parcel of land in Charlevoix County.

Planned Parenthood Northern Michigan $2,000 to develop a donor relations and asset development program.

$10,805 from the Healthy Youth and Seniors Fund:

Beaver Island Rural Health Center $480 to provide transportation costs for the Beaver Island Housing Committee while they explore a supportive housing initiative.

$500 from the Father Bill McKeon Fund:

Chip Counseling Center $500 to provide substance abuse education to Beaver Island Lighthouse Alternative School.

$275 from the Northern Michigan Substance Abuse Services Fund:

Northwest Michigan Community Health Agency $275 to provide smoking cessation classes to two alternative schools in Charlevoix County.

CHIP Counseling Center $1,100 to provide substance abuse prevention education to Beaver Island Lighthouse Alternative School.

Northern Michigan Community

Mental Health $5,000 to support the "From Decision to Action" program; $1,125 to support the North Bays Crisis Response Team, a group of volunteers that provide debriefing support for survivors following a trauma.

Northwest Michigan Community Health Agency $2,250 to provide smoking cessation classes to two alternative schools in Charlevoix County.

The Community Foundation will accept and review grant requests again in the spring. Deadline for application is April 1.

Grant-seekers are encouraged to call the foundation office to discuss their projects and get additional information at (231) 536-2440 or write the foundation at P.O. Box 718 East Jordan, MI 49727.

Historical society looking for Lincoln's couch

The Charlevoix Historical Society recently discovered an undated news clipping that told the story of Abraham Lincoln's couch which was once in the American Legion hall.

This green plush and wood furnishing was placed by the railroad company aboard the train Lincoln used during his campaign trips between Springfield and Chicago in his early political career. He often rested and slept on it between campaign stops.

When the car was dismantled years later, the railroad superintendent who knew its history asked for it and later brought it to Charlevoix when he bought a cottage in the Belvedere resort in 1901. He sold this cottage in 1929 and the new owner, not wanting it for his new decor, donated it to the American Legion with a letter verifying its authenticity.

It remained in use as a settee in the hall while even young members of the Legion were unaware of its history.

Then it disappeared. The Charlevoix Historical Society would like to find out, if possible, what happened to this important artifact, so that the current owner or owners might become aware of its historical value.

If anyone has any information regarding the fate of this couch, please call 547-0373.

Bingo players donate

Chamberlain one of 40 from US given award

Rebecca Chamberlain, a 1999 graduate of Wheaton College and a resident of Charlevoix, was named a British Marshall Scholar this week, becoming the first student from the national liberal arts college in Norton, Mass., to win the prestigious award.

She is the daughter of Connie Chamberlain of Redford and Sherman Chamberlain of Charlevoix. Chamberlain is a 1995 graduate of Charlevoix High School.

Chamberlain, an international relations major at Wheaton, is one of only 40 students from U.S. universities and colleges chosen for the award this year, and one of 10 from New England colleges and universities.

Chamberlain received the news of her award at 2 a.m. local time in Osijek, Croatia, where she is completing a one-year master's program degree in theology at Evangeoski Teoloski Fakultet as a Rotary Academic-Year Ambassadorial Scholar.
